HON. FRANK OLIVER WILL NOT TELL WHERE MONEY CAME FROM ; AN EVASION

He Declares That It Is Enough For Committee to Find Whether or Not There Is a Connection Between Sums and the Deals Mentioned—Laurier's Motion For a Partial Enquiry Prevails—Two Amendments.

Ottawa, May 4.—Just as anticipated, there will be no inquiry into the charges laid by Dan McGillicuddy, former editor of The Calgary News, against Hon. Frank Oliver. Instead of dealing with the main issue the Government has decided that an alleged insinuation contained in an Ottawa despatch to The Toronto World will be on the ground work of the inquiry by a committee to be appointed, and that Mr. Oliver will show there is no connection between deposits to his account in an Edmonton bank and the granting to the Canadian Northern the right to choose six hundred acres of the rich lands of Saskatchewan instead of the swamp lands of Manitoba.

The Government voted down yesterday the proposal of Mr. Borden that the inquiry should be into the charge named by the Premier himself last week in the House, and the proposal of Mr. Lennox that there should be a royal commission.

R. L. Borden said that the motion, while different in form was to the same effect as the one to which he took exception on Tuesday. He remarked that this was very much of a family quarrel between the supporters of the Prime Minister.

In the opinion of Mr. Borden the matter to be inquired into was whether the money came from a tainted or untainted source. "Let us," he said, "be satisfied that Mr. Oliver is free from any suspicion of unworthy motives, but let it be an investigation that will satisfy Parliament and the country."

The matter could be settled by a committee in five minutes, if the Minister would state that the money was from private sources.

Mr. Borden then moved the following amendment, and in doing so said that his object was to make the scope of the enquiry just as wide as the Premier had made it when he spoke, "That a special committee of five members be appointed to enquire into and investigate the charges and allegations set forth and referred to in the statement of the Prime Minister, made in this House on Friday, April 21 last, and the charges and allegations set forth and referred to in the statements of Hon. Mr. Oliver, Minister of the Interior, and of the Prime Minister, made in this House on Tuesday, May 2, inst."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in refusing to accept the amendment, said that Mr. Borden's proposal would not be fair to Mr. Oliver.

Mr. Borden had said there was a suspicion as to the source of the funds placed in the bank, but he would ask the House to judge whether it would be just to investigate the matter in the way he proposed. He admitted that it might possibly come from one hundred legitimate sources, and yet would enquire into the matter in the manner proposed. What Mr. Borden desired was authority to fix evidence. He would ask Mr. Oliver to prove a negative. He would ask the Minister of Justice to go into the box and prove his own innocence in the face of the well-known rule that a man was innocent until it was proved that he was guilty.

Hon. Mr. Foster said there was no authority for the statement that The Toronto World had made an insinuation. Two statements had been placed side by side, but that did not constitute a direct allegation. The charge which the Premier asked the House to investigate was therefore one which Mr. Oliver had framed himself. The only charge in which the country was really interested was that made by Mr. McGillicuddy to the Premier, in which he stated that Mr. Oliver was a boodler and a grafter. The charge had been made by a friend and a

ADJOURN MAY 20 ?

Latest Report of Deadlock at Ottawa

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, May 4.—Indications to-day are that Parliament will adjourn on May 20, and reassemble after the Middle of August, when the Premier will be back from England. In case of adjournment, a reciprocity vote would not be reached until fall.

LAURIER TO GO AFTER ALL

Will Attend Coronation and the Conference.

Pressure Exerted Made Him End His Bluff.

Ottawa, May 4.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has changed his mind! Yesterday morning, when he called to see Mr. Borden in the latter's office, he made the definite suggestion that he would go to the Imperial Conference and that the House would adjourn until July 15.

After that the reciprocity proposals were to be pressed and the Premier even wanted to exact a promies that the matter would be disposed of before the Duke of Connaught came in September. After receiving this proposal, Mr. Borden called a caucus of the Opposition members for 10 o'clock this morning.

Last night, however, Sir Wilfrid asked Mr. Borden to come to his room and there the whole matter was gone over again. The Premier was not so certain that it would be wise to adjourn, and it is now a toss-up whether this will be done or Parliament be left in the leadership of Mr. Fielding, to go on with the debate on the general question of reciprocity, in the meantime dealing with the other Government measures with which the order paper is blocked.

The situation to-day, therefore, is somewhat different from that at noon yesterday. Then Sir Wilfrid was fully of the opinion that adjournment would be necessary. As a result of his interview with the Opposition leader last night, it is now almost certain that the answer he will give to Mr. Borden this afternoon is that Parliament will continue to sit and transact other business such as the revision of the Bank Act, the railway policy of Mr. Graham, Mr. Fisher's copyright bill and the voting of supply.

Boy Saved Train.

Kingston, May 4.—A twelve-year-old lad named Sey, prevented a wreck on the Kingston & Pembroke Railway, four miles south of Sharbot Lake. He found five big boulders on the track, which had fallen down an embankment, walked into Sharbot Lake, notified the company, and thus saved the express from running into them.

MR. TAFT SAYS U.S. DOESN'T WANT ANY MORE TERRITORY

President, In Speech at Peace Conference In Baltimore, Declares That United States Is Trying Hard to Do Its Share For World's Good and Does Not Deserve the Suspicion Which Is Cast Upon Its Motives.

Baltimore, Md., May 4.—President Taft, in his speech at the opening of the third national peace conference here yesterday, declared that the United States would keep hands off and not seek to extend its domain or to acquire foreign territory. The President made no mention specifically of Mexico, but to those who heard him, it was evident that the troubled situation there and the suspicion in the South American republics as to the intention of this nation, in regard to its southern neighbors, had inspired him. The President had been speaking of the recurrence of internal disturbances in countries not so well able as the United States to maintain order and peace, and had said that it was incumbent upon the great nations of "this hemisphere to exercise their kindly and peaceful influences as much as possible."

One of the difficulties that the United States finds is the natural suspicion that the countries engaged have of the motives which the U. S. has in tendering its good offices," continued the President. "Asseveration of good faith helps but little where the suspicion is real, and yet I like to avail myself of an opportunity in such presence as this to assert that there is not in the whole length and breadth of the United States among its people any desire for territorial aggrandizement, and that its people, as a whole, will not permit its Government, if it would, to take any step in respect to foreign peoples, looking to a forcible extension of our political power.

"We have had wars and we know what they are. We know what responsibilities they entail, the burdens and losses and horrors, and we would have none of them. We have a magnificent domain of our own in which we are attempting to work out and show to the world success in popular government, and we need no more territory in which to show this. But we have attained great prosperity and great power. We have become a powerful member of the community of nations in which we live, and there is, therefore, thrown upon us necessarily, a care and responsibility for the peace of the world in our neighborhood, and a burden of helping those nations that cannot help themselves, if we may do that peacefully and effectively.

"An arbitration treaty between two great nations of the world," said the President, "would be a very important step in securing the peace of the world. I don't claim any patent for a new discovery in that suggestion, because I have no doubt that it has often been made before. If such an arbitration treaty can be concluded, I have no doubt that an important step will have been taken, but it will not bring an end of war. It is a step only; and we must not defeat our purposes by enlarging the expectation of the world as to what is to happen and by then disappointing it. I think we are likely to make more progress if we express our hope with moderation and realize the difficulties that are to be overcome, than if we proclaim that we have opened the gate to eternal peace with one key and within one year."

The President was particularly interested in a speech by Rev. Dr. J. A. Macdonald, editor of The Toronto Globe, a warm advocate of reciprocity. "If that arbitration treaty between your country and England is ratified," said Dr. Macdonald, "the name of William Howard Taft will be remembered in world history so long as man lives in peace.

"Above all other nations Canada has the greatest stake in the proposed treaty; she has the most to gain by peace; the most to lose by war.

"Canada desires the pact, not for herself alone, but for the sake of the whole world. The time to do it is at hand. The hour is trembling, ready to strike; the tide is swelling to the flood and if I ever had the right to speak for my country or for the Empire to which I belong, it is now, and I ask that the Parliament of Great Britain and the Congress of the United States join to insure the peace of the whole world."

27 YEAR OLD CASE ENDED

Judgment Given in Montreal After Long Wait.

Montreal, May 4.—Judgment was given yesterday in a case which has already been decided by the Privy Council and has been twenty-seven years before the courts.

In 1884 Andrew Rough bought a piece of land through the Eastern Townships Bank, but refused to take it because he could not get a clear title to it. The bank sued him and won. The Privy Council decided in his favor seven years ago. Next the lawyers for the bank found a flaw in the proceedings and appealed to the Superior Court. The case was recalled and judgment given in favor of the bank. It will go again to the Privy Council.

Clifford Sifton's Fall.

Ottawa, May 4.—Hon. Clifford Sifton, at the Horse Show yesterday morning, when leaping over hurdles, fell off his horse, but managed to save himself by holding to the reins.

Officials rushed up fearing he was hurt, but he intimated that he was all right, and showed this to be the case by immediately, amid applause, clearing three hurdles in succession.

SHEFFIELD CHOIR'S MONEY TROUBLES

St. Paul, May 3.—The box office receipts of the concerts given by the Sheffield Choir were attacked Monday in a suit brought by Louis W. Gay, manager of the United States tour of the choir, against Dr. Charles Harriss, of Ottawa, Ont., the financial backer and general manager. It is said that no more concerts will be given, and that the choir will return to England.

By this attachment or "garnishment" suit the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra, which, through its agents handles the receipts of the St. Paul concerts, is forbidden to pay over to the choir any share of the proceeds from the sale of tickets. Mr. Gay admits in his complaint that his salary as American manager and booking agent has been paid to date, but alleges that a certain percentage of the proceeds was guaranteed him, and that a reasonable and fair amount under that agreement is $4,000, or 10 per cent. of the entire gross receipts, which, he says, have amounted to about $40,000.

St. Catharines, May 4.—The residence of David Sewell at Decew's Falls was completely destroyed by fire last night. The loss will be twenty-five hundred dollars.

Will Work Interchangeably.

London, May 4.—In a statement issued last night, Theo. N. Vail, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and the Western Union Telegraph Co., says that as understanding has been reached between the Western Union and the Anglo-American Companies by which the cables of the two companies will be worked interchangeably, but that the details of the arrangement will not be made public until they have been submitted to the shareholders for ratification. He declares that the ownership of the Anglo-American Co. will not be affected.

The conditions of the agreement, adds Mr. Vail, provide that the British Postmaster-General will practically control the rates charged by the company, thereby assuring that they will be reasonable, and that the post-office has under consideration a scheme for deferred service at modified rates.

Three Years For Earngey.

Toronto, May 4.—Three years in the Kingston penitentiary was the punishment meted out to Wm. G. Earngey, K.C., by Judge Denton in county judge's criminal court yesterday, when the lawyer pleaded guilty to forging the name of Kate Chesher to a check for $1,000, uttering a forged mortgage in favor of Thomas Dallimore and theft of the $1,000 involved.

ANTI-RECIPROCITY MEETING WILL BE HELD IN PETERBORO'

Arrangements Being Made for Big Gathering—Speakers From Toronto

Ernest H. Scammell, representing the Canadian National League, of Toronto, an anti-reciprocity organization, is in the city, arranging for a big anti-reciprocity meeting to be held in Peterborough within two or three weeks.

The league is a non-political organization, and is preparing a campaign that will extend from Ontario to the prairie provinces, educative in every respect as to the evils in store for reciprocity.

It is intended to present the pact on three lines, the question of imperial interest, Canadian fiscal economy, and disadvantages to the country commercially. A pamphlet with the utterances of leading Americans on the subject of reciprocity is being prepared, and 100,000 will be sent to the west.

The meeting to be held in Peterborough will be non-political, to be addressed by Toronto speakers, and a committee of both Liberals and Conservatives will be formed.

THE OLIVER AFFAIR

The Oliver affair has a look that does not warrant one in accepting Mr. Oliver's restricted denial of the charges as complete or satisfactory. Mr. Oliver is charged by Dan McGillicuddy with having accepted $50,000 and later $19,000 presumably from the C.N.R. for getting some privileges in regard to Saskatchewan land for the railway. In presenting an explanation to the house Mr. Oliver did not say that he had not received these sums of money, although he did deny that they came from this particular railway. He said that the land business was done through public interest, and there was no connection between the money payment and the land grant.

The inquiry into the charges will be referred to a committee of five, and all correspondence will be presented to the committee. This matter it is to be hoped, will not be carried out after the fashion of the Lantot affair, with a white-washing at the end. It is too serious. Mr. Oliver is a strong man in character. He has been known for years for rugged honesty; in fact, in the west it is his chief stock in trade as a politician. It would indeed be a sorry sight to find that there was some connection between the receipt of this money, which Mr. Oliver apparently does not deny, and the action on the land. It would convict the minister of the interior of political chicanery of which his friends cannot believe him guilty. But for the sake of the public interest, it is to be hoped that the information coming from the investigation will be thoroughly satisfactory in point of clearness as to where that money came from, and for what purpose.

The restrictions put on the investigation by Sir Wilfrid Laurier do not promise any too well for the thoroughness of the probing, but perhaps it would be well to suspend judgment on the matter until information is more definite.

COST OF MONROE DOCTRINE

General observations on what the attitude of the United States towards Mexico means in terms of regiments and battleships have not been lacking in the British and European press. For the most part they have indicated a tolerant satisfaction not untinged with a lively curiosity as to what was to come next, for it is the concensus of outside opinion that the Taft administration has signed and sealed an acknowledgment of responsibility which has hitherto been very carefully evaded, says the Montreal Star. In touching on this point, The Spectator says:

We want to make the American people understand that it is impossible to maintain the Monroe Doctrine and all of the gigantic possibilities that are involved both in regard to the maintenance of law and order in the South American republics and with regard to saying "Hands Off!" to Europe without an adequate military and naval preparation.

A very powerful navy may be able to do the work of saying "Hands off!" to Europe, but the duty of seeing that law and order are maintained must very largely depend upon an adequate military force. We say without hesitation that America does not possess that force and if she be wise she will either make provision for it or abandon the Monroe Doctrine.

The Monroe Doctrine has been for nearly a century the one proud and glittering diplomatic jewel which Uncle Sam could wear when he mingled with other countries diplomatically. It now appears that the jewel has never been paid for and that its price has gone up, year by year, and will continue to rise until the milennium. A standing army of eighty-thousand men, one-quarter of whom cannot be mobilized in six weeks in spite of the frantic efforts of the whole War Department is not much of a weapon with which to threaten a belligerent Latin American republic. There is some significance in the fact that the Transvaal, the Orange Free State and the dissaffected part of Cape Colony together only comprise an area about half that of Mexico, that the geographical and climatic conditions are not dissimilar, and that the population of Mexico is some fifteen times that of South Africa. And it took nearly 400,000 men to cope successfully with the South African trouble.

AN IMMEDIATE DUTY

The Toronto News says:—The most pressing duty resting upon the Canadian Parliament to-day is to take prompt action regarding Mr. Taft's utterance in New York last Thursday.

On that occasion the President spoke of his reciprocity agreement with Mr. Fielding as an attempt on the part of the United States to check the growing integrity of the British Empire.

This trade agreement, he said, was the republic's last chance to prevent Canada and the rest of the Empire being bound together by an Imperial commercial band, "reaching around the world from England and back to England again."

Could anything be bolder? Could the members of Parliament wish for any clearer declaration of American intentions than this from the very author of the Washington bargain?

Whatever some Liberal members may think themselves, they should not think at the fact that Mr. Taft's declaration is one with which the great mass of Canadians have no sympathy whatever. This the members will find when they go back to their constituencies for re-election.

Once the President's words become common property in this country they will prove the final death blow to reciprocity.

Parliament will accurately reflect popular opinion if it forthwith places its veto on Mr. Taft's deep laid scheme. Without further delay the Government should join the Opposition in denouncing the whole Washington arrangement, and in repudiating all complicity in Mr. Taft's design.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The congressmen at Ottawa are saying a good deal these days about annexation and the aim of President Taft in proposing even limited reciprocity. Where there is so much smoke there must be some fire, and it needs only the wind of partial success to fan it into a roaring blaze.

A resolution of censure on the Minister of Finance for granting the Farmers' Bank charter in spite of the evidence he had that it was being fraudulently obtained, was defeated by the government majority. What with the Oliver affair, the Farmers' Bank affair, the Lanctot affair, the government seems to be having a rather warm time keeping its friends from getting burned.

William Sharpe, the Conservative member for Lisgar, Man., a border constituency, held public meetings in his constituency in the Easter recess to find out what his constituents thought about reciprocity. He offered to resign if they did not approve of his opposition to the pact, but only four voted for his resignation. This practical expression of a unanimous opposition to reciprocity from western farmers is a sample of what may be expected all over the country by the time a general election rolls around.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has decided that he cannot hold out the bluff about not going to the imperial conference any longer, and going yesterday to the parliamentary room of Mr. Borden made a proposition. The premier has apparently decided that he cannot be allowed to be put in the position of refusing to go to the imperial conference for the sake of putting through a trade arrangement with the United States, and will let the reciprocity pact stand over until his imperial duties are disposed of. This is the only sane course open to him and certainly does not bear out the Liberal claim that the pact has been received with general acclaim all over the country.

Some Roman Catholics are said to be objecting to the deeding by the city to the Protestant Home of the Hilliard property, holding that they as rate payers of the city have some interest in that property, and it could not be given for that purpose. But the bill passed at the recent session of the Ontario Legislature provides the city with power to negotiate a deal with the Protestant Home board, one of the conditions being the provision of a site by the city on the consideration of the Home undertaking to do certain things. As it might be said that any city property may belong in part to the Roman Catholic rate-payers, such an objection would block the purposes of the act, which is distinct in providing equal treatment by the city for Roman Catholic indigents.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

THE COUNTRY BEHIND

Toronto News.

Already the evil political effects of Mr. Fielding's reciprocity agreement agreement are painfully evident. Sir Wilfrid Laurier places Washington before Westminster and his obligations to Mr. Taft before duty to the Empire.

He considers it more important to remain in Ottawa and force this pro-American legislation on an unwilling country than to attend the Imperial Conference and the coronation at a time when problems of vast portent to all the British Dominions are to be discussed and settled.

It is clear the Opposition and not the Government to-day represents public opinion in this country. Moreover, the people believe that Mr. Borden has made the Prime Minister a fair offer. He will consent to an adjournment of Parliament till later in the summer in order that Sir Wilfrid may go to London, or he will facilitate the same end by consenting to the reciprocity measure going over to another session.

Clearly Mr. Borden and not Sir Wilfrid Laurier is in the right before the country. The premier can attend to his imperial duties if he rates them above his obligations to continentalism.

THINK ABOUT IT.

By Scarum Fright.

It's nigh onto twenty years since I took that trip to Yanited States when cousin died down there, but there's one thing that I remember as though it was to-day.

I was a-drivin' along out to my cousin's place with his son, when we come to a big hill. Now I ain't particular struck on big hills in general, but on t'other side of this hill was a dandy village and you see when you got on of this hill the village kind of took you by surprise.

"Now," says I, "Indian River is at the bottom of a hill, or at least the post-office and station and things is; but you put Indian River beside of this place and it would look like a pork-sausage beside a roast turkey. What's the reason?" The reason is that Indian River has an aversion of paint.

All the houses in that other village were painted up with pretty colors and the barns were mostly painted. Now they tell me that red paint is cheap and that they put it on with a whitewash brush and have the whole barn looking nice and fresh in a few days' time. They say it keeps the barn from rotting, and I say it looks confoundedly nice and increases the value of the property.

Now if you want to see what paint looks like on a building, just take a look at the section foreman's house when you go down to the post-office. It brightens the place up considerably and is only cheap paint at that, and say, when I go to Peterborough on Saturday I'm going to get some paint and brighten up that old buggy that's out there in the shed. It can just as well look fresh and clean as dark and dirty and gloomy.

VIRGINIA OF THE AIR LANES

A Romance Of Flying

By HERBERT QUICK

Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Don't let's talk of that," said he. "I shan't even apologize. I'm glad I deceived you! Glad, do you hear? And now you're going back—Psyche—as my wife. Don't struggle and try to escape. Don't you love me? Don't you love me? Don't you love me?"

She was past the struggle now, and in the new print gown of the servant maid she lay in his arms, quite surrendered. The time passed much more rapidly for them than for Mr. Craighead. His voice grew hoarse, the rococo periods grew shorter, and at last he rapped on the door and called "Time!"

The audience had entered upon the phase of impatience characterized by stamping in unison.

"What do they want?" asked Virginia.

"Us," said Carson. "Let us go out."

"Out?" queried Virginia. "Out there?"

"Virginia," said Carson, "did I not say I was taking you away with me—now?"

"Oh!" gasped Virginia, shrinking back. "You don't mean for me to understand"—

"The minister is outside—to marry us—darling! Come!"

"Oh, Theodore!" she gasped.

The door opened. Craighead's voice came through in inquiry.

"All ready?" he asked loudly. "Then let the cortege move! After these nuptials we shall have the full music of the grand sweet song. Like Prince Agib of Gilbertian story—

"We will diligently play
On the zoetrope all day
And blow the loud pantechinicon all night!

"Forward, march!"

The wedding march from "Lohengrin" tinkled feelingly forth from the piano. The minister stood in the narrow cirque left open by the crowd. Craighead, like a new ducked usher, bowed grandly at the door to let them through. Theodore took Virginia's plump, print covered arm and whispered in her ear promises which instinct told him would break down the last resistance. The short service went on as remembered by the priest.

"Who gives this woman away?"

And who but Finley Shayne broke through the press to take her by the hand and respond heartily, "I do!"

And when the ring was called for who but the captain of the life saving crew, true to the traditions of the service, came forward and took it from his chain and saved them?

And when the minister asked, "Do you, Virginia, take this man to be your wedded husband?" and the dear old remainder of it who but Theodore Carson turned dizzy at the bride's pause before answering, and who but Virginia said sweetly and clearly, "I do?"

And as for Craighead, that worthy gentleman would have been in still higher feather had he known that within two weeks he was to succeed in persuading his adored Caroline to join him in a similar ceremony.

THE END.

Sir Arthur Sullivan's Reverses.

Twice in his career Sir Arthur Sullivan, after building up a small fortune, was placed in the same unenviable position as was Mark Twain when in 1895 his "rainy day" balance disappeared in the failure of a concern in which he was interested. And the famous composer met financial disaster with the same equanimity as did the author. By far the greater of the two financial disasters which overtook Sullivan happened in 1882, and the news reached him under very dramatic circumstances. In that year "Iolanthe" was produced at the Savoy, and as usual its composer conducted the first performance. On the day fixed for the production the bankruptcy was announced of the firm in whose keeping Sir Arthur had intrusted all his securities, and the news of the crash reached the composer just as he was setting out for the Savoy theater. "In a moment," says Mr. Lawrence, his biographer, "the result of the work of a lifetime and of economy had been swept away. From the monetary point of view he had to make a beginning all over again; but, unmoved by his ill fortune, he conducted the first performance of 'Iolanthe' that night."—London News.

PREAMBLE IS PASSED

Balfour Does Not Oppose Critical Part of Veto Bill.

The Measure Has Now Gone Through the Committee Stage With Very Little Amendment and Government Supporters Show Wild Enthusiasm—Unionist Amendments Are Mostly In Favor of Joint Sittings.

London, May 4.—The Parliament bill, known also as the veto bill, for the curtailment of the powers of the House of Lords, passed yesterday the committee stage in the House of Commons practically without amendment, amidst scenes of great enthusiasm.

The refusal of A. J. Balfour, leader of the Opposition, to vote against the preamble to the veto bill, removed any danger that might have been apprehended from the revolt of the Laborites against the preamble, and this portion of the measure, the consideration of which was regarded as the most critical test for the Government, proved easiest to carry. The Unionist opposition to the bill almost vanished. In place of hundreds of amendments which threatened to delay proceedings in the committee stage, only a few important ones, mainly in the direction of urging joint sittings, or a conference of the two Houses in cases of disagreement will be moved in the report stage of the bill, which is expected to occupy only two or three days next week.

The consideration of the preamble was the most critical stage of the discussion from the Government viewpoint, because of the diversity of opinion between the factions making up the coalition majority.

The Labor party is composed of single chamber men, who have repeatedly declared their intention of opposing any plan to reform the House of Lords.

Barnes moved that the preamble be eliminated. He said that he would rather have voted with the Government to further the progress of the measure as a whole, but the Laborites had to part company with the Government at this point.

A. J. Balfour, leader of the Opposition, opposed the preamble on the ground that it would lead to the constitution of a wholly and directly representative second chamber. If the two chambers drew their authority from the electors, they would claim and possess equal authority, and he did not wish co-equal bodies. The second chamber, he said, should be empowered in case of controversy between the two Houses, to refer the question to the electorate.

After the application of closure and the rejection of another amendment without division, Mr. Balfour said that he regarded the preamble as "indefinite and illusory," but he wished to see the Government carry it out. He hated some of it, but liked another part of it, and therefore would not vote against it.

Amid loud Ministerial cheers, the preamble was then agreed to without division. On motion that the bill as amended be reported, division was challenged and the motion was carried 265 to 147. The House then adjourned, the Government supporters giving vent to the wildest enthusiasm.

OLIVER WILL NOT TELL

former beneficiary of the Government.

Mr. Foster asked the Premier to say if the committee of enquiry would be allowed to examine the evidence of McGillicuddy. The Premier made no comment, and Mr. Foster said he would take it that he refused.

Hon. Frank Oliver began his statement with the remark that the question of interest to the House and the country was the question as to how those who were charged with public responsibilities discharged those responsibilities.

He declared he was not trying to shirk investigation. The article in The Toronto Telegram did not allude to him specifically, therefore it was not for him to act. There had been an allusion to the Prime Minister, therefore it was the duty of the Prime Minister to take cognizance of it. But The Toronto World had specifically connected his name with an insinuation, a serious insinuation, which related to an important administrative act, for which he was primarily responsible, and he thought it was only right that the country should know, and have the earliest opportunity of knowing what foundation there was for that insinuation.

"Now, my honorable friend said that I might clear the whole matter up as to my bank account by a simple statement as to the source as to which this money came, and the direction in which it was diverted, I have no doubt that is a fact, that I could take action and clear this whole matter up. But I conceive my duty to be this: I do not think that it is in the interest of Canada, I do not think it is in the interest of public life of Canada that upon an insinuation, based upon theft and put forward as blackmail, a man in public or private life in Canada should be compelled to expose his private business. I do not think that it would add to the dignity of Parliament or the standard of public life in Canada to say that Parliament should be the assistant of thugs and blackmailers by the requiring of the exposure of a bank account on such a statement as has been placed before the public."

On the vote being taken there voted for the Premier's motion 102 and for Mr. Borden's amendment 69, a Government majority of 33.

After recess Haughton Lennox moved for the appointment of a royal commission.

Mr. Lennox said they were not without experience of farcial investigations, and he mentioned the Hodgins and Lumsden investigations as instances.

The vote on Mr. Lennox's amendment was: Against 99 for 65. It was thus defeated by a Government majority of 34.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 3.—Business in wheat over the cable was very quiet, as foreign buyers were not disposed to follow the advance in prices on this side. There continues to be considerable demand for oats, but on account of further advance in prices in Winnipeg, bids were a little out of line at the close and no further sales were made. The enquiry for spring wheat flour from European sources was fair, but the bids were too low to permit of any business being done.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 3.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the offerings this morning were 625 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 750 hogs and 2900 calves. There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being well maintained under an improved demand from local buyers, and as supplies were not excessive a clearance was made and the trade on the other hand was fairly active. Choice steers sold at 6½c, good, at 6c to 6¼c; fairly good, at 5½c to 5¾c; fair, at 5c to 5¼c, and common, at 4½c to 4¾c per lb. A few choice cows brought as high as 5½c, and the commoner ones sold from that down to 3¼c per pound. There were only a few bulls offered, which sold at prices ranging from 3½c to 5¼c per lb., as to quality.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices declined 15c to 25c per cwt., as compared with those of Monday. This was somewhat of a surprise to the trade owing to the fact that supplies were not large, but the demand was rather slow, as buyers in some cases had ample stocks on hand for the balance of the week. Opening sales of selected lots were made at $6.75, but later $6.50 to $6.60 were the ruling figures, weighed off cars.

A feature of the small meat trade was the very heavy run of calves, in fact, it was the largest this season, but as prices ruled low the demand was good and sales were made at from $2 to $8 each, as to size and quality. A few old sheep sold at 4½c to 5½c per lb., and spring lambs brought $5 to $8 each, as to size.

PRESENTATION TO MRS. T. J. MOWAT

Former Local Lady Remembered by Board of Berlin Church

The Berlin Daily Telegraph of Saturday says:

On Friday evening the choir of Trinity Methodist Church and a few friends were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Clement in honor of Mrs. T. J. Mowat, the organist of the church who has resigned owing to removal from Berlin. The home of the host proved to be extremely well adapted for such a function and the guests deeply appreciated the warmth of the reception given. After a short practice, Mr. J. B. Weaver on behalf of the choir in a neat speech of appreciation presented to Mrs. Mowat with a beautiful cut glass vase.

He was closely followed by Mr. Clement, who, acting for the Quarterly Official Board, presented Mrs. Mowat with a magnificent leather club-bag Mr. Clement expressed the Board's thankfulness for the capable manner in which the position of organist had been filled during the past two years adding that the present was a token of both her official and personal worth in the church. Several solos and other musical selections were rendered and a delightful luncheon was served.

Mrs. Mowat was formerly organist of George Street Methodist Church, and Murray Street Baptist Church.

WEDDING BELLS

HARRIS—HAZLITT.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place on Wednesday morning, May 3rd, at the residence of Mr. T. G. Hazlitt, when his second daughter, Katie, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Austin Harris, of Newcastle, Clarke County. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robt. Pogue of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Peterborough.

The bride was given away by her father and Miss Belva Lancashire made a very pretty little flower girl. The bridal party entered the parlor to strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Mae Monterief of Benstort.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris left on the 5.30 G.T.R. train for an extended trip, amid showers of confetti and congratulations of their many friends. They will visit Chicago, St. Paul and Vancover.

POWER CO. GETS PERMISSION TO ERECT RETAINING WALL

Board of Works Discussed Pumping Station Situation With Mr. Chipman

The Board of Works and Mr. Munro, on behalf of the Auburn Power Company came to an agreement last night in regard to the retaining wall and water main proposition, which has been explained several times.

The Power Company is given authority to construct the retaining wall and for the conveyance of the land, and for permission to do the work, will place the water main for the fire protection for Auburn mills across the proposed bridge, the city, however, paying the difference in the cost in the purchase of a six and ten inch pipe, the latter pipe to be used. Had a six inch pipe been decided on by the city, the company would have borne all the cost. The city also agrees to pay a rental of $1 a year.

SIDEWALKS.

Henry Moore was present in connection with the proposed sidewalk on the west side of Aylmer street, north of Smith. With other residents he wants the sidewalk on the outside of the tree line.

The matter was left over until the time for operations arrive. Some grading has to be done on the road.

Ratepayers on George street asked for a sidewalk on east side between Romaine and King Edward streets. The engineer will report.

ASKS DAMAGES.

The engineer explained the city's position regarding the claim of a Gilmour street resident, who asked $2.50 for damages to his fence. This damage was caused by the snowplough, the driver's explanation being that the damage was done unintentionally, and was therefore unavoidable.

On motion no action was taken.

SEWERS.

A sewer pipe was asked for on Downie street between Hunter and Brock streets. Referred to Board of Health.

No action was taken on a request for a sewer on Bethune street between Hunter and Brock streets, the petition not being sufficiently or properly signed.

The Board decided to build a sewer on Cambridge street for the Bonner-Worth Company. This will be done of the first works to be done.

SEPTIC TANK.

The chairman informed the committee that Mr. Shook, of the Dickson Company, wanted to know why the work of installing the septic tank on Waterford street north was not proceeded with.

Definite action was left over for another meeting.

The proposition is that the city build the tank for which the company will give certain property.

SOME REPAIRS.

The matter of making repairs at the water stands outside the police station was left in the hands of the chairman and engineer, who will order granolithic curb, if they think such necessary.

ANOTHER HORSE.

The Mayor suggested that a horse be procured, to be used on a cart, whereby holes on the streets may be looked after properly. The chairman and Ald. Brown were given authority to attend to the matter.

The C.P.R. will be asked to repair their crossings on George street, thereby making a level thoroughfare.

CLEAN UP.

Residents with the practice of throwing ashes in alleyways are requested to have such removed. Ald. Brown suggests this procedure as a step in the right direction towards the beautifying of the city.

PUMPING STATION.

Willis Chipman came down from Toronto to meet the Board in connection with the work on the sewage system and pumping station in the south end of the city, and of which he is the engineer. He suggested that as the work was advancing to such proportions that the machinery was to be placed in the station within two or three weeks, a mechanical man be secured for the proper installation of the machinery. Mr. Chipman explained that he had no fault whatever to find with Mr. Bartlett as to his work, who is at present in charge for the city, Mr. Bogue doing the contract work, he having taken it over from Mr. Conroy.

It was decided that Mr. Bartlett remain in charge of the work until May, when a mechanical engineer will be brought here for the installation of the machinery. Other work will be given to Mr. Bartlett.

SUGGESTED PROGRAM FOR THE CORONATION DAY CELEBRATION

To Include Inauguration of the People's Chimes—A Big Day.

A deputation of citizens, headed by Rev. Canon Davidson, waited on the Reception Committee of the City Council last night in regard to the celebration of Coronation Day in this city.

The committee formed another, to be made up of the chairman, Ald. Graham, Ald. Anderson and Ald. Bradburn, which will co-operate with other local committees in the interests of a big day for Peterborough.

MAKE IT A BIG DAY.

Canon Davidson was chief spokesman, and he referred to the deep significance of Coronation Day, which would be one of great rejoicing throughout the British Empire. In the celebration of this day Peterborough had a great opportunity to bring the notice of all Canada upon this city. The People's Chimes, the largest in Canada, were to be inaugurated, and thousands of people would be coming. The opportunity was presented to the city to give a big program of home entertainment to the citizens.

Canon Davidson urged that the matter of arrangements be taken up at once, as there was a lot of work to be done. As to outside public men, he believed the Bishop of Toronto and Hon. George A. Cox could be secured for the occasion, while His Worship Mayor Morrow, too, might take part in the inauguration ceremony.

A PROGRAM.

The dedication of the chimes to take place close to twelve o'clock. Platforms to be erected for the speakers and visitors in front of the St. John's church. The 57th Regiment to be drawn up nearby. After the speeches could come the handing over of the chimes by Mayor Morrow, on behalf of the citizens, to the Bishop for dedication; this to be followed by the playing of "The Old Hundred," "Doxology," "God Save the King," and "O Canada," in the order named, by the chimes. Then could follow the firing of a volley by the regiment and a "Bell" concert. Next could be given a public luncheon possibly at the Market Hall, where all classes and creeds could come together and participate. An admission fee of say 50 cents could be charged to assist in defraying the expenses. After the luncheon a reception could be given to the visitors and speakers. Following this again, possibly the school children of the city would meet in one of the parks perform drills or flag formations, and sing patriotic songs. The Salvation Army Band might give a concert in Victoria Park, assisted by the chimes, each taking part, and then in the evening could follow a concert by the 57th Regimental Band, with fireworks display finale, the chimes giving a farewell as the day's program closed.

Messrs. V. Eastwood and Joseph Mills, on behalf of the 57th Regiment, spoke of a celebration, and informed the meeting that the commanding officer and committee would be pleased to co-operate with other committees.

J. J. Turner, jr., in giving his concurrence to the remarks of Canon Davidson and the other speakers, said that the city in the past had, perhaps, been somewhat lax in providing home amusement for the citizens.

VISIT OF MR. BRYAN.

The matter of a reception to William Jennings Bryan, who comes to this city Thursday, May 18th, was left in the hands of the Mayor and Ald. Graham, Messrs. J. J. Turner, jr., and H. M. Gilchrist, of the Y.M.C.A. under whose auspices Mr. Bryan will lecture at the Grand Opera House, suggesting that the council take up the question of providing some entertainment for the visitor. He will be the guest of Hon. J. R. Stratton while in the city and as far as present arrangements are known will arrive here from Belleville on the morning train.

Writ Issued Against City for Loss of Horse by Accident

R. Gibbs has issued a writ for $300 damages against the city, for the loss of a horse, caused by an accident, with which it met on Charlotte street, near the G.T.R. crossing, when a drain for the carrying off of water had been made. The city clerk notified the Legal and Reception Committee at the meeting last night and it was decided that the city solicitor should take the necessary action and defend the suit.

Merchants of Retail Association are reminded of meeting at hotel National this evening. E M. Trowern, Dominion Secretary will speak on Co-operative and Municipal and other matters concerning merchants Luncheon at 6.30 o'clock.

IN SOCIETY

Vancouver is holding this week their annual horse show and it is reported that this is the most successful effort that has been made as yet. Many Peterborough people will be interested in it on account of the fact that Mr. E. Hughes Charles, of Montreal, formerly of this city, was unanimously chosen by the committee in charge to act as one of the judges, and was brought from Montreal for that purpose.

In the list of hostesses on the gala occasion the appears the names of several ladies who are known in this city. In their report of the festivities attendant on the horse show the Vancouver World says as follows;—"Another of last evening's hostesses was Mrs. H. W. Kent, who was looking very handsome in a gown of black and white and a modish French hat in similar colors, and who had as her guests, Dr. and Mrs. Ewing, the latter wearing a pink velvet dress and a smart hat in one of the new small shapes trimmed with pink roses; Mrs. Stanley, who was entirely in black; Miss Farron in a gown of blue velvet in one of the new dull tones and a black velvet hat trimmed with pink roses and ospreys, and Mr. Chambers, of London, England.

Among the many hostesses was Mrs. J. H. Senker, who wore a beautifully designed gown of black and white marquisette heavily embroidered in white silk and mounted on emerald green satin with a hat of a dull green shade trimmed with mauve plumes. Her guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Macnee, the latter wearing an elaborate gown of hand-painted chiffon, the bodice of which was adorned with some handsome embroidery and finished with bands of blue satin and a large plumed hat set off with white ospreys; Miss Eva Springer, in a cream costume and a dark blue hat trimmed with flowers; Mr. Averill and Mr. Tobin."

Lethbridge Herald;—Artistic arrangements were carried out in every detail of the charming dinner given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. C. F. P. Conybeare, for their guest, Miss Reta Cavanah. The decorations had as their color note mauve. Mrs. Conybeare greeted her guests wearing an exquisite imported gown of mauve satin, veiled with white chiffon embroidered with pansies in the several shades of purple. Miss Cavanah made a pretty picture in her girlish evening gown of maise satin adorned with garlands of satin roses of the same shade.

Spring blossoms were used in the elaborate table adornment. A low bowl resting on a bed of heliotrope tulle held crocuses and asparagus ferns, and at each corner of the board a tall cut glass vase held mauve sweet peas which had been fashioned into a prim little bouquet so much in favor a century ago. Garlands of asparagus ferns drooped gracefully from each bouquet and trailed to the centre of the table.

Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Seatle, Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. Donnan, Miss Cavanah, Mrs. Hammond, Mr. Justice Scott, Judge Winter and the host and hostess.

G. W. BENNETT GETS GOVERNMENT JOB

Word has been received that Mr. G. W. Bennett has been appointed chief inspector of colonization roads for Ontario. The duties are implied in the title, he having to supervise the work being done by the inspectors throughout the several districts. He has been for many years township clerk of North Monaghan, and the new position will likely necessitate his giving up the office.

THEATRICAL

The dramatization of Harold McGrath's novel, "The Man on the Box," was presented to a large audience at the Grand last night.

The lines follow those of the book quite closely and Mr. John Meehan, an old Lindsay boy, as the "Man on the Box," played his part perfectly, depicting the pranks of a frivolous young army officer who has fallen in love with a colonel's daughter, who, after having had him arrested and fined for kissing her, paid his fine and made him her coachman as a punishment.

The other members of the company gave Mr. Meehan, excellent support and the performance throughout was well received by the audience.

THE KELLARIC FELT MATTRESS

The novel and interesting display made in the window of Clegg's furniture store is attracting general attention. The mattresses are made by the Berlin Bedding Co., and the display includes large photographs, showing the process of manufacture. The mattresses are made of pure new cotton, felted, and put into the mattress in layers, not stuffed. Every mattress has a laced end, so that the purchaser can see exactly what is inside.

All mattresses are supplied with strap handles, making it very convenient to handle them. The "Kellaric" is sold at $12.50. The quality of the cotton used, and the ticking is quite equal to that used in other mattresses for which a higher price is asked. The durability of cotton felt mattresses is now recognized as being greater than that of almost any other kind and at the same time they do not pack down, sag, or get out of shape. The durability renders them a most comfortable mattress during the long service they will give.

Over 200 passengers on the "Dominios" will be quarantined at Grosse Isle, Quebec, because of Smallpox.

DEFEAT FOR COLDSPRINGS IN CHURCH LEAGUE FIXTURE

St. John's Won at Brinton Meadows by Score of 4-1

The Cold Springs football team made their debut in the Church League last night, and celebrated the occasion in a defeat, St. John's eleven registering the win at Brinton Meadows with a 4—1 score.

The players were rather slow in arriving, and the game was not called until about 6.40.

The game centered around the St. John's goal for the greater part of the first half, the Cold Springs boys getting many shots, but failed to connect. The play was a combination of tripping and upsets for a while, until the referee, Fred Irish, got his namesake up and began calling fouls. Near the close of the first half a hard buck, shot by one of the green shirts, passed between the poles for the first counter of the night. This settled the scoring during the initial period, though both teams worked frantically.

It was becoming very dark, and no rest was allowed at half-time. This decision rather favored the seasoned St. John's "Chappies."

In the first part of the second half some good ball was played, but a shady decision as to a goal for St. John's seemed to take the mettle out of the Cold Springs bunch, though they braced up once and scored a goal. St. John's retaliated with two more counters.

St. John's meet St. James' on Saturday, but they will have to strengthen their line-up some, or they are due to take a tumble.

The teams were—

Anything that the Maple Leafs left undone at Newark yesterday can be reserved for consideration at a later date, possibly when that 22—2 score stands reversed. It was a bad day for Iron Man McGinnity and his scalp hunters, but after all the story of the play only goes to show how uncertain is the baseball game.

New Train Service to "Lake of Bays"

An important feature that will be inaugurated during the coming season will be a new train service to the "Lake of Bays" district. A standard Grand Trunk passenger train will leave Toronto with through coaches, parlor cars and dining car at 10.15 o'clock in the morning, daily except Sunday, for Huntsville, reaching the latter point at about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, connecting with the steamers for points in the "Lake of Bays" district, and affording passengers the opportunity of reaching their destination in time for dinner.

The Sunday evening boat service from the WaWa hotel, Britannia, Point Ideal, Portage, Deerhurst and other important calling ports on "Lake of Bays" to Huntsville will be run on same schedule as for season 1910, during the months of July and August, and which will be a boon to week-enders desiring to return to the city for business on Mondays.

Willing to Lower Rates.

Montreal, May 4.—The first meeting between the management of the Street Railway Co., and the Board of Control in regard to the question of an extension of the franchise to the company, was held at the City Hall yesterday. The company's representatives said they did not object to giving more tickets for 25 cents, but there might be some difficulty in regard to giving lower fares to connecting lines.

It was further explained that the company had about perfected all arrangements in regard to an amalgamation of the four companies.

Recorder's Denial.

Montreal, May 4.—Judge Greenshield, in allowing an appeal against the quashing of a liquor license, scored Recorder Weir for having, he said, acted upon representations made to him in street conversations and not having been present when witnesses were examined.

The recorder declares he heard the greater part of the evidence and satisfied himself as to the authority of the allegations against the license holders.

Claims Shooting Was Accidental.

Fowler, Ind., May 4.—John Poole, the wealthy farmer in jail here, admits the shooting of his farm hand, Joseph Kemper, whose body was found on the Poole farm Tuesday. He said he killed Kemper on Dec. 12, 1910, while rabbit hunting. They were climbing over a fence when the shot gun was accidentally discharged. Then he cut the body into pieces and buried it with the refuse from the killing of hogs.

To Control Cable Rates.

London, May 4.—The Government is taking steps to obtain certain powers of control over rates for transatlantic cable messages and by other means to secure British interests from any possible disadvantage resulting from the working arrangements between the Anglo-American cable companies and the Western Union Telegraph Co., which was concluded yesterday. Postmaster-General Samuel, replying to a series of questions in the House of Commons yesterday, said that the agreement would not result in cable communication between America and England depending entirely upon the operations of an American combine.

Hunting Treasure.

London, May 4.—The head of the expedition excavating in Jerusalem is Capt. Montague Brownlow Park, brother of the Earl of Morley.

The syndicate, which is financing the enterprise, received letters from Park describing the progress of the excavations in the neighborhood of the Pool of Siloam, at regular intervals up to a month ago, since no word has come from him.

They were after treasure supposedly buried by Jewish kings.

Frost In Fruit Belt.

St. Catharines, May 4.—All small tomato plants which were not protected were frozen Tuesday night. Ice was found here to a depth of half an inch. Some early peach trees are in blossom, but the great majority of the trees suffered no damage whatever. Most of the tomatoes are still unplanted.

NORWOOD NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Norwood, May 2, 1911.—The Board of Education met on Monday evening, the following members being present:—C. E. Pakenham, Esq., chairman; Messrs. J. R. McKelvie, E. C. Squire, W. H. Cuthbertson, Thomas Burkell, G. H. Niebel, John Doherty, J. F. Elliott, F. Anderson, Wm. Webster, E. P. Cuffe, D. McNaughton. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The report of boiler inspection from the Canadian Casuality Co. was read from the chair, showing the boiler to be in first class condition.

Accounts as follows were presented and passed:—J. Finlay & Son's Lumber Co., $6.45; Bell Telephone Co., $2.10; K. G. Thomson, supplies for High School, $4.65. Mr. Pakenham, chairman, recommended payment of part if not all the accounts submitted at the last meeting of the Board. It was decided upon a vote of the Board that $50 of the expense in connection with the recent stock-judging course be paid by the Board.

On account of recent legislation it was necessary for the Board to appoint an Advisory Committee composed of eight members, four from the Board and four resident ratepayers of the district. The committee's duty will be the management of the local branch of the Department of Agriculture. The committee will be composed of the following gentlemen: Messrs. P. McNulty, Matthew Elliott, Wellington Burgess, George J. Keefer, John Doherty, J. F. Elliott, D. McNaughton, W. H. Cuthbertson.

Mr. Elliott pointed out to the Board that he thought the plot of ground leased by the Agricultural Department from Mrs. J. Faux could be purchased at a fair price, and recommended the Board to take steps to procure it.

Moved by Mr. Niebel, seconded by Mr. Cutterbrtson, that Messrs. John Doherty and J. F. Elliott be a committee to negotiate with Mrs. Faux with a view of purchasing the adjoining plot, and report to the executive committee.—Carried.

Mr. John Breckenbridge, of Westwood, sent an invitation to the village council to attend the sucker run at Westwood on Thursday forenoon of this week. Sucker day at Westwood, which is always about the first of May, is one of the big days, as hundreds of people gather and go after the bewildered fish with all sorts of implements of slaughter from a pitch fork to a steam shovel, operated by hand. Early in the morning the stop logs are put in at the dam, and by eight o'clock the water below the dam has so fallen that the suckers have access only to a few shallow pools. Into these the anxious fishermen plunge, regardless of wet feet or wet clothes, and scoop up the fish in almost incredible numbers. Many people take home bags full, which, after being salted for a time are very good eating.

High County Constable Cochrane of Peterboro was in Norwood on Tuesday, in quest of an offender.

The Asphodel stone crusher which has been placed in the Norwood gravel pit on Ridge Street for the past week will likely be through this Tuesday evening. About one hundred yards of stone and gravel have been crushed each day and distributed over a large portion of the principal streets. The work has been well done, and will make excellent roads after haing been driven over for a short time, as the gravel mixed with the crushed stone packs more readily than the clear stone. The Village Council is well satisfied with their efforts this spring to improve the streets and should meet with the approval of the ratepayers.

Miss Jean Nicholl has returned from visiting friends in Peterboro.

Miss Lolemia Johnston visited in Havelock on Sunday.

Mr. Howard Beavis of Lakefield was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Laing on Sunday.

When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

"I can hardly tell you how great my sufferings have been. Chronic liver complaint accompanied by biliousness were a daily source of trial to me. Every day I experienced the sickening effects of these ailments. I longed for some medicine that should permanently drive them away.

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure Bowel and Kidney as well as Liver troubles, and keep you healthy. 25c a box at your dealer's. 14

FROM FRASERVILLE

Special Correspondence.

Fraserville, May 1.—On Wednesday morning last Mrs. H. Cruikshanks received a very painful accident. While coming down stairs she had a sudden attack of lightheadedness and fell, breaking her left arm at the wrist. Dr. A. H. Turner, of Millbrook, was sent for, and soon set and bandaged the fractured limb. Mr. Cruikshanks is doing as well as could be expected, considering her age.

Mr. Renwick, our local cheesemaker, has returned ready to resume operations as soon as it is decided to re-open the factory. No decision has been arrived at as yet, but a meeting for that purpose will be held in the factory this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Stears, from the west, are visiting at the home of Mr. Robert Waterman.

Mr. D. M. Black, of Toronto, spent a few days last week at the home of his aunt, Mrs. B. Johnston.

Mr. H. Cruikshanks, jr., of Peterborough, was in the village last week.

Mr. J. C. Campbell, of Baillieboro, made his regular trip through the village Sunday evening.

The villagers regret the departure of Mr. Wm. Henry and family, who have been residents here for some years. Mr. Henry intends farming, and has rented the farm owned by Mr. Jas. O'Hara, of Springville. We wish Mr. Henry every success in his new occupation.

The service in the Methodist church Sunday was well attended, considering the weather. Mr. Stears sang several solos, which were much appreciated.

The many friends of Mrs. J. Bothwell, jr., are glad to know that she has recovered from her attack of tonsilitis.

Mr. W. Dawson and the Misses Dawson, of Bensfort, spent Sunday at Mr. J. Armstrong's, North Monaghan.

Mrs. H. Jewison took advantage of the fine weather by taking a trip up the river to Peterboro on Saturday.

It takes the women folks round here to get a move on with their spring cleaning. Their men were put out in the summer kitchen, but they are now to be seen at work in their gardens.

The cheese factory is now rushing along with putting in the so much talked of cement floor. They have two men who are great at work. Such is the way.

Some of the farmers were helping at the factory last week with taking out the vats and presses.

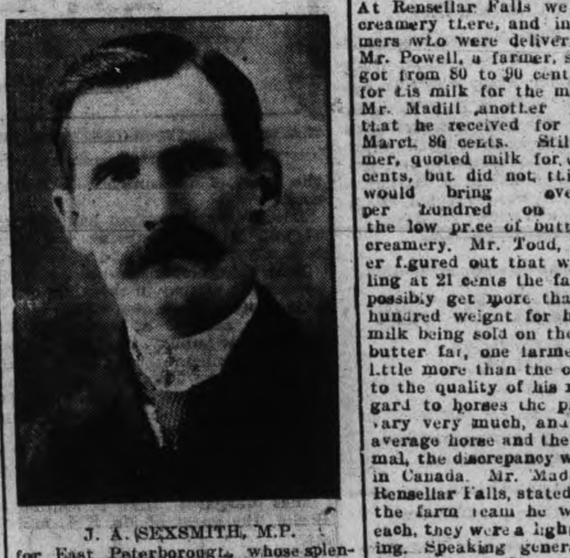
J. A. SEXSMITH, M.P., TELLS OF TRIP TO NEW YORK STATE AND WHAT HE FOUND OUT

Prices in Farm Products Below the Canadian—The Farmers Not Nearly as Well Off—Surprising Condition of Affairs—Reciprocity Would Kill the Farmers of Canada.

During the Easter recess of Parliament J. A. Sexsmith, M.P. for East Peterborough, visited New York State to find out what farm conditions were like under the American flag. He was accompanied by Mr. Wright, of Muskoka, representing a rural riding, and what they found just across the border has made them all, being farmers, determined to do all they can to prevent reciprocity, as it means lowering the Canadian farmer's conditions to the level of the American. The farmers of New York State, says Mr. Sexsmith, are not nearly as prosperous as those of Canada, and he would be heartily sorry to see his fellow farmers of East Peterborough in the condition of the New York State men.

While in Peterborough a few days ago Mr. Sexsmith was interviewed by a Review reporter, and the story of what he and Mr. Wright found will be interesting to the farmers of Peterborough county. The facts mentioned will come as considerable of a surprise to many farmers—

We went to Brockville the twelfth of April, the day the House adjourned, and went to the market there the next morning. We got farm prices from a number of farmers as follows: Potatoes per bag, $1.10; butter per pound, 25 cents; eggs, per dozen 20 cents; veal, per pound, 5 to 6 cents; beef by the carcase, per cwt., $10.35; horses, from $150 to $250; beans per bushel, $1.85 to $2; milch cows, $50 upwards; oats, 40 cents; pease, 90 cents; barley, 62 cents; buckwheat, 60 cents; cheese, new, 11 3-4 cents; chickens, 18 cents per lb.; lamb, live weight, 10 cents per lb. Machinery quoted as follows; Cream separators, 300 lb., $60; malotte, 500 lb., $80; McCormick binder, without transport or carrier, $115; tongue truck extra, $15; walking plough, $11; wheelbarrow, $3; top buggy, $75 to $80; farm waggons, complete, 2 1-2in. tire, $78; gear only 2 1-2 tire, $59; double harness, complete, $36.



J. A. SEXSMITH, M.P. for East Peterborough, whose splendid work in the House of Commons is causing much favorable notice.

CREAM PRICES.

We went to Prescott from there and found on enquiry there was no truth in the report that cream and milk were being exported to the United States from this point; the same being true with regard to Brockville.

Cream is sold at higher prices at Brockville and Prescott than in the United States towns of Ogdensburg and Morristown, across the river. While it is true that there was considerable export to the American centres last fall, it has entirely ceased at the present. Mr. Small, who runs a creamery in Prescott, is buying all the milk or butter fat offering at a price considerably higher than that offered by Mr. Jones, of Ogdensburg, in New York state. Mr. Small is paying the farmers twenty-seven cents per pound for butter fat at Prescott, and at Cardinal, a point some eight miles out, twenty-six cents, from which place it is brought in by stage at one cent a pound. In Prescott prices for farm implements as far as we could gather were about the same as in Brockville with the exception of walking ploughs which were quoted one dollar higher.

FARM LANDS.

We found farm lands very difficult to price as they vary very much in this locality, in quality, but for fair to first-class farms the prices seem to run from $4,500 to $10,000 per hundred acres, a good deal depending on improvements and buildings and conveniences to town and distance back from the St. Lawrence, etc. We went over to Ogdensburg in the evening, and the next morning visited the store of Mr. H. G. Chandler, provision dealer, and were given the following prices by his obliging office man. He is selling from his establishment for the following prices:—

No. 1 creamery butter, 22 cents per lb; old cheese, 13 to 14 cents; eggs, farmers' price, 15 cents; salt per bbl. 280 lb., $1.30; potatoes per, 68 cents; farmers' butter is selling in Ogdensburg at 18 cents. We visited the International Harvester's [illegible] where [illegible] stored for distribution their goods for the large tract of country in this part of the United States. They also retail their goods from this establishment. We were given the following prices as sold to the farmers: Binders, 5 or 6 foot, with transport and sheaf carrier, $120; tongue truck extra, $20; 5-foot mower, $45; disc harrow, 12 discs, 16 inches diameter, $25; 12 discs, 18 inches diameter, $28; 8-foot rake, 26 teeth, $22; farm wagon, complete three-inch tire, $75. The above prices were for cash payment October 1st. If the time is extended five dollars per year is added for binders and other goods in proportion, as well as six per cent interest on all notes. The above are the prices at which the agents are also to sell to the farmers.

Mr. J. F. Devine, merchant, Ogdensburg, had a card in the window offering maple syrup at $1 per gallon, and eggs at 18 cents per dozen. The usual difficulty was encountered in getting actual value of farms. Mr. Thomas Sinnett was reported to have a first-class farm for sale with good houses and barn and stabling for forty head, farm first-class in every respect, and within five miles of the city of Ogdensburg. The farm is composed of one hundred acres, for which he is asking $6,000. Ogdensburg has a population of considerably over 20,000 people, and is the largest and most important shipping point on the United States side of the St. Lawrence, and Ontario farms situated about the same distance from an important city and with the same improvements and like quality would be worth at least $1,000 more. Mr. Sinnett has not been able as yet to sell his farm. Out from Ogdensburg on the railway running to Decalb Junction is a small village called Huvelton, and a farm of one hundred and three acres belonging to the Smither's estate has been sold just lately by public auction. It is only about seven miles from Ogdensburg. The farm is reported without stone or rock, the building being nothing extra. This farm was sold for $3,385. Farms generally are quoted from $3,500 to $6,000. A few were quoted at higher prices, where the farmers are not anxious to sell. At Rensellar Falls we visited the creamery there, and interviewed farmers who were delivering their milk. Mr. Powell, a farmer, stated that he got from 80 to 90 cents per hundred for his milk for the month of March. Mr. Madill another farmer, stated that he received for his milk for March 86 cents. Still another farmer, quoted milk for March at 86 cents, but did not think April milk would bring over 60 cents per hundred on account of the low price of butter sold by the creamery. Mr. Todd, another farmer figured out that with butter selling at 21 cents the farmer could not possibly get more than 60 cents per hundred weight for his milk. The milk being sold on the percentage of butter fat, one farmer might get a little more than the other, according to the quality of his milk. With regard to horses the prices seemed to vary very much, and between the average horse and the really fine animal, the discrepancy was greater than in Canada. Mr. Madill, a farmer of Rensellar Falls, stated he had paid for the farm team he was driving $[illegible]2 each, they were a light team for farming. Speaking generally horses ran from $[illegible]5 to $175 and some large and fine animals higher. Cows ran from $45 to $[illegible]0 dollars and some higher. There seemed to be no beef or hogs, or mutton for sale by the farmers here.

The following cash prices were quoted for machinery, &c.: Binders, $110; mowers, $45 to $[illegible]0; walking plough $13; tongue truck for binders, extra $15 to $20. Mr. Orr, harness dealer at Rensellar Falls, quoted farmer's double harness, complete (ash) $49. At Decalb Junction Mr. George Taylor expected to net 65 cents per hundred for his April milk. Mr. Brille says the factory he sells to will net for the farmers for April, about 60 cents for their milk. Mr. McGruar, merchant at Decalb Junction says the farmers are getting about 18c for butter. He states that milk was worth $1 per hundred to ship to New York, but would not bring more at the creamery than about 60c. He pays five cents per quart for milk for his family. Mr. [illegible]ayer, a butcher at Decalb Junction is offering for good beef dressed 7 1-2 cents per pound, and for pork dressed 8 to 9 cents. From here we went on to Oswego and drove out from there to a creamery managed by Mr. L. Isbell a very clever and able young man. His creamery was up to date in every respect, making not only first class butter but also casein and has nearly all the machinery installed to turn out granulated sugar from wheyl Casein is supposed to be worth from 3 to 3 1-2 cents per pound. He expects to extract about 3 1-2 pounds of refined sugar from one hundred pounds of whey. The sugar will be in crystals and sent to a refinery to be finished. This factory is supplying the finest trade in New York and getting 22 cents per pound at present for butter. They charge at this factory 4 1-2 cents per pound for manufacturing butter. Mr. Sexsmith states that he does not know of any place in Ontario where more than 3 1-2 cents a pound is charged. We found the prices of horses here about the same as those of other points visited. Cows quoted from $45 upward. Mr. Charles Stoddard, farmer from Oswego, quoted beef on foot at 4c per pound. Mr. Sylvester Dyke another farmer of Mexico, New York reported having sold milk some years as low as 45c. per hundred, on the average for the season. Last year at the bottling plant it got as high as $1.30 per hundred weight to send to New York city. The farmers are buying their machinery a little less here than in Canada except walking ploughs which were about the same. Horses here were bringing on the average from $125 to $175 and extra animal shigber. There does not seem to be any meat offered by the farmers. The whole business is transferred to the packing houses which were supplying the trade everywhere we went. Binders retail here at $125; mowers $45; walking plough $13. Cows worth from $50 to $60 at present. An extra nice farm team would be worth $400. Hay per ton $16. Barley 60c. to 65. per bushel. Mr. Dyke quoted above also quoted evaporating apples per bushel 20c. and winter apples on the tree at $1.25 per barrel.

TO WATERTOWN

From Oswego we went to Watertown and there met Mr. Farmer, a merchant, who came to this place from Havelock, Ontario, eight years ago, and has built up a successful business. Mr. Farmer's place of business is at 700 Mill Street. He very kindly drove us all over the city. Watertown is a thriving place of over 20,000 population having large paper mills and other large industries. Mr. Farmer states that there are a large number of Canadians in Watertown and they are arriving all the time. The present mayor and also an ex-mayor being Canadians.

Mr. Sexsmith met several cousins there who gave a lot of information about the place, also stating that there were a very large number of other Canadians located there. We were very much interested in seeing the place at 126 Court Street where the bogus ballot boxes were manufactured. Mr. Farmer quoted us the following prices: Eggs, 18c out of the store, buying them at 15c.; farmer's butter, 18c to 20c; compound lard 9c.; pure lard, 10c; potatoes, per bag 45c.; Quaker Oats, 1 pound package, 10c.; good flour, per barrel, $4.70; oleomargarine, retailed at 18c. Mr. Farmer states he is selling 18 pounds of oleomargarine to one pound of butter, and has a large sale for oleomargarine. He states it is driving butter out of the market fast. Mr. C. H. Capworth, of Syracuse, a produce dealer, handling a number of retail stores in the Northern part of New York state, is selling one hundred tubs of oleomargarine per week. This time last year he was selling fifty tubs of butter per week, and is now only selling twelve tubs of butter over the same territory. He finds the people fast tranferring their allegiance from butter to oleomargarine, and also finds that a number prefer it, now they are used to it, to ordinary butter at the same prices. Prices in the stores in Watertown for general merchandise seem to be about the same as in any town of a similar size in Ontario. For such articles as boots and shoes, clothing, general merchandise, &c., Morristown, a small town on the south side of the St. Lawrence river, opposite the city of Brockville, Ont., we found conditions about the same as in other places visited. We went over the new creamery, which is not yet running, but will soon be completed. When in working order, this will be one of the very finest. Mr. Bett, the manager, is buying milk at 90c. per hundred. There is no milk or cream taken from Canada as the price is too high in Canada. They will make cassein here as well as other products. Mr. Delong, farmer, here sold his milk for March at 89 cents.

After coming back to Canada we learned that in a sale of colored cheese at Lansdowne, in Leeds county, Ontario, on April 14, the prices realized were 11 1-2 cents against 10 1-4 cents at Gouverneur, New York. At the Mitchellville factory in the same county, on April 13, white cheese sold at eleven and one-sixteenth cents, nearly a full cent higher than it was worth in the United States.

BENSFORT ITEMS

Special Correspondence.

Bensfort, May 1.—The favorable weather has been a source of joy to the farmers in drying up the land, and seeding, which was somewhat late in starting, will, if present conditions continue, be as early as usual. The fall wheat suffered from the severe cold, and much of it is being plowed up and the ground re-sown with spring crops.

Mr. Geo. Byers has the milk route formerly covered by Mr. Freeman Thompson. The factory has been undergoing a course of repair and the season will not commence for another week. Mr. Byers hopes, from the combined sources of labor and patronage, to accumulate a considerable fortune by the end of the season.

Mr. David Huggins is at present engaged in drawing cream to the Peterborough creamery. He is further considering a contract with the Millbrook creamery. The two routes, should he be successful, will be run alternately.

Mr. Thompson Huggins, during the past week, suffered the loss of a valuable young horse. Mr. Chas. Wicks also lost a colt.

Mr. Kenneth Moncrief attended Methodist church on Sunday.

William A. Nurse has been very busy lately giving his launch a coat of paint, in preparation for the bachelors' picnic on May 24.

A number of young men on Lakeview avenue have lost spears while trying to evade the law by fishing last week.

Mr. Frank Buckham entertained a large number of his friends at a party a week or so ago.

We have not heard much talk about reciprocity around here lately. We see enough of the now resident Americans taking our fish out of Rice Lake by the wagon load. If there was only one fish left they would drag the bottom out of the out of the lake to get it. They pay a $2 license to fish here. Why not raise it to $25? We don't want any reciprocity. If we had it they would strip this country in about five years of everything that was worth carrying away. Canada for Canadians!

Mr. Reginald Perrin, one of our respected young men, seems to have a fascination for city life, but we hope to be able to keep him with us for some time yet.

Mr. and Miss Dodd entertained a party from the city a short time ago. A very enjoyable time was spent and refreshments served.

Two of our young ladies Misses Estella Waterman and Irene Chambers are at present enjoying city life.

Special Correspondence.

Bethany, May 3.—Mrs. J. J. Poston and Miss Addie Preston have gone to Toronto to attend the Women's Conference.

Three detectives arrived here Monday morning in pursuit of the fowl stealers who depleted the henroost of Mr. Danyard, of the 10th line, of Cavan, taking 25 in one night, returning again the next night for the remaining 60. The latter batch were traced to Lindsay.

The work of demolition of the Farmers' Bank here started under the hands of Messrs. Brown and Freeman, it being part of the Temperance hotel here, which having been sold to the C.P.R. Co., has come down.

The school boys were busy this week collecting cheque books from the above premises, thinking it good fun to be able to write cheques for large amounts on the Farmers' Bank.

The farmers here are busy drawing large cement pipes for the new culverts, sections weighing 1,200 lbs.

There will be a football match in connection with the Midland League, Bethany vs. Lakefield, on Saturday, May 6th.

Dr. Tilley visited the public school here last Friday.

Much interest is taken by the people of the village in the construction camp here. Rev. D. Williams makes a weekly visit to it and leaves a supply of literature for the men, which is much appreciated.

J. A. SEXSMITH, M. P.

The citizens of Havelock and the surrounding county are indeed proud of the work that is being done by their representative, Jno. A. Sexsmith M.P., in the Dominion House, who is taking an active part in many of the questions which are brought up for discussion. Being a farmer, he naturally is an able speaker on al subjects pertaining to the farm, and has been ably discussing the reciprocity question from the standpoint of the farmer. Last year in his maiden speech he secured considerably prominence by his eloquent treatment of the wool industry in Canada, and has followed it up this year by continued discussion of many questions that have come up, proving himself not only an able speaker, but a man who's endeavoring to do his best for his constituency and the county in general.

TRENT BRIDGE NOTES

The shipment of cement from Hastings down the Trent River to Healy Falls for construction work, there, has commenced.

The new steel swing pier at Trent Bridge is being put up, and it is only a matter of a couple of weeks until navigation will be open right down the river as far as the falls for large boats. The construction work on the erection of the new part of the bridge has been going on since the early part of last summer. The old channel for boats was in the centre of the river but the canal survey placed it along the right bank, so that the old swing had to be torn down, another section of bridge erected, and a new swing installed. While this was going on a temporary bridge was erected to the west of the regular one. The channel of the watercourse surveyed down the right bank of the river will necessitate a good deal of excavating for a run of about 160 yards along the river which will be now continued with.

While as yet the summer resorts around Trent Bridge have not shown much life, still the prospects are bright for a good year. Last season was a very successful one at this point a number of new cottages having been erected and the number of tourists who visited it comparing most favorably with other years. A new innovation last year, was a regatta which was a very successful event, and which will likely be turned into an annual affair. A number of new cottages will be erected during the summer.

The Wonderful Sights of New York City

Have you ever visited New York, the great metropolis of the new world, if not, you should do so at the very first opportunity as a trip of this nature, besides being highly interesting, is also an education. The Grand Trunk-Lehigh Valley route is the scenic line from Canadian points. Convenient train service and excellent equipment.

Full particulars and tickets from any Grand Trunk agent, or address A. E. Duff, district passenger agent, Toronto, Ont.

According to Mayor John J. Mitchell, of Bowmanville, Ont., who was interviewed recently, Bowmanville is experiencing a very lively industrial boom. The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company is tripling its facilities and is in need of 50 additional hands. The Dominion Piano and Organ Company also other concerns, are in need of male and female help.

IRON MINES ARE BOUGHT

Mackenzie & Mann Said to Have Been in Deal

Norwood, Ont. May 3.—The Blairton Iron Mines Company, Limited, of Toronto, have purchased from The Pearce Company, Limited, of Marmora, for $75,000 cash the old Blairton iron mines, in the township of Belmont, together with the railway road bed from Blairton to Trent Bridge, on the River Trent. The full amount of the purchase money was paid into the Union Bank of Canada here on Monday to the credit of the Pearce Company, Limited, of which Mr. J. B. Pearce, of this village, is president, and the deed of the property passed into the hands of the purchasing company, which is composed of Toronto, Chicago and Cleveland capitalists, who have also purchased two of the largest North Hastings iron mines.

The same interests have also purchased the old Gilmour Company property at Trenton, where they will erect a large concentration plant. Trenton is submitting a by-law at an early date giving a fixed assessment on the plant.

The purchasers have had an option on the Blairton mine for the past three years, and during the past year have been paying a royalty of twenty-five cents a ton on 25,000 tons, whether mixed or not. No actual mining has been done during this period, but a thorough test of the property has been made by diamond drilloing. The mine was operated many years ago, but owing to the great expense of transporting the ore to the concentrator it was abandoned. It is rumored that Mackenzie and Mann are interested with the American capitalists.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir—The Morning Times says that Rev. Canon Davidson suggests that in the program mapped out for the city and regiment, on Coronation Day, that the Mayor hand the the bells over to the church. Now this is not the intention of the People's Chimes, which should be handed by the church over to the Mayor.

Canon Davidson must be a lawyer, when, after inducing the people to subscribe for the People's Chimes, he asks them to hand them over to the church in a lump sum. We acquit the Canon of any profane intention, but would be pleased to see him make the People's Chimes, the peoples' and not St. John's.

Yours truly,
RIVER ROAD.

Are They Comfortable ?

Many persons have difficulty in keeping their Spectacles from slipping down upon the nose and hurting the ears. We are fitting beautiful Spectacles of new form, that are the acme of comfort, and owing to the formation of the inconspicuous solid Gold Pads at the side of the nose, there is no marking of the nose crest or cutting behind the ears, and then too, they will not slip down. Optical Institute patrons who use them remark "That is the very kind of spectacles I have been looking for." A lady remarked "I would not do without those spectacles for $100.

HOUSE WILL ADJOURN FOR TWO MONTHS UNTIL MIDDLE OF JULY, OR PERHAPS LATER

Sir Wilfrid Accepts Mr. Borden's Offer — A Caucus To-day in Which the Liberals Will Discuss the Matter.

Ottawa, May 5.—A day of suspense as to the decision which would be reached by Sir Wilfrid Laurier regarding the Parliamentary session while he is in England at the Imperial Conference and the coronation ended late last evening, when it was announced that the Premier had finally made up his mind that the House will be adjourned for two months, from Tuesday, May 23, to Tuesday, July 18. Sir Wilfrid will sail for England on May 12.

At 10.30 last night Sir Wilfrid Laurier visited R. L. Borden in his office in the Parliament Buildings.

He remained with the Opposition leader for about twenty minutes, and informed him that he had definitely accepted this one of the suggestions which Mr. Borden made in the House last week.

The Premier will make the announcement of the adjournment of the House to a caucus of the Liberal members, which has been called for to-day. It is learned that this action of the Premier will be very unpopular with the rank and file of his party, for the reason that they had hoped for a prorogation.

While it is true that there is great diversity of opinion as to the course which he should pursue, it is also certain that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has made up his mind definitely on the subject.

There is much jubilation amongst the Conservatives at the victory which the Opposition leader has gained over the Premier, who stated some time ago that he would not go to the Imperial Conference or the coronation unless the reciprocity agreement passed the House.

There are several details to be arranged, such as the passing of supply sufficient to carry on the work of the Government during the period of adjournment, but this will be done later.

Hon. Mr. Graham, Minister of Railways, explained to the Commons yesterday the provisions of his bill to amend the Railway Act.

The most important and radical change contemplated is one which provides that when a railway becomes dilapidated and unsafe for traffic, the Government subsidy given that railway can be regarded as a lien on the road, coming in even before a first mortgage, and the Government can sell out the company under this provision and put the road in safe condition. Mr. Graham explained that this provision might seldom, if ever, be exercised, but it was well to have some provision whereby the Government could compel an unsafe road to put its right of way and rolling stock in proper condition. To Mr. Northrup, Mr. Graham explained that this provision would be retroactive and include all roads which had received Government subsidies in the past, as well as all still to receive subsidies.

Among the other clauses were those providing that telephone, telegraph and express companies should report annually to the Government, just as railways do; providing for the appointment of forest fire patrols and apparatus preventing railways setting forests on fire; providing that railway lands not used for actual railway purposes may be expropriated the same as any other lands, providing that railways under construction must be fenced unless excused by the Railway Commission, the present law being that the railways need not fence unless the commission so orders; providing damages to owners of land by a highway down which a railway is allowed to run; providing for annual reports of accidents, as well as reports at any other time the Minister may request.

The bill also contains a provision abolishing the law that cattle must not be allowed to run in unfenced land within a half mile of railway; this was for the benefit of stock-raisers in the west where there are great stretches of unfenced lands. Mr. Graham explained, but he looked to local and provincial regulations to protect the farmers of that province.

ITALIAN WIELDS RAZOR ON STREET

Albertan Kills Demented Foreigner Who Attacked Woman.

Nanton, Alta., May 5.—Wednesday afternoon a demented Italian was shot and instantly killed about sixteen miles east of Nanton by William Carrigan, a settler in that district. Carrigan has given himself up. According to witnesses, the tragedy was the result of an accident. The Italian, whose name is at present unknown, and who body lay all night and part of yesterday on the prairie, where he was shot, became violently deranged and attempted to attack some women living near. He armed himself with a razor, and endeavored to pull three women from a passing rig, his evident intention being to cut their throats, for he tried to reach them with the weapon. The women gave the alarm, and a half dozen men went in pursuit of the crazy foreigner, three on horseback and three in a buggy. Their intention was to catch and bind him. When they came in sight of the Italian he was chasing Mrs. Colerick, wife of a settler. Mrs. Colerick's husband is working in Calgary at present and she was alone.

When the Italian saw the pursuing men he turned to meet them. They stopped their horses when they came up to him, and he reached for the head of the horse that was drawing te rig. He was waving a razor, and in the bright sunlight it flashed like a revolver. The men in the rig thought it was a revolver, and Carrigan was evidently nervous, for the gun exploded; but the Italian was not hit.

Carrigan lowered his rifle and it went off again. Carrigan thought he had hit one of his friends, but when he looked the Italian was down, shot through the mouth. Death was instantaneous.

Fastest Funeral on Record.

Parrsboro, N.S., May 5.—Archibald McCaleny, who died at Green Hill on Monday, had the fastest funeral on record. The hearse left the house yesterday to go to the cemetery and when at the foot of the hill the driver got down to fasten the hearse door, the horses started before he could regain his seat and ran all the way to town, about two miles. The hearse was badly damaged.

THE $50,000 GUTENBERG BIBLE AND ITS BUYER

HENRY E. HUNTINGTON.

New York, May 5.—Gutenberg's Bible, a superb impression from the types of the father of printing, one of the seven vellum volumes of its kind in the world, was bought for $50,000 by Mr. Henry E. Huntington, of California, at the sale of the library of the late Robert Hoe.

This is the highest price ever paid for any printed volume in the history of man, and is practically double the sum which stand next to it, the $24,700 which Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan gave for the psalter from the same press.

The sale of the Gutenberg Bible, which is in two ponderous pigskin volumes, was attended by sharp competition, which finally resolved itself into a duel of thousands between Mr. Joseph E. Widener, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Huntington, who was represented by Mr. Geo. D. Smith, a dealer of this city.

PETITION WITH 30,000 NAMES

Asks Government Not to Grant Suffrage to Women

Special to the Review.

Newcastle, May 5.—The clerk of Hope Township has received word from the Board of Railway Commissioners that they have instructed the G.T.R. to install an electric bell on the gravel road crossing between Garden Hill and Millbrook. The Government is to pay 20 per cent. of the cost of installation, and the railway the balance. The bell is to be in operation within 90 days.

BANKER SAYS FINANCE CAN PREVENT WAR BY NO LOANS

New York Man at Peace Conference Suggests Nations Making it Impossible to Finance Martial Plans.

Baltimore, May 5.—"Financial neutrality" as a preventive of war between nations was the interesting suggestion offered at the third national peace congress here yesterday, by Jas. Speyer, of the New York and European banking house of Speyer & Co. Mr. Speyer spoke as a delegate from the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York. He followed Assistant Secretary of State Huntingdon Wilson, presiding officer of the forenoon session, who gave his interpretation of what has been called "dollar diplomacy," the newly coined phrase applied to the expansion of business interest. This term, according to Mr. Wilson, means the substitution of dollars for bullets; the creation of a prosperity which will be preferred to predatory strife, and "a practical mode of pursuing the ideal of world peace."

Mr. Speyer, who spoke on "International Finance as a Power for Peace," dealt first with the influence of international investments in times of peace. Taking up the question of what should and could be done in time of war by first-class powers, he said we find to-day in Europe that in times of peace certain Governments will not allow their bankers to take and place foreign loans in the home market, unless the purposes for which the loan is to be used are known and approved, and at least part of the proceeds are used by the borrowing nation for expenditures in such home markets for the benefit of the loaning nation.

"Now," said Mr. Speyer, "if such supervision and control of the bankers already exists in time of peace, it does not seem a wide flight of imagination to suggest that the great powers might agree to exercise such control in times of war between third parties, and to maintain, in future, what for want of a better term, might be called 'financial neutrality." In case two nations went to war without first submitting their grievances and differences to arbitration or judicial settlement at The Hague, why should the other neutral powers not bind themselves not to assist either of the belligerents financially, but to see to it that real neutrality was observed by their banks and bankers. There is little doubt that this could be done. If no financial assistance could be obtained from the outside, few nations would, in the face of this most effective neutrality of the other powers, incur the peril of bankruptcy. Some would certainly last a much shorter time."

SIR JOHN CARLING IS SERIOUSLY ILL

London, May 5.—Sir John Carling, Minister of Agriculture in Sir John Macdonald's Government, and head of the big brewing firm of this city, was overcome by a sinking spell yesterday morning and is not expected to recover. The family have been summoned to the bedside. Sir John had been around as usual until a few days ago.

Last night Dr. Eccles, who has worked with the patient all day, announced that he is stronger. Yet neither the physician nor the members of the family are sanguine. "Sir John is over 83 years old, you know," said the doctor. "He is living on borrowed time. We hope he will rally, but we cannot feel any degree of certainty."

His Skull Fractured.

Cobourg, May 5.—A sad fatality occurred in Hamilton Township late yesterday afternoon, when a young man named Roland Lonsberry undertook to go down a hill, having completed his work in the field, with a team of horses hitched to a field roller. The horses became unmanageable and he was thrown off, fracturing his skull and dying almost instantly. The young man's father resides at Warsaw.

AIRSHIP BADLY TORN BY TREES

Bad Luck in Dirigible Navigation by Government.

London, May 5.—The Government has had the worst of luck with its dirigible airships. The Leabaudy dirigible, which was damaged while being put into its shed at Aldershot after a successful flight from Paris last summer, was totally wrecked at Farnborough on its first trial trip yesterday. A great naval airship, the construction of which has been surrounded by secrecy, and which was planned to take a spectacular part in the coronation naval review, was so badly damaged at Barrow Wednesday, that it cannot be taken out for months. The Leabaudy met disaster against a clump of trees and is a mass of ruins. Major Sir A. Bannerman, commandant of the air battalion at South Farnborough, and head of the Government's aeronauts, took the airship out of her shed last evening with a crew of seven. The Leabaudy ascended gracefully and traveled smoothly for some time. Finally the airship began to descend, and drifting almost helplessly, struck the trees. There was a great cracking and rending, and the bag exploded with a loud report. One of the crew was badly njured.

The Leabaudy was 337 feet long, and the naval airship 510 feet. The Clement-Bayard, 300 feet, which also sailed to England from France, is the only dirigible belonging to the Government which remains intact. This craft has not been tried since her arrival last fall.

ELOPING WIFE HELD AT WINNIPEG

Will be Brought Back to Niagara Falls

Special to the Review.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 5—Chief of Police Mains, left for Winnipeg to-day to bring back Mrs. Kennedy, the eloping wife of the Baptist minister. She is held in Winnipeg by the police on a technical charge of theft, having drawn four hundred dollars on a joint account from a bank at Niagara Falls before leaving. Her companion is at liberty no charge being laid against him.

Attack Free List.

Washington, May 5.—Not since the Republican guns were unlimbered against the Democrat free list bill by Minority Leader Mann, over a week ago, has the debate in the House developed such an attack on the measure as was made yesterday by Representative Hill of Connecticut, a Republican member of the ways and means committee, one of the leading Republican advocates of the Canadian reciprocity bill. He declared that instead of $10,000,000 reduction in revenue, as the Democrats expected, the "farmers' free list" might make a reduction of $50,000,000, and that its effect upon business would be to transfer many flourishing industries to Europe.

"You intend to hit the trusts," said Mr. Hill to the Democrats; "you will wake up to find that you have in fact helped the trusts."

INSURANCE FOR WORKERS

State Will Provide for Compulsory Insurance.

Anyone Earning Less Than $800 a Year Subjected to Plan.

London, May 5.—David Lloyd-George, in the House of Commons yesterday, introduced the long-promised plan of state insurance against unemployment, sickness and invalidity.

Every worker whose annual earnings fall below the income tax level of £160 (approximately $800) will be compulsorily insured against illness, so as to assure him the receipt of five shillings per week during his incapacity. Toward this the worker would contribute about one-half, the same being deducted from his wages, while the balance would be paid jointly by his employers and the state.

The weekly assessment against the insured would be eights cents in the case of a man and six cents for a woman.

Every one in the class mentioned between the ages of 16 and 65 is included in the plan. The employers would pay six cents weekly for every employe and the Government contributes four cents for each of the insured.

Lloyd-George estimated that his plan would affect 14,700,000 men and women. Provision is made whereby women will receive 30 shillings in maternity cases on condition that they do not work for a month following child-birth, and for free medical attendance for every contributor.

The state would also help in the crusade against consumption providing $7,500,000 to aid local authorities in building sanitariums and $5,000,000 towards their maintenance.

Although in cases of permanent disability the sick allowance would be five shillings weekly, ten shillings would be allowed for the first three months in the case of men and seven shillings and sixpence in the case of women.

Those who can be shown to have invited incapacity would receive no insurance, though any necessary medical treatment would be provided.

Lloyd-George estimated that the expenditure incurred would be $35,000,000 in 1912-13, rising to $100,000,000 in 1915-16.

Dealing with the unemployed insurance, the Chancellor said that it would at first apply only to the engineering, shipbuilding and house-building trades, involving 2,500,000 workers. Both the workers and the employers would pay five cents weekly each, the state contributing $3,750,000 a year, or about one-fourth of the total cost. The contributors, when unemployed, would receive a maximum of 15 shillings and a minimum of seven shillings weekly. No payments would be made in the case of strikes or lockouts.

J. Austen Chamberlain supported the bill, saying that the Opposition desired to co-operate in the legislation.

REOPENING OF GRAFT CASES

May be Asked for by Woodstock County Council

Special to the Review.

Woodstock, May 5. It is expected that at the next meeting of the County Council, a resolution will be passed asking the Government to re-open the graft cases.

EXPLORERS SAID TO HAVE DISCOVERED SOLOMON'S CROWN

RUSH FOR CORONATION

New York, May 4.—The rush for the coronation began to-day in earnest. At the North German Lloyd piers in Hoboken, there were 2,000 passengers for the steamship George Washington, and so great was the demand for staterooms that nearly all the officers and stewards gave up their rooms.

Want Farmers to Protest.

Concord, N.H., May 5.—Farmers throughout the country are urged to send representatives to Washington to attend the hearings before the Senate committee on finance on the Canadian reciprocity, beginning week of May 8. Mr. Bachelder's communication says:

"The farmers are practically unanimous in opposing what they consider a most unfair discrimination against their interests and if they make their wishes known to their Senators, the reciprocity bill cannot become a law. Delegations of farmers from at least fifteen state granges will attend the hearings to present the views of their members on this important question.

Sold Whisky In Hay Loft.

Galt, May 5.—George Grey, a porter in a local hotel, was fined $100 yesterday for selling liquor in a local option district. He bought supplies in Preston and hid them in a hayloft. He sold only to farmers and outsiders and was doing a good business. Chief Gorman found about one and a half gallons of Scotch whisky in the hayloft.

Big Row Over the Excavations at the Omar Mosque —Explorers Safely Away.

London, May 4.—The operations at Jerusalem of the Anglo-American syndicate of excavators threaten to cause an interesting diplomatic affair. According to to-day's messages from Constantinople, the Turkish Government takes a serious view of the matter and has sent high officials to Jerusalem to investigate the charge that the foreigners despoiled the Mosque of Omar and destroyed and carried away sacred relics hidden from the Romans when the city was sacked by Titus, A.D. 70.

Meantime the present whereabouts of the archaeologists and the nature of their spoils is a mystery. The members of the expedition with their prizes embarked at Jaffa, Palestine, fifty-four miles by railway northwest of Jerusalem, on April 19. They went aboard Captain Harker's yacht, which had been awaiting them, and set sail before the people of Jerusalem learned what they had done. It is probable that the yacht is now heading for England.

There is no doubt that the promoters of the enterprise hoped to discover the Ark of the Covenant and the seven-branched candlestick, but a Constantinople despatch of to-day says it is believed that the explorers found Solomon's crown, his sword and his ring, and an ancient manuscript of the Bible.

The extent of the operations is shown by the statement that $300,000 has been spent by the syndicate, which engaged the engineering experts who had worked on the construction of the London Subway Railroad.

CLEAN UP

This is the clean-up season and the house-keepers probably realize the fact too vividly. It is the time when nature puts on her fresh garments of green, when the buds burst forth into the welcome of the spring sun; the birds join in the merry chorus, and all nature seems to quicken into rosy life.

While Nature is busy making the earth resplendent with her verdue, putting on the new covering that hides the marks of stern old Winter, what do the humans do to keep pace with the forces of revivification? Some of them open the windows that have remained closed all winter, keeping out the health giving fresh air, and for once let the balmy breezes sweep uninterrupted through the close and musty quarters. Some celebrate the gladsome time by tearing up the carpets, turning the house topsy-turvy, and chasing the dust microbes accumulated through months of cold weather, out of the house. And some take the ashes accumulated through the furnace or stove, and to beautify the alleys dump them in a pile at the back yard gate. They leave barrels of garbage around the back yard, throw vegetable matter and decaying refuse around as if it were a health-giving disinfectant. The spring clean-up leaves the interior of the house without dust or spot, but the back yards and the alleys continue to give forth their offensive smell, and to incubate the millions of flies that carry disease in the summer. The eggs of a fly will mature in twelve days; each female fly can produce trillions of flies in a season. It is beginning to be recognized that the fly is the great carrier of disease germs, and that war on this enemy of mankind is entirely ineffective unless waged at the right season. The larvae of the flies should never be permitted to hatch. The breeding places can be easily removed and destroyed in the early spring months, and if all householders would turn into the work of fly-destroying before the hot weather creates the pest by the millions, much would be accomplished towards the preservation of public health and prevention of disease.

The people of Peterborough this spring should make it a point to extend their house-cleaning to their yards and surroundings. The ash pile is quite important; the garbage barrel immensely so. A prime factor in keeping a city clean and beautiful is not only pretty flowers and luxuriant plants decorating the front, but also close attention to the sanitation in the hidden and often neglected yard.

Clean up, ye householders, and do your share towards helping the Horticultural Society make the city most attractive and sanitary. The Board of Health may belong to the cemetery, and should be carted off with other useless accumulation of material, but that reflection should not be taken as an excuse for apathy. Clean-up.

THRIFT

It has been intimated that one half of the troubles of the world are due to a lack of thrift by the people. In the case of individuals is this particularly so, because money, while being the root of all evil, is also the medium of much good. Successful men have laid down a cardinal principle for the guidance of the young man in the flush of optimistic youth. It is a well known principle, and the exemplars of its wisdom will be found in all ranks of activity—never spend as much as you earn. This is the secret of success in financial power, very largely because the young man who has nothing to show for his week's work but indulgence in idle pleasure, will assuredly never get very far. The newspapers yesterday contained the sad story of a suicide of a sixty-year-old man in Toronto "because of pressing debts." Is it not a commentary at once forcible and illustrative that this poor man should have been struggling against an overbearing load of debt at a time when he might look forward to passing his remaining years in at least freedom from the harassing of importunate creditors.

Be it freely and fully granted that many men are unable to lay by much of their earnings because of illness, or accident, or misfortune, but after all there is no man in possession of health and faculties in Canada who should not be able to lay by for the proverbial rainy day a few dollars every month.

The habit of economy, of grading expenditure to fit the expanding or diminishing income is invaluable in the saving of peace of mind, for he is, indeed, a hardened cuss who can philosophically and self-approvingly meet creditors, knowing he is wilfully defrauding them of their rightful money. There are thousands who do it, but this is one of the foundation stones of human worry.

The young man who can cultivate a habit of spending on pleasure, on indulgence in habits that are merely outlets for his earnings, only a fixed proportion of his wages, regulating his expenditure carefully within the proper limit, will soon find himself saving money. And when he has the joy of watching a bank account grow, he will find that some of his fancied necessary indulgences will grow less in importance.

Since money is the basis of independence in this world, and can command all worldly things, it is due to every man that he shall provide in the hey-day of youth and vigor for the declining years, that he be not a charge upon his children or his neighbors. A little capital accumulated in youth, judiciously handled, has been the corner stone of many an independent fortune. Are you trying, even ever so slowly, to accumulate that little capital, that insurance against the possibilities of the future? Or are you, young man, spending all you earn and perhaps more, over the bar, or in wasteful excesses, always waiting for the next pay to help you out of the hole? Think this over!

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Toronto Globe talks of the patience of the Premier in listening to all the boresome speeches in the house. Sir Wilfrid's patience must get considerably more exercising behind the scenes with his followers.

It is denied that the tour of the Sheffield choir is ended, because of the action brought by a theatrical booking agent. The Britishers will find that Canadian soil is the most healthy in every event.

Lindsay merchants are agitating for a shopping week, the Review's suggestion for the benefit of Peterborough being adopted. Why not a shopping week for Peterborough, the city that could hold one with great effect?

A Brighton farmer has found a tobacco box full of bank notes, he hid away seven years ago in his barn, having searched for years. Lapse of memory as to the location caused the loss. This is a case worth recording as it is very seldom nowadays that anyone forgets where available cash is.

The Duke of Connaught promises to be a worthy successor of Earl Grey as publicity commissioner for Canada. In speaking at Glasgow he referred to the number of Scots in Canada, and said he hoped all the British emigrating would make their way to Canada. By the time the Duke has spent six months around Canada, he will be ready to spend the remainder of his natural life in boosting—if he can stay away from Quebec.

The Liberal newspapers are making much of what they are pleased to term the obstructive tactics of the opposition. But they fail to point out that the Liberals have debated reciprocity quite as much as the opposition, and that the government has as yet failed to introduce much of the sessional agenda, preferring to let the session drag. The government doesn't desire to put business through, but is only too willing to have the fateful time of the passing of reciprocity deferred. Its policy has been one of delay and self-obstruction as far as possible.

William Earngey, Kings' Counsel, of Toronto, has been sentenced to three years in the penitentiary for forgery. For years Earngey was a respected lawyer, holding the confidence of a wide circle of friends. It was the great leveler of mankind, liquor, that brought him to a felon's cell, a man with good education, elevated tastes, and appreciation of the seriousness of crime. Booze will level any man to the ranks of the ignorant and criminal if persisted in. The only safe course is to let it alone under all circumstances.

The city firemen have been successful in getting an increase in their salaries; First year men, from $500 to $525; second year men, from $550 to $575, and third year men from $575 to $600. The increase will go into effect on April 1st. The city also appointed two more policemen at $500 per year. The market tolls were awarded to Jos. Girven for $915.00.

Often Saves Human Life

WHEN the doctor is summoned to the farm, it is generally in an emergency case.

Often it is a matter of life or death.

A member of the family has been stricken with sudden illness or an accident has occurred.

Every minute's delay reduces the chances of recovery.

It is then that the Bell Telephone is "worth its weight in gold" to the anxious farmer.

It pays for itself then and there.

Every Farmer needs Telephone Service in his business.

BANK CASES IN SEPTEMBER

Postponed to Get Evidence of Promoter Lindsay

Toronto, May 4.—Chief Justice Meredith in the Criminal Assizes this afternoon consented to a postponement of the Farmers' Bank cases till the September sitting of the court.

This was done following the reading by A. S. Lown, being in part as follows:—

"That I am informed by my solicitor, Mr. H. E. Rose, that he has had a conversation with Mr. J. R. L. Starr, who is solicitor for Mr. Lindsay, and that Mr. Starr has informed him that Mr. Lindsay is at present in the United States, and that while he has no intention of presently returning to Canada and would not return for the purpose of giving evidence in its case, Mr. Starr would undertake to produce him at one of the border cities at a convenient time for examination as a witness, and further, that Mr. Lindsay's business requires him so that probably Mr. Starr would require three or four weeks' notice in order to make a definite appointment for his examination, and I merely believe the facts to be stated by Mr. Starr to Mr. Rose, and that if a postponement of the trial is granted Mr. Lindsay's evidence can be obtained."

Paragraph 5 of the affidavit reads: "That Mr. Lindsay was a sub agent of Mr. W. R. Travers for the sale of stock for the Farmers' Bank, and it was he who procured nearly all the notes that were made by subscribers for the stock. That he can explain the form of such notes and can tell why and upon whose advice and under whose direction the same were taken. That he knows all about the endorsing of them as were endorsed and having been in constant communication with Mr. Travers will be able to tell exactly what use was made of them by Mr. Travers and how the money was obtained that was to be deposited before an application could be made to the Treasury Board for the certificate mentioned in the indictment, and what knowledge the accused had of the transaction."

This affidavit is supported by the affidavits of J. R. Stratton, Robert Hall and J. J. Warren.

PICTURE MACHINE EXPLODED

Operator Narrowly Escaped Being Blinded

While taking flashlight pictures in the Simpson House, Lindsay, W. E. McIntosh, of 18 Humber Street, Toronto, and formerly chef at the Benson House, Lindsay, had his face and head badly burned by a machine exploding. He was taken to Ross Hospital and received treatment, but it remained for Zam-Buk to heal the terrible burns.

Speaking of the affair, Mr. McIntosh says:—"At the hospital I was kept masked night and day for five days. At the end of that time the burns were still very bad and the doctors would not hear of my returning to work. I knew if only I could get some Zam-Buk for the burns I would be back at work in quick time.

"At last I left the hospital and went straight to a local store and bought some Zam-Buk. At the hotel I applied a Zam-Buk dressing, and this cooled the burning pains and gave me quick relief. I kept on with Zam-Buk treatment and returned to work. Within just one week after first commencing with the Zam-Buk treatment the burns were completely healed and I might have defied anybody to detect where they had been."

Upon hearing of the above facts the Zam-Buk Co. communicated with Mr. A. Gillies, the proprietor of the "Lindsay Watchman-Warder" and asked corroboration. Mr. Gillies replied that the facts were as stated and enclosed a report from the newspaper which chronicled the occurence.

There is no doubt that for burns, scalds, cuts, scratches and abrasions however serious, Zam-Buk is the finest known remedy. It is also a sure cure for eczema, piles ulcers, abscesses, bad sores, children's rashes, and eruptions, sore feet, chafings, insect stings, inflamed wounds, festering and skin diseases generally. Zam-Buk Soap should be used in conjunction with the balm for washing wounds and sore places. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk, 50c. box and Zam Buk Soap at 25c. per tablet, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

HERE'S A TRIO OF SMART YOUTHS

A Fake Telegram Made Out and Sent to Bell Boy

An ingenious plan for getting a companion bell-boy released from his engagement at a local hotel was hit upon by two other youths who had just vacated similar occupations at the same hotel. The three lads were chums who just drifted into the city positions with the hotel in question. Tiring apparently, however, of their work, they quit, but the third youth was unable to secure his money, the regulations of the hotel requiring him to give the proprietor ten days' notice.

The other two lads put their heads together and as a result the following telegram was despatched to the bell-boy at the hotel.

March 5th, 1911.

J. Archibald,
Peterborough,
Come home at once.
ALBERT.

It was thought that this obviously important telegram would be instrumental in securing the discharge of the bell-boy when shown to the proprietor.

Up to the time of writing it is not known whether the clever ruse was successful or not.

The end of the day left hog products irregular, strung out from 2½c rise to 15c decline.

FAVOR GRANT FOR SCHOOLS

Finance Committee Falls in Line With Board of Education

The City Finance Committee met a deputation from the Board of Education last night and discussed the proposed expenditure of $16,000 on the Public school improvements at the King Edward and Central schools.

It was finally decided that the Finance Committee recommend to the City Council that the Sschool Board's request for $16,000 for school repairs be granted and debentures be issued to raise that amount. The deputation was represented by Messrs. W. H. Hill, Col. Miller, Dr. Morrison, V. Eastwood and Inspector Mowat. Mayor Morrow and Aldermen Bradburn, Metheral, Duncan and Buller composed the Finance Committee.

Regarding the question the law provides that the Council shall provide the money needed for such purposes and that the Board of Education have full control of its expenditure. Dr. Morrison pointed out that in undertaking the repairs, the Central school will be put into a first-class condition which will endure for years to come.

Inspector Mowat argued that nad it not been for the adoption of the half-day system in the Kindergarten and primary forms at the King Edward that the children attending could not have all been accommodated.

The Finance Committee were favorably disposed in viewing the request. Ald. Bradburn believed that money well spent by the Board was for the welfare of the community at large. The city would not flourish without first-class educational facilities. Mayor Morrow thought that Peterborough had a very good School Board, that took an active interest in the character and worth of the schools.

A request from the Canadian Free Library for the Blind was allowed to stand until the clerk writes for more information.

LOTS OF WORK FOR IMMIGRANTS

No Trouble Having Them Placed With Farmers

The urgent demand for farm laborers at present is not in the least abating, and Mr. Howson stated to-day to the Review that if he had a hundred men available, he could place them right off, with no delay or trouble. The figures for the number of immigrants placed this year up to May 1st, when compared to the same time in 1910, show an increase just double. The demand this year has been experienced earlier as in May and June last year the largest numbers were placed. To-morrow the immigrant officer predicts will be a busy day with him. A considerable number of immigrants who were billed to arrive here this week are necessarily detained at Gras Island in the St. Lawrence river by the quarantining of their steamer the "Dominion," which had a couple of cases of smallpox on board. The steamer will be quarantined for twenty-one days.

LIBRARY BOARD REGULAR SESSION

T. A. S. Hay Appointed Curator of Museum Exhibits

They Are to be Removed to the Public Library

At the regular meeting of the Public Library Board last evening there were present the chairman, E. H. D. Hall, Dr. McNulty and Messrs. T. F. Matthews, D. Spence, D. Walker, J. Corkery, H. Ritchie, A. Mowat and H. R. H. Kenner.

A letter was received from T. A. S. Hay with reference to the removal of exhibits to the library from the Victoria Museum at east Nicholls Park, and asking that he be appointed curator of the exhibits.

It was moved by Mr. Kenner, seconded by Mr. McNulty and carried, that Mr. Hay be appointed curator, and that the thanks of the Board be tendered him for his interest and devotion to this work.

The Board decided to subscribe for the Monthly Bulletin of the Toronto Public Library, and also that Hon. J. R. Stratton be requested to secure for the public library the maps and publications issued by the King's Printer, and that the library be placed on the mailing list.

The librarian read his report of the eleventh annual meeting of the Ontario Library Association, held at Toronto in April, and the Board extended congratulations to him on being selected as a member of the executive.

The finance report, read by Mr. Walker in the absence of the chairman, Mayor Morrow, was adopted as follows—

To the Peterborough Public Library Board.

Gentlemen,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows—

That the following accounts be paid—Grumiaux N. & S. Co., $2.50; F. J. Hartz Co., $2.50; Ontario Coal Co., $30; F. M. Dela Fosse, $8; Robt. Appleton Co., $6.40; Bell Telephone Co., $11.30; F. R. J. Mr. Walker reported that to date there were 1,574 members of the library, and that 10,294 books had been taken out since the library opened.

A number of communications regarding publications of the library were also dealt with.

WALL PAPERS, ARTISTIC AND PRACTICAL---DRAPES TO MATCH

It's surprising how people's ideas change—only a few years ago the papering of the home was more of a necessity than a means of beautifying. We introduced into Peterboro the more artistic lines and ideas of wall papering with the result that something materially more than wall papering is being looked for every day. We do not claim the entire credit for this state of affairs, for others have a claim as well, then too the natural trend of civilized advancement is toward the more artistic ideas, yet we have catered for this trade ever since the commencement of our now thoroughly established wall paper section and have now an enviable name for our department.

There is a great advantage, in furnishing the home; to be able to choose wall paper, drapes and floor coverings all in one section of the one store and not have to travel all over the city hunting for colors and patterns to match. We buy for the three departments (Rugs, Wall Paper and Drapes) with this in view, and the result is that our customers are easily satisfied and get their needs without extra worry, and ultimately become enthusiasts in our mode of decorating and home furnishing. Come and see our latest 1911 ideas. Stocks are most complete and reasonably priced. Sat. we offer extra specials, note these:—

RETAIL MERCHANTS UNANIMOUS FOR INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT

Pass Resolution in Favor of Retention of the Commissioner

Addresses by Association Officials—Thos. Barrie New President

The local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association promises to become a real live organization, as a result of the meeting at the Hotel National last evening, when about twenty-five merchants were urged by representatives of the Dominion Association, to become better organized, and put forth greater effort as an organized body, in regard to the questions of the day, which are of vital importance, as to their success as retail merchants.

Mr R. G Kingan, president of the local association, was the chairman of the evening and introduced the speakers of the occasion, Mr. E. M. Trowera, Dominion secretary, and Mr. H. A. Harrington, of Toronto, who has been in the city for several days, making arrangements for the meeting.

NEW OFFICERS.

The officers for the ensuing year were as follows:

President—Thos. Barrie.
1st Vice-President—T. H. Adams.
2nd Vice-President—Keith G. Lech.
Treasurer—Jas. Connal.
Secretary—H. V. Duggan.

A RESOLUTION.

The meeting expressed its unanimous approval of the continuance of the office of Industrial Commissioner and the following resolution was passed;

To his Honor Mayor Morrow, and the Council of the City of Peterborough:—

At a meeting of the Retail Merchant's Association held in the National Hotel on Thursday, May the fourth, it was moved, seconded and carried;

That the Retail Merchants Association in regular meeting unanimously recommend the continuance in office of the present Industrial Commissioner for another year and consider it would be a mistake to make any change either in the office of the incumbent.

That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Mayor and to the City Clerk for presentation to the Council.

After luncheon Mr. Trowern was called upon to address the meeting. As Dominion secretary he has been fighting the Co-operative Bill which has been before the House for four years.

He had much interesting information for the merchants and he received an attentive hearing throughout. Retail merchants, he said, were in a class by themselves and they had been neglected. The Canadian Retail Associationn had been organized to help them. It was the duty of the organization to see that its representatives in Parliament were well posted on commercial matters so that they could be in a position to look after the interests of the merchants. The present legislation regarding merchants had been copied from the United States, where it had been used to make a fight against the trusts. It had been unsuccessful.

The speaker went on to show how it was possible for merchants to meet together, consider certain things to their interests and then carry them out, by the present organization.

EASY MARKS.

"We are the easiest class of people going," he said, as he explained that the retail merchants are the last to handle goods, and in many cases they hand out the goods and trust to luck to get the money. "Why should we not have the right to fix the prices so as to ensure a fair profit?" he asked, and why should we be loaded up with goods and left to swim alone? Now was the time to say that we were not going to handle the goods for nothing. Because one man who doesn't know how to handle his own business and cuts the prices, shouldn't mean that the others should suffer. As a body the merchants should say to the wholesaler, "If you supply that man with goods and permit him to cut the price, we will not deal with you."

In speaking along these lines Mr. Trowern brought out the object of the Retail Association of Canada as a protecting force. He gave the history of the Co-operative Bill, which was brought to Canada by the present Governor-General, he being president of the Co-operative Alliance of Great Britain. He also explained the methods employed to do business.

In Glasgow he said was to be seen one of these big concerns, amidst hundreds of empty stores, the merchants having been driven out of business through the co-operative stores grasping everything. The system was nothing less than the old Trading Stamp scheme in another rig. He characterized the system as a fraud, and stated that it was his duty to hang up a red light. The Canadian Association hoped to defeat the bill and in this work the assistance of all associations was wanted. One branch of trade was not effective, as the government would not pay any attention to the request.

In conclusion besides touching on the practice of peddlers, Mr. Trowern urged that Peterborough merchants make their association a living force; to put a price on their goods by which they could make a profit, and look out for themselves generally.

Mr. Kingan and Industrial Commissioner Duggan followed with some remarks, in which they urged the merchants to organize and work together. Mr. Duggan showed how the proportion of all municipal interests contributed directly to their interests. Here was an important question for them to take part in.

Mr. Harrington touched upon matters of interest to the merchants, giving further information as to the harm done by the co-operative stores, and commented on the present day practice of merchants using discount stamps. He read the law which governs this matter, and which leaves the merchants open to imprisonment one of year and a fine not exceeding $500.

He spoke strongly, too, against the Library vote system. All these evils, he held, could be done away with if the merchants would only organize and work together.

PETERBOROUGH BALL CLUB AWAY ON A GOOD START

Ab. Quinlan the Choice for Manager—First Game Here May 24

The Peterboro Baseball Club held its annual meeting in the Oriental parlors last evening, when the officers for the coming season were elected and other business discussed.

The club has entered the Midland League and the fans are assured of some fast ball this season. The league is composed of Peterboro, Cobourg, Port Hope and Bowmanville. Lindsay dropped out and Bowmanville took up their dates.

There are a number of good players in the city, as last year's city league fixtures will indicate. As this is to be a "Peterboro Team" the only qualification necessary is to be a ball player and comply with the rules of the league. The players will be picked according to their relative merits.

Ab. Quinlan, besides being on the pitching staff, will be on the managerial end of the team, and with the necessary co-operation will no doubt make good as he knows the game and has had considerable experience with players.

The following officers were elected last night.

Patrons and patronesses—Hon. J.R. Stratton and Mrs. Stratton, T.E. Bradburn, M.P.P., Mr. and Mrs. E. G Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. D. O'Connell, Mr. R. Dobie, and Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Graham.

Hon. Pres.—W. H. Denham.
Hon. Vice-Pres.—Ex. Ald. H. Phelan
President—R. M. Glover.
Vice-Pres.—Fred. Trebilcock.
Sect.-Treas.—J. J. Dorris.
Assts. Sect.-Treas., who will also be a member of the executive — F. D. Craig.
Manager—A. Quinlan.
Executive—E. Hurtubise, G. Curtis, F. D. Craig, J. G. Coughlin and Dr. Wightman.

J. J. Dorris, who was the representative at the Midland League meeting, and later elected secretary of that body, gave a report of the meeting which embodied the qualifications of players certificates to be issued, etc., and also the schedule which read as follows:

May 24.
Port Hope at Cobourg.
Bowmanville at Peterboro.
June 3.
Peterboro at Port Hope.
Cobourg at Bowmanville.
June 10.
Port Hope at Bowmanville.

Peterboro at Port Hope.
Cobourg at Bowmanville.
August 5.
Port Hope at Peterboro.
Bowmanville at Cobourg.
August 12.
Peterboro at Bowmanville.
Cobourg at Port Hope.

Peterboro's first game will be with Bowmanville on May 24, and as Bowmanville is highly touted there promises to be a good opener.

The uniforms of the club are to be of white duck with blue stockings and trimmings and a "Cleveland" cap.

The manager was authorised to confer with Trebilcock Bros. regarding the purchasing of the uniforms.

There will be another practice tomorrow afternoon at Riverside Park when any ball player in the city who wishes to try for a place on the team is requested to turn out.

Before adjourning, the secretary was requested to send a letter of condolence to the family of the late W. J. Metheral.

A vote of thanks was tendered to C. G. Graham for the use of the parlours

DUST FROM THE DIAMOND

Rube Waddell, Mugsey McGraw, Davey Jones

Joe Rickert, secretary of the Browns tells some new stories about Rube Waddell, former Brown left-hander.

"One day after a game in Philadelphia, the Rube came to me and wanted to draw a hundred dollars," said Rickert. "He said he needed it badly."

"I finally argued him down to $75 and then to $50. I was going to give him $50, when I remembered I had the day's receipts in my pocket and knew if I pulled out the roll Rube would want all of it.

"I had some change in another pocket. I pulled it out and said. "Rube here's how much I've got—$1.10."

"Well, gimme 50 cents of it,' Rube said."

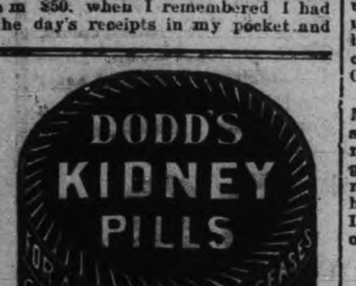
The sacrifice hit has not lost its value in base ball and will not drop out of use as long as men of strategy and brains are at the head of big league clubs, in the opinion of Johnny McGraw, manager of the Giants.

"Times and methods change," says McGraw. There is a place for the sacrifice hit, but the sacrifice hit need not be permitted to become all of the game. I have not said that the sacrifice hit has become a discard, as I have been credited with saying, but I do say that I can win games without letting it become my master."

Davey Jones' playing is drawing wide comment this spring. Davey is playing the best brand of base ball during his career as a Tiger. But the thing that is most pleasing in the performance is his throwing. As a thrower, Davey never looked like a demon. Many players regarded him weak.

This year Jones has caught two runners at the plate by making perfect throws. He appears to have a new arm. But David's arm is no stronger than in other years; neither is his aim better. Davey has eliminated the hop and step from his throwing.

Formerly when Jones threw to the infield, he took a hop and a step before letting go of the ball. This year he does not advance. He throws as soon as he gets the ball without the old wind-up and hop and step. He is throwing probably a second faster than in other years and manages to get visiting players who have not learned this fact.



C.G.E. ELEVEN GO TO HAVELOCK

Midland Football League Opener —Church League Games

The C.G.E. football club will play their first Midland league fixture of the season to-morrow, when they journey to Bowmanville to play that team.

The players are requested to be at the C.P.R. station at 11.15 o'clock to catch the 11.26 train.

Goal—Jones.
Backs—Hall, Menamee.
Half-Backs—Mason, Pagett and Bridge.
Forwards—Corless, Freach, Miller, Boycott, and Williams.
Spares—Patterson and Newton.

Lakefield play at Bethany to-morrow.

CHURCH LEAGUE

Three games will be played in the Church League to-morrow afternoon.

All Saints, who were defeated by the Y.M.C.A. last Saturday, play Park St. on All Saints' grounds. Park Street was also defeated Saturday, and the teams are pretty evenly matched.

St. James and St. Johns, both winning teams in the opening games, will meet, and should be a great struggle. Each team is confident of carrying off the ribbons.

The Y.M.C.A. team will likely be without the services of a couple of their men, but they have others who will play in their places. Knox team, the opponents "Y" plays, will not have Corless, their fast forward, as he plays with C.G.E. at Bowmanville, and this will even matters.

The Knox grounds are short and rough, and this will handicap the Y.M.C.A. as they are used to playing on Riverside.

The line-up of Park Street team for the game with All Saints is:—

Goal—Renshaw.
Backs—Collett, Cole.
Half-Backs—Pitcher, Marks, Biddle or Mullowney.
Forwards—Follis, Tolley, Haynes, Thorne, Dawson.
Spares—H. Foster, Briscow, P. Foster.

Goal, Jones; backs, Rew and Robinson; half-backs, Hooper Hildreth and Willis; forwards, Abbott, Edwards, Curtis, Dawson and Moraity. Spares Dudley and Downes.

Dr. Pulkinghorn will referee.

The following players are asked to be at the Patterson street grounds to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon at 2 o'clock, to play for the Y.M.C.A. against Knox team—Fleming, McPherson, Fitzgerald, Hampton, Adams, Tarte, Boness, Flowers, Kerr, Caniff, Miller, Ingram, Lean.

Y.M.C.A. SPORT

The Riverside athletic field was the scene of a battle royal yesterday, when the Aeroplanes and Dreadnought baseball teams fought desperately to prove which of these two aggregations was the most formidable. After the Aeroplanes took a few ascensions, and the Dreadnoughts ceased firing the score was found to be a tie, three to three. Batteries—Dreadnoughts, Canniff and Tait; Aeroplanes, Anderson and Jewell.

Saturday afternoon the outers of the Outing Club will take a trip to the woods. Every boy in the department should take advantage of these Saturday afternoon outings. Picnics will be conducted as the weather gets more suitable. Are you a member of the Outing Club? Get in line; no cost. Meet at building Saturday at two p.m.

The "Pillpounders" held a very enjoyable "At Home" in the Conservatory of Music Hall last night.

The committee, Messrs. Charlie Primeau, Claude Brady, Vincent Sullivan and G. R. Ross, who was honorary secretary, is to be congratulated upon the success of the affair. The hall was artistically decorated for the occasion by Gerner's. The opera house orchestra supplied the music in a very capable manner.

Coleman Bros. catered in their usual acceptable manner.

The patrons and patronesses were Mr. and Mrs. J. Lynch, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Kemp, Dr. and Mrs. Eastwood, and Mr. and Mrs. McDermid.

KNEE GAVE OUT

Bill Fitzpatrick Had to Quit Baseball for Some Time

"Bill" Fitzpatrick, who early in the season signed with the Dayton Baseball Club, of the Central League, has had to quit the game on account of his knee going back on him. "Bill," it will be remembered, met with an accident at Dundas when he played with the local rugby team. During the spring training he has worked at first base, and while the injury is rather serious, he hopes to get back into the game this summer.

BASEBALL

A very successful meeting was held in the Y.M.C.A. parlors last night for the purpose of discussing the prospects of forming a juvenile baseball league in the city.

The boys seem quite enthusiastic over the outlook.

The qualifications and rules which are to govern the league were discussed and it was decided to hold another meeting in the Y.M.C.A. at 8 o'clock Monday evening when representatives of teams wishing to enter are asked to be present.

If four teams can be secured the league will be organized at that meeting and the schedule drawn up.

THE WORK OF THE Y.W.C.A. AS SHOWN IN ANNUAL REPORTS

BOARD OF MANAGEMENT.

During the year 1910-11 the Board has held nine regular meetings with an average attendance of 14.

The past year is the first in the twenty years of our existence in which the Board has not had to cope with a standing debt. The mortgage being paid off a year ago it has been our happy experience, with but one exception, that the monthly expenses have been met. These expenses ar continually increasing with our work.

The Physical Culture Department has been practically self-supporting this year. Miss Coventry's work has been most satisfactory and we hope to have her with us again next year.

It is the desire of the Board to bring this branch of our work within the reach of every member of the association and we look for larger classes during the coming year. Instead of an enrollment of some 160 girls we should have at least 500 in this town of business women.

The Board feel much indebted to Miss Addison, of Annesley Hall, Toronto, who came here to speak at our educational rally. Miss Addison's address was most practical and helpful and was thoroughly appreciated by the large number present.

During the month of January the Board secured the services of Miss Blodgett to conduct a series of Bible classes.

The classes proved most successful. Miss Blodgett was with us for two weeks. The first meetings were held in our own building, but it being impossible to accommodate the people adjournment was made first to the Murray street church and then to St. Paul's church, where the attendance at the last three meetings reached 700.

In conjunction with a committee of Peterborough ladies the Board endeavored to open a creche.

The association provided a heated room and food for the children for five days in the week. Owing to both a lack of patronage and lack of funds the committee was obliged to close it after about a month's trial.

The world's week of prayer was observed by the Board. Two special meetings being held, one being a joint meeting with the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.W.C.A.

Our general secretary attended both the summer conference at Muskoka and the Dominion Council in Ottawa, bringing back with her valuable information to assist in our work in Peterborough. Under the supervision of Miss Weir the educational department has been practically progressive during the past year. Through this medium a number of citizens have rendered the association valuable service.

We would extend our hearty thanks to the following ladies and gentlemen for holding classes and delivering lectures for us:—Miss Wood, Miss McKee, Rev. H. R. Trumpour, Judge Huycke, Rev. Dr. Marsh, Dr. McCullough, Dr. McPherson.

The Board of Education for use of Domestic Science room.

The boarding home is still under the satisfactory management of Mrs. Read.

Our general secretary, Miss McCalla, will be with us during the coming year. Under her guidance we feel the influence of the association to be extending in every way and we ask each member to render all the assistance possible to make our work a power for good.

E. MAUDE STEVENSON,
Sec. of Board.

FINANCIAL REPORT.

It affords me much pleasure to present to you my second annual report. We have had a prosperous year and many have testified to their enjoyment of their sojourn with us.

Our whole building has been renovated and presents a pleasing appearance.

Every department has been replenished, and is in a good condition.

Our hot water system has been very satisfactory all winter. Now we have the kitchen tank for general purposes.

We present a clean sheet, as regards our bills. Our cellar is well stored with fruit and canned vegetables.

Our meals give satisfaction, and we have many outsiders coming.

During July and August we almost paid our expenses, which shows that we are better [illegible] hope every holiday season to be well filled, also to keep up our reputation for a comfortable home.

We have had several times sixty boarders during June, September, October and March.

My financial reports shows $1,067.75 more received than last year, which I submit to you.

Yours faithfully,
FLORENCE READ,
Superintendent.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

In presenting this report, the 20th annual, it is with a deep sense of gratitude to our Heavenly Father for permitting us in a small measure to be of service in His vineyard, though our work has been so imperfectly done, and we must very often have disappointed our Leader, yet He has never failed us, but has ever been our wisdom and strength.

The foundation of the Y.W.C.A. and the highest phase of its work and that element which should permeate its every department, is the spirit of devotion to Christ and His ideals; therefore, that department which especially emphasizes the spiritual will be first considered.

The daily evening prayers bring help and inspiration to those of us who in the hurry of every day life take time to turn aside for these few moments of praise and worship. Occasionally we welcome one and another of the ministers. This brings them into closest touch and interest with our home life, and has brought some, at least, of the girls into closer touch with their own church.

The Sunday afternoon service is one of the bright spots in the week. The class is organized, and one and another of the committees is responsible for each meeting. The average attendance has been 24.

The Bible class tea and study each Friday evening continues to prove a helpful and attractive feature of the work; and some, at least, would never have been been brought into touch with the Association, but for this hour.

The fortnightly service at the Protestant Home has been carried on throughout the year and is enjoyed by the old people and the faithful singers who never fail us.

Besides visiting is done at the hospital, and we only hope that we have left in cheer what we have carried away in blessing.

In November the World's Week of Prayer was observed.

A guest who will long be remembered was Miss Michi Kawai, a clever young Japanese woman who charmed us all by her earnestness and originality, and our eyes were opened to the real work that our representative, Miss Macdonald, is doing in Japan. As a result of her address $65 was forwarded for our foreign work.

We acknowledge our gratitude to God in that He used us in bringing real blessing to so large a number through the two weeks' series of Bible studies given by Miss Blodgett in January, when the afternoon meetings grew from 150 to 700. We would again thank the pastors and the church officers and all who so heartily co-operated with us in making this possible.

It was again my privilege to attend the Summer Conference at Lake Joseph, Muskoka, and the Triennial Convention in Ottawa. It means much to the secretary and the work to meet with the strong leaders, those who have solved our problems; also it is most stimulating to meet with others engaged in the the same work and to discuss with them ways and means for bringing our own standard up to the highest.

Educational.—That the Y.W.C.A. stands as an educational factor in the community is conclusively shown by the report just presented by Miss Weir. Two hundred and forty-three registered in class, with one hundred and fifty class sessions, and [illegible] attendance [illegible] thousand and fifty-five, surely something has been accomplished. Looking backward over the year's class work many helpful hours are recalled, and I would add my work of appreciation and thanks to the lecturers and teachers, who have been so generous and kind in giving their services, also to Miss Weir, and the committee for sharing so largely the responsibility and work. Social—as the essence of Christianity is the spirit of joy and happiness, the social element is fostered in our Y.W.C.A. continuous succession of happy social evenings have enjoyed by an ever growing number of girls. In all, fourteen parties have been planned and participated in by some five hundred and fifty girls. In addition to these planned evenings, a number of very informal half hours after class sessions have been enjoyed. Our lawn is being prepared for tennis and croquet. The Athletic ticket is again 25c. for members of the Association, and 50c. for non members. We shall be pleased to receive the names of those who wish to join this season. We would thank the Social and Music Committees and Miss Coventry for their assistance at all times; also those who have contributed to our programs.

Junior—Apart from the gymnasium work so satisfactorily conducted by Miss Coventry, our Junior work has not been satisfactory. The children have enjoyed the Saturday afternoons play and story hour, and several little parties given them, but other than this, no organized work has been done. This has been for lack of workers, not only in this department but in every department of our work.

One of the disappointments is that the membership does not grow in proportion to the interest taken in the Association. We are gratified however, to state that 95 p.c. of our members are enrolled as class members.

No attempt at detail or summary could give any adequate conception of the general office work, including the information bureau, correspondence, interviews, clerical work, telephone calls and business of all kinds with innumerable and varied demands on time and sympathy. Much personal work has been done which cannot be reported.

We would thank the Educational Board for allowing us the use of the Domestic Science room in the Central School, also we would express our indebtedness and thanks to the press for their courtesy at all times and kindness in donating to the Public Reading Room a copy of their respective papers.

We are grateful for the fine spirit of co-operation throughout the Association, for the interest of the members, the increased interest of the churches and pastors, for the faithful work of our Board members. Each year opens up new work. There must be extension and development. We need more members and more money to overtake the work. Shall we, the women of Peterboro, young and old, use this building for the great purpose for which it was built, the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom in the hearts and lives of many young girls and women. In order to do this we must have a much larger membership, the co-operation of every member, the transfusion of the whole Association spirit into each so called department of work.

The work at times is difficult but not too difficult if united, workers under the leadership of Him in whose name and for whose sake the Young Women's Christian Association has been instituted and is being promoted.

Faithfully submitted,
MARY D. McCALLA,
General Secretary.

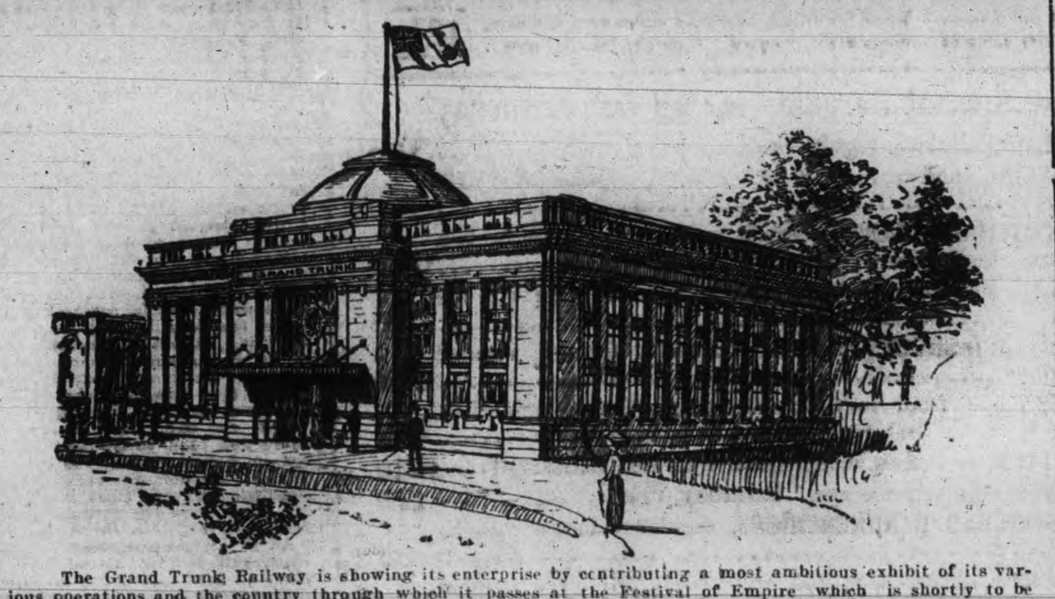
FESTIVAL OF EMPIRE, CRYSTAL PALACE, LONDON, ENGLAND, THIS YEAR



The Grand Trunk Railway is showing its enterprise by contributing a most ambitious exhibit of its various operations and the country through which it passes at the Festival of Empire which is shortly to be held at Crystal Palace, London. This exhibit will be housed in a building of which the above is a model and which is an exact copy of the new Station at Ottawa.

The Grand Trunk does much to enlighten travellers, prospective travellers, and settlers in the beauty and possibilities to be obtained in Canada.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A BRIDE TO BE

The Canadian Northern Steamship Company is receiving many applications from English girls who, as one puts it, would like to come to Canada "to be a prospective bride." From a batch of letters written by young women, here is one taken at random, and much like the rest of them—

"I am an English girl and would like to go to Canada, and I would like a young man for my husband, and my age is 20 on the third of may. Please let me know if you advance the passage fare. If you do, write back and let me know when you want me to come. So I will close xxxxxx with fond love and kisses, because I am a poor girl and I would like somewhere from home because we are thirteen in famley with father and mother, and we have six sisters if you would like more than one from the same famley."

Grimsby town hall, built in 1857, will be torn down and a Carnegie library built.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS

SUMMMER FEEDING FOR THE POULTRY

Subject of Paper Read to Poultry Association

Varied Food With Lots of Fresh Clean Water

The reading of a paper on "Summer Feeding of Poultry" at the regular meeting of the Poultry Association last night added much to the interest of the evening. There was a good attendance of members, and President J. T. C. Lang was in the chair. He also read the paper, which was contributed by Mr. J. H. Callender.

SUMMER FEEDING.

Summer feeding of poultry is apt to be allowed to take care of itself, rather more than during the winter months, because it seems to have become a simple matter. The necessity of providing the fowls with every item of their diet when housed up closely, keeps the attendant watchful all the time, and often this is the season when the best results are obtained.

When spring opens up, however, it looks as if the fowls could do some foraging for themselves, and the the close attention is relaxed, until one naturally falls into a careless, haphazard way of feeding the birds Possibly, closely to keep them within bounds also. These small spots have long since forgotten how to produce grass or other green feed. How necessary then to be just as careful with the summer feeding as we are in winter.

We are inclined to feel that as eggs are cheaper in summer the keeping up of the egg supply is not so important then, but there is the feed to pay for just the same, and the hens must produce more eggs at the lower price, in order to keep up the profit end of the business.

The question of what the feeding rations should consist of is not so important as the matter of making it a varied one, grain of some kind, meat of some kind, with lots of fresh, clean water always, covers this point.

For the benefit of those who may not have learned the method of supplying green food by sprouting oats, not only doing this, but increasing the bulk of the fold, the following directions might be useful.

Soak the oats for twenty-four hours and then turn them into a box or basket which will not hold water. Moisten the oats night and morning, turning them over with the hand until the sprouts appear. They will very soon throw out roots if set in a warm place near the stove. When this happens spread them out about an inch thick on trays of any kind that are easiest to make. After that do not disturb the oats, but keep them well moistened. In a short time there will be a sod about three inches thick, that will be relished by the hens in a way that will do your heart good to see. Feed only what they will eat up clean and by starting a new lot every few days, the green food question is solved, and the cost reduced at the same time.

If other meat foods is hard to get, try breeding maggots. Mix bran and water to a sloppy condition, and let stand in the sun for a day or two. It does not take it long to turn into a pailful of lively water maggots that will start biddy singing the song. Where free range is provided this method might be followed without noticeable evils resulting. But the penned up city flock is no better situated in relation to foraging ground than it was in the winter. The occasional foolish insect that ventures within the precincts of the hen-yard, is quickly caught and executed, but the chances to participate in the game are entirely too few to supply the demand for animal food. Then there is a green feed. We tramp over fresh green lawns, and see nice bunches of clover along the roadside, and are apt to forget that inside the chicken yard not a blade of green is to be seen, while the longing, for such food is always present.

We must remember that it takes variety to keep the hens in egg-producing condition in winter, and naturally to make the young flock grow the best, the well-varied ration should be kept up.

Many poultry yards in the city are just as small a corner as the owner feels like sparing from his little garden, and the chicks are kept confined we all enjoy to hear.

The whole matter resolves itself into the question of making nature's conditions as near as possible available for the hens and chicks that are shut up, and the attention to detail is almost invariably well rewarded.

Oats in the process of sprouting may be seen at 114 Hunter street, East City, at any time any of the interested poultrymen wish to call.

Frank Cody saved Mr. Joseph Norman, who fell from a plank bridge into the Speed river near Guelph.

Are They Comfortable ?

Many persons have difficulty in keeping their Spectacles from slipping down upon the nose and hurting the ears. We are fitting beautiful Spectacles of new form, that are the acme of comfort, and owing to the formation of the inconspicuous solid Gold Pads at the side of the nose, there is no marking of the nose crest or cutting behind the ears, and then too, they will not slip down. Optical Institute patrons who use them remark "That is the very kind of spectacles I have been looking for." A lady remarked "I would not do without those spectacles for $100.

U.S. HAS FLIM-FLAMMED MR. BRODEUR ON THE FISHERIES QUESTION, SAYS J. D. TAYLOR

American Senate Has Made Drastic Changes—Militia Estimates Submitted by Sir Frederick Borden.

Ottawa, May 6.—J. D. Taylor (New Westminster), in the Commons yesterday discussed the fisheries treaty with the United States. He said the Congressional records at Washington showed that so far, from the size of the meshes of the nets being the limit of the proposed alterations, as Hon. Mr. Brodeur had stated to Parliament, the American Senate had made the most drastic alterations in the regulations. Indeed the fate of the treaty was problematical.

Mr. Taylor declared that the Minister was being played with by the other parties to the agreement. There had been a breach of international honor. There had been a gross breach of the written pledge of honor in striking out clauses of the agreement. One of the most valuable considerations Canada had received was the agreement to regulate fishing on Puget Sound, where Canadian salmon were being wantonly destroyed with traps without any regulations whatever to control the destruction. This regulation had been stricken out. He had no doubt the same was going on in Lake Erie.

Mr. Taylor said the Minister of Marine and Fisheries was confronted with the most serious duty, namely, to see that in an affair of this kind honor was observed. The time had passed, he said, when sharp practice should be allowed to continue.

Hon. L. P. Brodeur explained that the delay in bringing the regulations into effect was due to the fact that in the United States the treaty making power was vested in the Senate, which had not yet seen fit to pass upon them.

President Taft had sent a message to the Senate recommending the ratification of the regulations, with the exception of certain provisions relating to Lake Huron, and not Lake Erie, as had been stated.

Hon. Mr. Foster argued that the treaty itself, having been ratified by both Great Britain and the United States, it was therefore, binding and neither country had a right to vary the terms of the treaty, except by joint revision. Mr. Foster declared that the Minister had defended the attitude of the American Government. At any rate, he had not entered a protest on behalf of Canada. Mr. Brodeur denied this.

Mr. Brodeur could not see what right the American Senate had to revise the regulations under its treaty making powers, although it might have the right under its legislative. The American contention, he said, was wrong, from the standpoint of common sense.

In the House yesterday, preceeding the consideration of the estimates of the Militia Department, Sir Frederick Borden submitted an explanatory statement. He pointed out that the increase in the ordinary vote were: Annual drill, $150,000; clothing, $100,000; Royal Military College, $25,000, and cadet corps (new vote), $50,000. The first increase was due to provision for 4,000 additional troops, and a larger camp at Petawawa. The training establishment of the ensuing year would total 60,000 men and 13,000 horses. The new vote for the cadet corps included $15,000 for permanent force instructors, $14,000 for expense of school teachers at military schools of instruction, $10,000 as allowances to school teachers who have qualified as instructors at the rate of $1 each cadet instructed, and $11,000 for equipment of cadets instructed. The only additional cost in the pay of the staff will be for six general staff officers, for which $20,000 is asked. Four of these are to fill positions in the new divisional organizations in eastern Canada, which are to take the place of commands and districts, one at headquarters and one for the west—namely, the three districts west of Port Arthur.

Substantial increases of certain officials in the Customs and Postoffice Department, are given notice of by Messrs. Paterson and Lemieux. Mr. Lemieux gives notice that it is expedient to amend the Postoffice Act, by providing for increase of salaries of superintendents of city postoffices, until a maximum of $2,500 is reached. The present maximum is $1,800. Also to raise the minimum and maximum salaries of railway mail clerks to $500 and $1,400 respectively. The present minimum is $400 and the maximum $1,400. An amendment to the Civil Service Act will change the classification of the clerks in the city postoffices, offices of the postoffice inspectors, offices of the superintendent of railway mail service, and in the money order exchange offices, by abolishing the stampers and sorters class and fourth-class clerkships, and substituting third-class clerkships, ranging from $500 to $1,000, and divided into two classes to be known as third-class "A" and "B."

It is also proposed to abolish junior and second-class clerkships and substitute classes "A" and "B" of the second-class, and increasing the number of the class formerly known as junior second, to $1,200, and increasing the maximum of the former senior second-class to $1,400. First-class clerkships will be divided into divisions "A" and "B," with salaries of $1,800 and $1,600 respectively. The minimum salaries of first-class clerkships will be increased from $1,200 to $1,400, and a new class of clerks, to be known as chief clerks, will be created in city postoffices, subject to certain restrictions.

DIAZ WILL GIVE IT UP

Mexican President Determined to Resign.

Long Conference Held With His Cabinet Yesterday.

Mexico City, May 6.—The resignation of Porfirio Diaz as President of Mexico within a very short time is regarded here as certain. Should the announcement of his intention to resign be made to-day, it would cause no surprise to the members of the Cabinet.

No authoritative confirmation of this could be secured, but there appears little doubt that President Diaz, recognizing the seriousness of the situation and responding to the popular demand, will retire when order is restored.

At the President's office yesterday no statement could be secured, and the members of the Cabinet, realizing that Diaz was the only man who could give a direct answer to the demands of Francisco I. Madero, jr., the revolutionary leader, that Diaz should make known publicly his intention to retire from office, were silent.

peremptorily summoned to the office of the President. On arriving there, he found Senor Limantour, Minister of Finance, who likewise had been summoned. The three officials were in conference for hours. Immediately afterwards typewritten statements were issued by the Foreign Office to all the newspapers saying that the reception to the Chilean Minister set for to-day, and the banquet for the same official, scheduled for to-night, had been postponed until May 12. The reason for this change in the plans was given as "the slight illness of the President." The President's indisposition is known to be slight, but on orders from his physician, he must remain indoors.

Since the statement was issued, Gen. Diaz is known to have been out riding in his automobile. Yesterday morning he was apparently in his usual health. This, in connection with the fact that the conference was held, gives rise to the belief that the announcement of his intention to resign will not be made before to-night at the earliest.

In the event of his abdication, there will be no opposition on the part of the present Government to De la Bara assuming the Presidency.

The question of Vice-President Corrals is not so simple. It is known that before leaving for Europe, he refused to resign and that since arriving there he has reiterated this statement. But this is regarded as merely incidental. The officials consider the resignation of Diaz the only solution to the trouble. Reluctantly they admit the growing strength of the rebels and realize that peace is improbable should he antagonize them further.

Railroad traffic continues demoralized. A train arriving yesterday from the north, brought a story of a hold-up by 500 rebels at Lulu, a station 90 miles south of Saltillo. The rebels searched the train but did not molest the passengers. From the express car they took some thousands of pesos, however.

The War Department is silent on the subject of Torreon, Saltillo and Durango, which are reported to have been captured by the rebels.

BOARD OF TRADE MEN CONDEMN COUNCIL

One Speaker Says Aldermen Take the Attitude of "The Public be Blowed"---What Others Have to Say--Mr. Duggan Not Dismissed

The chief topic of conversation around the streets to-day was the action of the city council last night in reference to the re-engagement of Commissioner Duggan. Some of the business men and board of trade members were using rather strong language at the idea of the city council abandoning the office.

There seems to be a general impression around that the city council dismissed Mr. Duggan. This is not the case. The city council declined to re-engage him on the expiry of his year under the board of trade. At the time he was engaged, the city handed its money over to the board of trade, which engaged Mr. Duggan and kept him under its supervision. The board of trade members having considered that the office should be maintained by the city entirely, and not partly by private subscription, it was a matter for the city council to consider whether he would be engaged for another year or not. In deciding not to engage him, the council did not "dismiss" Mr. Duggan, contrary to general impression.

W. H. DENHAM.

W. H. Denham, when asked by the Review for an opinion this morning, said that he could find language strong enough to use on the occasion.

"You can say for me that it is very unseemly for the members of the council to vent their personal spite on Mr. Duggan. The attitude of the council may be summed up in the words, "The Public be damned." The Board of Trade instructed Mr. Duggan in the power matter, and he he went ahead with his instructions, and now the members of the council are taking out their spite on him when he is not responsible.

"It may be wondered that I, being in some degree connected with the power business, should be one to urge Mr. Duggan to take up the power business, but I hope I am broad enough to let him go ahead and find out just what there is in the business."

DANIEL O'CONNELL.

Daniel O'Connell said that he thought the action of the council was most uinjustifiable. They had practically dismissed an innocent man, and he thought no condemnation too strong could be handed out to the council for its action. The people were assuredly for a continuance of the office, with Mr. Duggan in it, and there would be some formal expression of the people's opinion at a meeting or otherwise on the matter.

FIRED FROM WINDOW.

Drunken Freak of Young Montrealler Two Are Hurt.

Montreal, May 6.—Crazed by constant drinking, Jos. Belleau, a young French-Canadian residing at 287 Delisle street, seized a revolver yesterday afternoon and opened fire from a front window at passers-by on the street. Mr. D. Mallette, a neighbor, was wounded in the back, and Constable Mailleux in the arm in attempting to arrest him. Neither victim is seriously injured.

When the police finally forced their way into the house by a rear entrance they found Belleau had collapsed, and was dying in a drunken stupor on the floor. His mother, with whom he had been living, said that he had been drinking heavily, and had the idea that he was being persecuted by humanity in general.

Canon Starr Accepts.

Kingston, May 6.—Canon George L. Starr, M.A., assistant rector of St. George's Cathedral, yesterday announced he would accept the call to the rectorship of Grace Church, Toronto. He will be indicted early in June. Canon Starr has been connected with St. George's for fourteen years, is beloved by the entire congregation, and his loss will be keenly felt. He is a native of Brockville, and a graduate of Trinity College.

The car ran into a ditch, struck a wall and turned over.

LEADER BORDEN SAYS THE IMPERIAL BOND IS BEING LOOSENED BY PACT

At Dinner to Provincial Premiers, Opposition Leader Declares His Conviction That Laurier's Day is at Hand.

Ottawa, May 6.—R. L. Borden, the Opposition leader, entertained at dinner last night in the Parliamentary restaurant, Premier McBride of British Columbia, Premier Hazen of New Brunswick, Hon. Robert Rogers of Manitoba, Hon. Mr. Bowser of British Columbia, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Senator Lougheed, Senator Poirier, the Conservative members of Parliament and several other prominent Conservatives from the provinces.

Noting that there were present representatives of every province in Canada, Mr. Borden said:

"Canada to-day is confronted with the greatest issue which this country has ever witnessed since 1867. I will not weary you with a discussion of that question, but I ask you to remember that in 1902 and again in 1907, the Government of this country, in the Imperial Conference at London pledged itself to the policy of preferential trade between the United Kingdom and the great dominions of the Empire, and affirmed by resolution that such a policy would stimulate mutual commercial intercourse and strengthen the Empire. Consider the proposed agreement with the United States to which our Government claims to have pledged the honor of Canada, and tell me whether it does not absolutely destroy any prospect of consummating that policy of reciprocity within the Empire.

"If there is any doubt upon this question, let the answer given by a very great statesman, the President of the United States, on the 26th of January last in his message to Congress. He emphasized the statement that Canada is at the parting of the ways. As Mr. Foster has well asked, what are the two ways to which the President alludes? One is the path of closer relation with the great Empire whose flag floats over us, and the other is the path which leads to closer and closer relations with the United States by means of a trade agreement from which that country excludes the rest of the Empire.

He quoted at length from the President's speeches.

Premier McBride declared his Government and the Province of British Columbia opposed reciprocity. He said that such an agreement must draw the people of Canada and the United States closer together, and the only result of that could be that the Empire and Canada would be drawn further away from one another.

Mr. McBride announced that Mr. Borden would make a western tour this summer.

Hon. J. D. Hazen said that reciprocity struck no answering chord in New Brunswick. He urged Mr. McBride and Mr. Rogers to stand for Federal constituencies at the next general elections as lieutenants to Mr. Borden.

Hon. Robert Rogers condemned reciprocity.

Hon. Mr. Bowser pointedly referred to the fact that Mr. McBride was about to enter the Federal arena. He said he could see the heads of the trimmers and the McGillicuddys coming up over the fence now that the Conservatives were near power.

McNAMARA WILL BE TRIED IN JUNE

Nineteen Indictments Against the Labor Man.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 6.—John J. MacNamara, secretary and treasurer of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Association, and his brother, James B. MacNamara, were arraigned late yesterday before Superior Judge Bordwell on nineteen indictments, charging murder in causing a dynamite explosion in The Los Angeles Times building, and the consequent death of 21 men. Attorney Rappaport of Indianapolis for the MacNamaras, asked for thirty days' time in which to enter pleas for the men. District Attorney Fredericks consented to a postponement till June 1, and that time was fixed by Judge Bordwell.

Expressed No Opinion.

Washington, May 6.—A telegram from San Francisco saying placards were being distributed throughout the state quoting Dr. J. A. Holmes, director of the bureau of mines, as declaring that the wreck of The Los Angeles Times plant was due to gas explosion, and not dynamite, evoked quick response last night. Director Holmes made the following statement:

"Neither the bureau of mines nor the director of the bureau possess any information that would demonstrate the cause of the explosion in The Los Angeles Times building. The director of the bureau of mines has neither given out any opinion as to the cause of that explosion nor has he authorized any person to express an opinion for him on that subject."

Rev. R. M. Fee, of Dunnville, will go to Pettypiece, Man.

Antoine Larose was acquitted at Belleville on a bigamy charge. At North Bay Jean Baptiste Gauthier, got six months for the same offence.

BECK GOING TO KINGSTON TOO

Will Address Limestone City People on Power Question.

Kingston, May 6.—Hon. Adam Beck has consented to address a meeting here next week on the power question. He has a proposition to offer the city in the way of cheap power, and wishes to give it before leaving for England. He says he has closed arrangements with a Waddington, N.Y., company to deliver 60,000 horse-power to eastern Ontario. The report that the Seymour Co. made another offer to the city has made the Hydro-Electric Commission look keenly after its interests.

In discussing the power question The Whig says that the city should put the offer of the Hydro-Electric Commission before an expert and see if it is better than that of the Seymour Co.

SAYS DR. DOUGLAS WAS MURDERED

English Woman Makes Startling Statements at Hamilton

Special to The Review.

Hamilton, Ont., May 6.—Mrs C. Henderson, an English woman living on Merrick street, is the person who charges Dr. Douglas was murdered twenty years ago, near London. She repeated the charges to-day, and declares that estate which she and others were prevented from obtaining through Douglas' death was Alton Towers, Staffordshire, England. She also claims that several attempts have been made recently to kill her.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS

Cause, Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness.

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. I took a full dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it siezes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

WHERE DID IT COME FROM

Hon. Frank Oliver is willing that the parliamentary committee shall find out whether or no the Canadian Northern contributed the $70,000 he admits by inference having received in 1907. But he is not willing to let the committee inquire as to where the money might have come from. He holds that his private affairs are not open to public investigation, that to submit the matter to proof would be to demoralize Canadian public life. The trouble is that Canadian public life is demoralized, not by too much publicity in these financial deals, but by the concealment of crooked work. This money came from somewhere, and it went somewhere. McGillicuddy may be a thug and a blackmailer, as Oliver charges, or he may not. What is not the point. The point is now whether Oliver will submit to presenting proof that will adequately satisfy the public that the money did not come from any source in the same class as the Canadian Northern. It might be easy to prove that the Canadian Northern railway did not give this money, but it might be equally true that someone else did, who has been the recipient of governmental favors. But under the resolution introduced by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and carried, in the Commons, the committee cannot go farther in the investigation than establishing the fact that the money did or did not come from this one particular source.

Such a limited investigation is more or less of a farce. It seems to be the general impression that the money received was part of a good sized campaign fund for use in the last general elections. Both parties have campaign funds, but in the case of the governmental funds, it is intensely interesting to find out the source.

At the time of the Pacific scandal, campaign funds were contributed by Sir Hugh Allan, who was the head of a company which was to share in the construction of the big railway. This was taken as evidence of guilt on the part of the ministry, though Sir John explicitly denied and proved that he had specifically informed Sir Hugh Allan that he was to get no more concessions from the government than had been originally intended under the government program of giving the contract to Canadians, and which he would get anyway, without regard to contribution to the campaign fund. Why the Laurier government should seek to prevent any really satisfactory inquiry into the matter seems to be plain. Where did the money come from?

DOUBLE LIABILITY

The announcement is made by the curator of the defunct Farmers Bank that the shareholders will be called on in a few days to pay their double liability, the amount to be paid in being estimated at $500,000. This makes the loss to the shareholders who trusted to the smooth assurances of big dividends over a million dollars, and they are men who can ill afford to have to lose either their first investment or the double sum.

A few days ago the government majority in the commons defeated what was practically a vote of censure on the Minister of Finance for having permitted the charter to become operative in spite of evidence he had at the time that it was obtained by false representation. The Finance Minister, W. S. Fielding, deliberately gave the treasury board certificate to the promoters to enable them to start business, having been warned by three or four men, David Henderson, M.P., of Halton, for one, that the requirements of the banking act had not been met.

This rank neglect by the government minister has cost the shareholders of the bank—the innocent farmers who trusted in the soundness of the Canadian banking system, in the probity and carefulness of the finance department at Ottawa—a million dollars, bringing some of them down to dire poverty after a life-time of worthy and industrious labor to achieve a competence. The courts have laid the probing of the getting of the charter over until September, at which time there may be a general election in progress. It does not require a wonderful amount of perspicacity to know what the farmers who have suffered so cruelly and been wronged in such a flagrant manner will do as regards the supporting of a government that offers a defence that "it was just a mistake."

MR. DUGGAN'S CASE

The decision of the members of the City Council not to re-engage Publicity Commissioner Duggan is one on which varying opinions will probably be held. In spite of the fact that the expenditure of $4,000 on the office has apparently brought forth no real tangible results, it is the wish of the business men of the city, and, apparently, of the members of the City Council, that the work started by Mr. Duggan should be kept.

It will be admitted by all that Mr. Duggan has not proved a sluggard in the position, a most difficult one to fill. In fact, his energy led him into trouble over the power matter, which he took up in conflict with the efforts of the city power committee. The members of the Council have undoubtedly felt considerably aggrieved over the fact that their efforts in the power matter, which have been made quietly, were supplanted by the efforts of Mr. Duggan. Having lost confidence in the commissioner's judgment, they felt that they could not continue to work with him over another year, especially when that year would like y produce some action on the power matter.

The action of the council is regrettable, in that the aldermen did not see their way clear to re-engage Mr. Duggan, but it is the intention to continue the office, and if a successor to Mr. Duggan is obtained, it is to be hoped that he will have many of the qualities that have won for Mr. Duggan the high opinion of the business men and citizens with whom he has been associated in his labors.

It is unfortunate that matters so shaped themselves that the Council felt that it could not continue to work harmoniously with Mr. Duggan, as without the support of the City Council a commissioner cannot do the good work the money spent on the office should require.

In this connection it may not be amiss to say that the attitude of Mayor Morrow, who has been meeting considerable criticism for what has been popularly supposed to be his antagonism to the publicity commissioner, has been one of strict impartiality and fair-dealing in handling the matter in the Council. Last night the mayor expressed no opinion for or against the re-engagement of Mr. Duggan until asked directly at the close of the discussion, by Ald. Morgan, as to what was his opinion. The mayor then said, that while he was strongly in favor of the office, his company having contributed one-fifth of the amount raised to get a commissioner, he did not think that Mr. Duggan was able to produce the results, judging by past effort.

It is apparent that the temper of the people, however, is decidedly in favor of keeping up the efforts to get cheaper power, and while opinion may be divided as to the effect to date of Mr. Duggan's labors on the power matter, it is certain that the progressive business element of the city wants a good, energetic commissioner to work in conjunction with the other forces moving toward cheaper power.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Woodstock has managed to get a car-load of oil delivered for use on its streets. But judging by the condition of affairs around Peterborough this city will get sufficient oil to keep the dust down by the time the snow comes.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Peterborough is apparently being resuscitated. A good strong association of merchants, working together, is a great help not only to business circles, but to a city or town. Here's hoping that the resurrection may be complete.

A TRAGEDY IN THE HOME

When The Money-Maker Falls Ill

Wives and mothers, who are dependent upon the wages of husbands and sons, should see that the men take care of themselves. When the men are out of work, through sickness, no money comes in. When the men complain of backache and headache—of Rheumatism or Lumbago — take things in your own hands and get GIN PILLS. A box or two of GIN PILLS may save you many dollars in the pay envelope.

BACK TO WORK.

RICHMOND, QUE.

"My husband was taken with severe Kidney Trouble last winter and could not work for some time. After taking one box of GIN PILLS, he was able to go back to work again. He continued with GIN PILLS until he had taken two boxes when the pain had entirely gone from his back. You may publish this letter as I sincerely wish every sufferer, who has Kidney Trouble, would test the merits of GIN PILLS."

MRS. M. E. GARDNER.

If you have tried medicines and doctors without relief, do as Mr. Gardner did—take GIN PILLS. LAKEHURST NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Lakehurst, May 1.—Mr. Stevens, of Peterborough, preached his farewell sermon to a lonesome looking congregation in Knox Presbyterian church last Sunday morning. We do not know who is to occupy the pulpit in the future.

Rev. Mr. Cruikshanks, of Bridgenorth, preached in the Methodist church Sunday evening.

Mr. Johnston spent a few days of last week visiting at the home of his son in Belleville.

Miss E. Pursur, of Islay, Alberta, is visiting friends at Lakehurst.

Mrs. Kidd, from near Lakefield, was the guest of Mrs. A. Thompson last Sunday.

Miss Weir has returned after spending a few weeks visiting friends in Omemee.

Mr. A. G. Shearer's customers from far-off Smith still come with amazing regularity. Their semi-weekly visits have now become a thing to be counted on.

Mr. Maxwell Kidd, from out near Young's Point, was out visiting friends here this week.

So Bobcaygeon is rejoicing over the prospect of steamer connection with Lakehurst this summer. We are glad to see they know how to appreciate their great blessings.

SOUND ADVICE FOR ALL SUFFERERS

Mrs. Lois McKay Tells Them to Use Dodd's Kidney Pills

They took the pain from her side, cured her backache, and made her a well woman—Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure where the Kidneys are the cause of the trouble.

Tiverton, Digby Co., N.S., May 5.—(Special)—"I advise every sufferer from Kidney Disease to use Dodd's Kidney Pills." Those are the words of Mrs. Lois McKay, of this place.

"Before I used Dodd's Kidney Pills," Mrs. McKay continues, "I suffered with a bad pain in my back and side. Sometimes when I sat down I could hardly get up out of the chair. But thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills my pain is all gone and my back is well. I have proved for myself that Dodd's Kidney Pills are good."

How many women are there in Canada who suffer day after day with pain in the back or some other equally painful and disagreeable form of Kidney Disease? Every day from all parts of the Dominion come the statements of other women who have suffered just as they do, and who have been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills. The cure is simple, safe and within easy reach. Dodd's Kidney Pills never harm anyone. They have cured thousands. They have never failed to cure where the Kidneys are the cause of the trouble.

Hon. Frank Wilson, pioneer of western Australia, has reached Victoria, B. C., en route to the coronation. He says Australia fears the Orient.

LAID UP FIVE YEARS

Until Half a Bottle of Father Morrisey's Liniment Cured His Shoulder.

Mr. Jos. J. Roy, a prominent tinsmith of Bathurst, N.B., july 16, 1909:

"I cannot let this opportunity pass without letting you know what benefit I received from your Liniment. For five years I had a sore shoulder, which prevented me from working or from sleeping at night. I had tried everything possible and still could find no relief, until I was advised to try a bottle of your liniment, which I purchased without delay. I only used one half of the bottle when I was completely cured, and now I feel as if I never had a sore shoulder. I would advise anyone suffering from Rheumatic pains to give your liniment a trial, for I cannot praise it too highly."

A liniment that will do that is the liniment you want. It is equally good for sore throat or chest, backache, toothache, ear ache, sprains, sore muscles, cuts, bruises, burns, frost-bites, chapped hands or chilblains. Rub it in, and the pain comes out. 25c per bottle at your dealer's, or from Father Morrisey Medicine Co. Ltd., Montreal, Que. 64

Sold and guaranteed in Peterborough by McDermid & Jury.

A GREAT REMEDY FOR LITTLE ONES

That is what thousands of mothers say of Baby's Own Tablets. We have received thousands of letters praising them—we have yet to receive a single one condemning them. The Tablets cannot possibly do harm even to the newborn babe. They contain none of those poisonous drugs which make the so-called "soothing" mixtures so dangerous to the welfare of the little one. They are a scientific medicine, prepared by one of the greatest specialists on childhood ailments and should be kept in every home where there are babies or small children. Mrs. Fred. McCarthy, Pinewood, Ont., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets and have found them a great remedy for little ones. I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FARMERS MUST DOUBLE LOSS

Shareholders of Farmers' Bank Badly Hit

The list of "double liability" shareholders of the defunct Farmers Bank contains the names of seven hundred persons, mostly Ontario farmers, who, within a few days, will be requested to hand over to the curator, Mr. G. T. Clarkson, an amount approximating half a million dollars. This means that the gross loss of subscribers for stock in the Travers institution will be over one million dollars.

"Every contributor," said he, "will be called upon for one hundred per cent. beyond the amount of his subscription."

ASK FOR $584,500.

The deficiency noted in the curator's report on December 19th, 1910, following the closing of the bank's doors was $436,011.93. According to the official Government estimate contained in the Chartered Banks Report for November, 1910, a month before the Farmers Bank went under, the amount of stock paid up $584,500, and the amount paid up $567,579. The capital authorized was $1,000,000.

By the application of the double liability clause the subscribers of the Farmers Bank will have to go into their pockets for $584,500. It is understood that the Keeley mine will be counted by the curator in his official report of assets as purely nominal and as has been done in similar cases may be marked down at a value of "$1."

By the procedure taken in the liquidation of the defunct concern, the average extra levy upon stock holders will be $835, but the division of the liability being on no such equal basis will fall upon many with great severity. The majority of the stock was held by farmers in Ontario, who were drawn into the deal by the assurance of high dividends.

A NOVELTY

The railroad woman has the charm of novelty. Miss Daisy Oden is said to be the first woman in the United States to be appointed to an important post as railroad official with one of the big lines. After twenty-five years of service with the road she has been named district passenger agent of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad with headquarters in Rock Island, Illinois. She has for years made a close study of railroad methods travelling all over the country in connection with her work.

Free List Bill.

Washington, May 6.—Representative Warburton of Washington, a newly elected Republican member of the House of Representatives, announced his intention of supporting the Democratic free list bill, in a speech in the House yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Warburton said many of the Republican criticisms of the bill were undoubtedly well founded, but others overdrawn. He believed the bill would not do all its Democratic sponsors expected of it, but it was a step in the right direction. He urged taking off the duty on sugar.

Mr. Bartlett attacked the so-called "cotton bagging trust." He declared the southern farmers were discriminated against, in that cotton bagging which dutiable, while binding twine was free of duty, and that southern planters had paid $5,000,000 to the alleged "bagging trust," in five years.

THE BELLEVILLE INVESTIGATION

H. A. Davidson Formerly of Peterboro Got Lots From the City

A despatch from Belleville says:—

The tax lot sale investigation was resumed to-day before Judge Deroche and a few witnesses were examined. Mr. S. Russell, registrar of the county, produced documents from the Registry Office. The first was a power of attorney from H.A. Davidson to David Price, City Treasurer. The date it was drawn was September 27th, 1910. The date of registration was October 12th, 1910. The date sworn to was September 27th. There was also a power of attorney from Elizabeth Smith to Eucetea Marsh, wife of ex-Mayor Marsh. Documents showing various sales of lots from the city to Mr. Davidson and Mrs. B. E. Smith were put in evidence.

Mr. R. S. Bell, editor of the Intelligencer, related a conversation he had with Mr. Price in reference to the matter of sale of lots, and whether he would give him (witness) a statement over his own signature as to how it came about that his son-in-law in Saskatchewan (and Mayor Marsh's mother in law, in the eastern part of the province, had made speculative investments in Belleville tax lots. This Mr. Price refused to do. Mr. Price told witness that he hoped to put some money in his daughter's pocket and incidentally and directly in his own.

Some other witnesses were called but their testimony was unimportant. The proceedings were adjourned until Saturday afternoon, the 13th inst.

H. A. Davidson is formerly of this city and is a brother to W. S. Davidson. He conducts a drugstore business at Moose Jaw.

SEATS FOR NEW PARK

At Corner of Charlotte and Park Streets

Pillars Must be Changed Before Balance is Paid

At a special meeting of the City Council at ten o'clock last night reports from the Board of Works, Legal Committee and Finance Committee were passed. The latter recommended that a by-law be prepared to authorize the issue of debentures to the amount of $16,000, for the school improvements suggested by the Board of Education.

NOT JUST YET.

G. W. Hatton wrote, on behalf of Rutherford Bros., asking that a balance of $300 on their contract for the public library be paid.

The clerk was notified to reply that the amount is held back pending the proper execution of the pillars in front of the building.

SEATS AT PARK.

Ald. Duncan asked that the fence on the property at the corner of Charlotte and Park streets be taken down and a couple of seats placed on this property, which will be used as a park. This will be done.

The resolution from the Retail Merchants' Association that the industrial commissioner be retained for another year was read and received.

SOME MORE DUST.

Ald. Anderson brought up the dust nuisance, stating that some of the streets had not been watered or oiled as yet this season.

The explanation was that everything that could be done was being done.

ASHES ONLY.

The opinion of the Council was that ashes were an assistance to the Goose Pond dump. The chief constable will be notified to this effect.

SMALL MARKET

Farmers Are Too Busy With Other Farm Duties

A very slim market was held today. Little activity was shown, and the attendance was meagre. The reason is that farmers are now knee-deep in work, and cannot spare the time to come to market.

Some maple syrup and potatoes were the chief outside offering. Butter and eggs remain about the same in price and were fairly plentiful inside.

Following were the prices:—
Maple syrup—$1.25 a gallon.
Potatoes—$1.00 a bag.
Butter—24c per pound.
Eggs—17c per dozen.
Pork—11c and 12c.
Beef—8c and 9c.
Baled Hay—80c. per cwt.

SHORT RUN DOWN THE RIVER

Yesterday afternoon, on the invitation of Manager Pinchin of the Peterborough and Lake Simcoe Navigation Co., the steamer Manita made a trip down the river as far as the lower bridge. The steamer has been newly refitted, painted and decorated, ready for the season. It is in fine condition and equipment. The occasion was taken advantage to give a number of local men a short trip, and to meet Mr. W. Thompson, of Orillia, a director of the company, and who is largely interested in extensive lumbering operations in Longford. This was his first view of the river, and he was delighted with its importance and the opportunities it afforded for navigation.

Mr. E. F. Mason, President of the Navigation Co., was of the party, and he and Mr. Pinchin, manager, were a pair of hosts that made everybody comfortable and happy.

Three Year Old Boy Causes Trouble on Patterson Street

Magistrate Asks Parents to Forgive and Forget

An assault case occupied the attention of Magistrate Dumble this morning and as the matter was something of a family squabble it was dismissed. His Worship leaving it for the parties involved to settle the disagreement amicably.

The trouble commenced when innocent little three-year-old Spencer Holt started throwing stones into Harold Hudson's back yard on Patterson street. Spencer was like the majority of kids and refused to abandon the habit when chided by both his mother and Mr. Hudson. Finally neighbor Hudson lost his temper and laid his hand not very gently on the child's smooth cheek, leaving a red mark.

No fond mother could stand that, according to Mrs. Holt, the child's mother, so she had Hudson up this morning.

His Worship stated that there was a better spot than a child's face on which to punish him and held that Hudson had done wrong in striking the child with his heavy hand while incensed over his acts. He advised the parents to come to a peaceable understanding over the difficulty and try and control their children.

CITY COUNCIL WILL NOT KEEP DUGGAN

Decided Last Night, With Only Two Opposed, Not to Re-engage Him for Another Year--Mr. Beck's Story of the Power Report--What the Aldermen Said

Industrial Commissioner Duggan will not be the publicity commissioner for Peterborough after May 15. This was decided on with only two dissenting votes at a meeting of the Council last night in committee of the whole. The aldermen were strongly of the opinion that after the Beck power report fiasco, it would not be advisable to continue him in the office for another year, having lost, to a large extent, the confidence necessary to give him proper support.

In this connection Mayor Morrow informed the Council that Hon. Adam Beck has intimated that he would be at liberty to come to Peterborough next Wednesday and address a public meeting on the power question. He wanted to know what the Council would do about it.

Ald. Brown thought there was no need to keep the matter of the proposed visit of Mr. Beck quiet.

Ald. Morgan moved that the Council invite Mr. Beck to come, and that the meeting on Wednesday night be held in the Collegiate Assembly Hall. This was seconded by Ald Brown, and the mayor was instructed to call Mr. Beck over the 'phone to-day and issue the invitation for Mr. Beck to be present on Wednesday. The city Reception Committee will entertain Mr. Beck while he is in the city.

Mayor Morrow explained that he had had a conversation with Mr. Beck over the 'phone yesterday, in which Mr. Beck had expressed great regret that he had been made the means of of ignoring the City Council in the power report. In being brought to Peterborough he had been under the impression that he was to address the City Council, or a public meeting under the auspices of the City Council. He was very sorry indeed that he had unwittingly been the cause of trouble.

Mayor Morrow introduced the Duggan matter by asking the aldermen what action they would take in regard to his re-appointment.

Ald. Morgan said that he would be honest about his opinion. There were three questions to be answered. Did the city require a publicity commissioner? and was Mr. Duggan the right man for the job? and was $4,000 a year too much? The city required a publicity commissioner of some kind. He did not know whether Mr. Duggan was the best man available or not, but he thought $4,000 was too much. Of course he might be a little narrow on this, and he was ready to receive light from others and be converted.

Ald. Brown remarked that if the office were continued for five years that would be $20,000, and he did not see where any adequate benefit would be derived for such a sum.

Ald. Kerneghan thought that as Peterborough had nothing much in the way of inducements to offer factories, as the people would not pass bonus propositions, there was no use maintaining a $4,000 man. The $4,000 could be better applied in helping factories to get cheaper power. All the communications relating to factories proposing to locate here had come through the mayor and clerk, and why should the city maintain a $4,000 man to sit in an office and read over these communications when they came in? He had worked quite contrary to the Power Committee, and had overstepped the mark. He had apparently stayed in Toronto for Mr. Beck and brought him there, giving rise to the misunderstanding that led to the premature publication of the power report.

Ald. Graham was not in favor of the continuance of Mr. Duggan, as he regarded $4,000 too high a price to pay for the good that was being derived. What was the use, when factory propositions were turned down?

Ald. Anderson said—"We need a commissioner of some sort. There is considerable special work to be done. It is not a question of keeping the office up for 10 or fifteen years, as suggested by Ald. Brown. One year is not enough in which to accomplish much. A new commissioner, being strange to the ground, would have to begin all over again, and the money already spent would be practically money wasted."

The merchants, said Ald. Anderson, had paid part of the salary of the past year, and they would not want to see that money go without result. Ald. Anderson favored retaining Mr. Duggan for another year. If the by-law had been turned down it was simply pointing out the necessity of more work in getting out the vote.

Ald. Brown said the by-law affair was the work of the citizens, not the City Council. The aldermen were not consulted in regard to the by-law, and there was no fund for conveyances. The mayor was never consulted with regard to the by-law.

Ald. Edgar favored retaining Mr. Duggan in the office under the Council, and kept with bounds as to the scope of his work.

Ald. Duncan said that he felt like moving that no action be taken in the matter of the re-engagement until Mr. Beck was here, but when the mayor explained that it would not be fair to have the matter hang over, as Mr. Beck could not say any more than he had already said, Ald. Duncan moved, seconded by Ald. Kerneghan, that Mr. Duggan be not re-engaged.

Ald. Metheral said that he did not like the actions of the commissioner on the power matter, especially after the committee of the whole council had discussed matters and Mr. Bradburn had been invited to consult Mr. Beck.

Ald. Morgan said that he was in favor of having a commissioner. Mr. Duggan had not got any factories or prospects of factories, as both the Bonner-Worth and the Independent Tire propositions came through the mayor.

"I'm in favor of the office, but not the man," said Ald. Morgan.

On a vote, the only two aldermen supporting Mr. Duggan's re-engagement were Ald. Anderson and Edgar.

DISFAVOR LARGE EXPENDITURE ON POLICE HEADQUARTERS

Committee of Whole Council and City Trust Commission Discuss Improvements.

Proposition Regarding New City Building and Police Station

The members of the City Trust Commission discussed with the Committee of the whole Council last-night, as to the most advantageous steps that should be taken regarding the improvements to the Police Station and incidentally the matter of a new city building came up.

As to the Police Station it was decided that Mr. Blackwell, C. E., prepare plans and specifications, and an estimate on the work, and report back to the committee, his estimate of $5000 to be reduced to $3000.

With regard to the city building proposition, a committee made up of Mayor Morrow, Ald. Bradburn, and Ald. Duncan was appointed to make some necessary inquiry.

COST OVER $5,000

Mr. Blackwell, who was present, informed the meeting that he estimated the improvements to the police station which would include an extension at the south end, of twenty feet, would cost $5,000. This amount was $3,000 more than what was at first thought of and the $5,000 did not include a heating system and other work, which would bring the cost up considerably, the heating system alone being put down at $675. Mr. Blackwell didn't have anything particularly definite and this was one of the reasons for the motion above stated and which included the reducing of the amount to $3,000.

NEW CITY BUILDING

The situation as viewed by the committee and the members of the commission is that should the city decide to erect a new municipal building, the present council chamber might do for a police court. Also that it might be decided to build a new police department, separate from the city building, hence, why the expenditure of money on the present quarters.

In answer to Mayor Morrow, Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., chairman of the Trust Commission answered that they had a surplus of $35,000 but he was not sure if the Commission had a right to use the money in connection with the procuring of a site for a new city building as His Worship suggested.

City solicitor, Hall, explained that the Commission could use the money for municipal buildings if such was the decision of the Commission and the City Council. The discussion came back to the matter of the police station and Mr. James Kendrey, held that it would be better to know just what was doing before going ahead with this question.

Ald. Morgan opined that something should be done for the police department. Magistrate Dumble, he said, had often complained of the unsanitary conditions.

Ald. Kerneghan held that a good building, by itself if so decided, could be erected for $5,000.

SOME OPINIONS

"It is not a fit place for human beings," said Mr. Moore of the police station.

"I can show you one thousand bed bugs, right there now" was the statement which followed by Chief Thompson.

"They'll come into the finest building in the country" said Mr. Eastwood

"I wouldn't be in favor of spending $5,000 on a building now" remarked Ald. Metheral. The present one should be made more inhabitable now.

Mr. Moore held that the filth could be driven out if money was spent. The building could be cleaned. "I felt like supporting the proposition at $2,000 but am not now in favor of it at the present figures," he added.

Ald. Bradburn favored the idea of a separate police station if a new city building was to be erected. He was against the idea of spending $5,000 on the present place. For $2,000 it could be improved so as to do for seven or eight years.

"You wouldn't have the space" said Chief Thompson. "At present we are acting contrary to law in that [illegible] male and female prisoners in the same room

"The time is here to seek a site for a new city hall," said Mr Eastwood. He felt sure that the people would approve of the proposition.

Mr. Kendrey asked Mr. Eastwood where he would suggest a site and he replied that there were five in six locations.

Further discussion took place and both questions were decided as stated above

The bride wore a gown of cream silk, with real lace, and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lily of the valley, and wore the groom's gift, an amythest and pearl pendant. Mr. and Mrs Neely left on the evening train for Detroit, and on their return will reside in Toronto.

NEW WHARVES ON THE RIVER

Two new wharves are ready for the season's traffic on the river and will prove to be a great convenience. In putting in these wharves the department placed them at the end of the concession lines, so that they are open to the public and may be at the servcie of any one.

One of these wharves is located on the shore just adjoining the new T.A.S. grounds and will afford a large convenience to those landing there. Another is at Campbelltown, opposite where the road from Keene approaches the river, and will be quite a stopping point for stock, produce, wood, etc. The wharves are of very substantial construction, and of reasonable height from the water so as to be used in periods of low water in the river as well as when the stream is full.

BUT

if it happens to be a Buckley, he can get another without it costing him a cent.

You've seen "guarantees" before—but you never yet heard of a hat guarantee that guaranteed the owner even against accident.

Here's one that does—the sweeping Buckley guarantee—provides for such cases as that shown in the picture — provides for a new hat within 4 months from date of purchase, if, for any reason — accident or otherwise — your Buckley hat has not in every sense "stood the racket." Read carefully the broad, all-embracing guarantee.

Why, you ask, should the guarantee be made so far-reaching?

Well, in the first place, the makers of the "Buckley" have absolute confidence in their product—they feel sure it will give satisfaction in 999 cases out of 1,000.

But there's always that thousandth man—even he must be satisfied.

And, in order that he may get a new Buckley hat from any Buckley dealer, without having to answer questions or give a lengthy explanation, it has been thought well to provide that, whatever his reason, if the Buckley he's been wearing has not lasted four months, it will be cheerfully, promptly, unquestioningly exchanged.

Don't let this remarkable guarantee feature of the Buckley overshadow the style pre-eminence of these hats. The quality is English, but the styles are American and up-to-the-minute. There's a Buckley shape to suit every type of man.

Buckley hats are made by Union workmen—there's high grade material and honest workmanship in every hat that bears the Buckley name. Price, $2.50, at all the best hat shops.

Well-Known Character Dead.

Woodstock, May 6.—John O'Hanley, a well-known character here, who spent most of his days in jail, was found dead on the street in Elmwood, Bruce County, Thursday night. O'Hanley started on a tramp to Owen Sound a few weeks ago, to see some friends. He had fallen by the wayside and expired many miles from his journey's end. He was 70 years old, and lately had been an inmate of the Oxford House of Refuge. It was the old man's boast that he was the only prisoner in the jail who was allowed the privilege of going down town in his prison garb unattended.

Constables Killed In Duel.

Pennington Gap, Virginia, May 6.—Constable John Hax, who came down from St. Charles to help town marshal George Hinkle keep order while a circus was in town, arrested an unknown man for a trivial offence. Hinkle interfered, saying he would do the arresting himself. While the prisoner got away, Hax and Hinkle exchanged shots. Both are dead.

Two Drowned.

Halifax, May 5.—Two brothers, Jos. and Bernard Duggan, aged 35 and 17, of Upper Prospect, lost their lives off Prospect Wednesday. They left their home in an auxiliary boat to attend to their trawls. The men did not return and a small steamer which arrived at Prospect at evening reported having seen an upturned boat and a man's cap floating on the surface of the water in the vicinity of the place where the Duggan brothers were last seen before a heavy squall came on.

Struck by a Train.

Hamilton, May 5.—Mrs. Nichols, 29 Summit street, was perhaps fatally injured about nine o'clock yesterday morning by being struck by a G.T.R. passenger train at the Wentworth street level crossing. It is supposed that Mrs. Nichol, who is an elderly woman, failed to hear the train as it approached the crossing. The unfortunate woman had both legs broken and two ribs fractured, besides sustaining numerous cuts and bruises. Her recovery is doubtful.

Must Not Discriminate.

Toronto, May 6.—At a sitting of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board yesterday afternoon it was decided not to approve of any contract between any local telephone company and the Bell Telephone Co., which prevents a local telephone company from taking or transmitting messages from any other local telephone company with which it now connects or with which it may in future connect.

"The board will not approve of any agreement which will have the effect of preventing or restricting intercommunication, joint operation or reciprocal rights between telephone companies under its jurisdiction," stated Chairman Leitch.

Too Peaceable?

London, May 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Morning Post, anent American warships on the great lakes, says:

"It is easy to understand that Laurier is handicapped by the anti-militarism of sections whose electoral support is indispensable to his Government and may prefer to let the Americans continue their violation of the treaty rather than take the necessary measures counteracting this palpable menace. If this policy eventually leads to trouble, the British taxpayer has to face the responsibility of restoring the balance of power on the lakes by sending warships, since Canada will not have any ready to send."

A Generous Offer.

Brantford, May 6.—The Massey-Harris Co. has come to the fore with an offer of $10,000 toward the Y.M.C.A. $100,000 fund campaign, which will open next week. In case the full amount is not realized the company will donate one-tenth of the total amount.

Fire Follows Them.

Montreal, May 6.—Fire shortly before noon yesterday caused $70,000 loss to six firms on Colborne street, Point St. Charles. The Canada Furniture Co. and the Ives Modern Bedstead Co. had just moved into the new premises after a fire several months ago.

Panic-Stricken at Small Fire.

New York, May 5.—Six hundred and fifty girls, employed in two shirt waist factories at 548 Broadway, in the downtown district, rushed screaming for the stairs from the third and fourth floors late yesterday afternoon at sight of a trifling awning fire below them. The congestion between floors became terrific, and a hand rail snapped, and thirty or more girls fell in a shrieking heap in a hallway below. Fourteen of them were injured, but none fatally, and only three were taken to hospitals.

Sandbagged and Robbed.

Montreal, May 5.—G. E. Smart, accountant in the offices of the harbor commissioners' office, was found drugged and stunned in the hall of the building yesterday morning. Thugs sandbagged and robbed him on the harbor front on his way home from work Wednesday evening and got away with a fine gold watch and some $30 in bills. Mr. Smart came to in a lane near the commissioners' office early yesterday morning and was just able to struggle to the offices, where he collapsed again.

Tuberculosis In Montreal.

Montreal, May 5.—The alarming spread of tuberculosis in Montreal was made the subject of a report to the Board of Control yesterday by Dr. J. E. Labarge. The doctor states that 64 per cent. of the deaths registered are from tuberculosis in the city at present.

Steamer and Schooner In Collision.

Boston, May 5.—The British steamer Bencliff and the four-masted schooner J. R. Teel, came together near Quarantine yesterday, both sustaining considerable damage above the water line.

A Probable Suicide.

St. Catharines, Ont., May 6.—Robt. Wheeler, a Hamilton man who had been working at the Reo motor-car works here, is believed to have committed suicide.

He was boarding at the Grand Central Hotel. One day about two weeks ago he left, saying he was going for a walk.

Yesterday the wife of the proprietor found a letter to the effect that he intended to do away with himself.

His wife keeps a boarding-house in Hamilton.

Strike In Kingston.

Kingston, May 5.—The strike of the mason helpers is not yet settled. Seventy-five men are out. The bosses declare they will not pay the increase. The masons and stonecutters have been unable to settle their trouble over who shall cut cornices and work is being delayed.

Hurt In Runaway.

Woodstock, May 5.—William Smith, county road superintendent and well-known in municipal circles in Ontario, was seriously hurt yesterday afternoon in a runaway accident. He was thrown out of the rig and sustained numerous bruises on the head and arms.

Found Dead.

Ingersoll, May 5.—Mrs. James Levens was found dead on the floor of her home at six o'clock last evening by her husband on his return from work. Heart failure was the cause.

Found the Knife.

Goderich, May 6.—The knife with which Edward Jardine is alleged to have murdered Lizzie Anderson, is now in the hands of the authorities. Shortly after Jardine's trial it was learned that a knife had been found near the spot where Jardine said he threw the weapon. It has been forwarded to Toronto for minute examination. A boy found the knife on the lake shore shortly after Jardine's arrest. It is a medium-sized, black-handled one, with two blades, and there were bloodstains on the hilts of the blades. The finding of the knife goes to corroborate the evidence of those witnesses who said Jardine had such a knife in his possession.

"Salvador" BEER

THE FAMOUS NATIONAL DRINK

There's a story behind "Salvador" beer —Canada's most famous brew— that carries us back to the year 1651

The Grand Duke Ferdinand, the Bavarian monarch of that period, established the now famous cloister brewery on the Nockerberg Mountain, near Munich, and appointed Father Sale the chief brewmaster.

The product of the royal brewery was first known as "Father Sale's Beer," until the more convenient title of "Salvador" was adopted, about a century later.

For over 150 years "Salvador" was brewed under the patronage of the Bavarian royal family. In 1806, Franz X. Zacherl acquired control of the cloister brewery and purchased the secret formula of the royal brew.

From that day to this the formula and sole European rights have been the most jealously guarded inheritance of the famous brewer's family.

The rich, mellow flavor of "Salvador" is only attained by a special aging process, and if the output of the cloister brewery was great enough the people of Bavaria would drink no other beer.

Mr. Lothar Reinhardt completed his extensive studies of German brewing in this famous cloister brewery, where he secured the secret formula and process for brewing "Salvador." He has the sole right under the Canadian Government Copyright and Letters Patent to manufacture this famous brew.

Reinhardts' "Salvador" has become "The National Drink by a rigorous adherence to every detail of the original process devised by Father Sale in 1651.

Compared with all other brews, "Salvador" beer is worth a dollar a drop, yet it costs no more than just ordinary beer.

Every pint of "Salvador" is matured in wood for at least six months before bottling.

"Salvador" is not only a pure, sparkling and refreshing brew; it also possesses tonic qualities which make it the beer par excellence for family use.

Always order "Salvador" if you want the best beer brewed.

LUNG TROUBLE

Mrs. Biny Brown, of Tenecape, N.S., Was Cured by Catarrhozone of Lung Trouble and Catarrh, After Hundreds of Other Remedies Failed

If your lungs are weak; if there is consumption in your family; if Colds, Catarrh, and Bronchitis bother you, be sure to use Catarrhozone. It is especially adapted for these diseases and cures every time.

Mrs. Brown took cough mixtures, but they made her sick. Then she used an atomizer, but, after resorting without benefit to poultices, she tried Catarrhozone.

"I used Catarrhozone Inhaler," writes Mrs. Brown, "five minutes every hour, and soon recognized that it was going to cure me. I could feel the soothing medicated air spreading through the air passages of the throat, and it touched the sore spots in the lungs that other remedies failed to reach. Catarrhozone seemed to go just where it was needed most, and soon put a stop to my cough. It restored me to perfect health, and I am convinced that no cough, cold, or catarrh can exist if Catarrhozone is used."

No treatment is so clean, so pleasant, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. By means of the Inhaler, the local symptoms, such as coughing, inflammation and congestion are speedily corrected. Ferrozone tablets, which are taken after each meal, purify and cleanse the blood of all poisons, and build up and strengthen the system.

This local and constitutional treatment is always effective, and cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. Money can't buy or produce anything better, and to get cured it is absolutely necessary to use Catarrhozone.

SHEFFIELD CHOIR WILL CONTINUE

A Further Explanation Regarding Affair at St. Paul

Toronto Globe—Mr. J.A. Ritchie of Ottawa has written to The Globe, on behalf of Dr. C. A. E. Harriss, who is in charge of the tour of the Sheffield Choir, stating that the Mr. Gay referred to in a despatch published from St. Paul has no basis for the action he proposes taking against Dr. Harriss. He says that Mr. Gay's action will be contested, Mr. T. C. Burke, of Buffalo being retained for that purpose. Mr. Ritchie adds that he was instructed by Dr. Harriss that Mr. Gay had been paid in full for all services rendered to the former, and that Dr. Harriss had no agreement with Mr. Gay to the effect that the latter would be entitled to a percentage of the proceeds of the concerts given by the choir.

The heading of the article from St. Paul intimating that the tour of the choir would end as the result of the action is not borne out by the facts of the case. The indications point to the continued success and triumph of the choir.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes, and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost if the eye brows are thin and scanty; and the lashes are short and lifeless. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. THE PEOPLE'S CHIMES.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I heartily agree with 'River Road" on the question of the chimes. If these are St. John's church chimes then the program is entirely out of the question and the military ought no more to be brought out for the occasion than for the laying of the corner stone of Knox church, of All Saints' or Murray street church, for people outside of these congregations have helped in their work as well as in the chimes. If, on the other hand, this is a people's movement, in a special sense, then the people should be asked whether they want the chimes consecrated by an Anglican Bishop or not. For my part I want to have them consecrated by Rev. Isaac Couch and John Carlisle.

Yours truly,

ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

THE HIGHER CRITICISM

To The Editor of The Review.

Sir,—It is marvelous how mighty liberal some of our preachers are getting with the people's Bible. They are not only willing to give away whole books such as Genesis, Daniel, Esther Jonah, etc., they are not only willing htat the gospels and epistles of the New Testament, most of them should be discredited, but wonderful to tell some of our preachers have become so liberal, so large hearted and broad minded, that they are now willing that we should part with all those parts of the Book that Bob. Ingersoll objected to! And be it noted that Ingersoll had little or no use for any part of God's Book. On one occasion Ingersoll declared before an audience "I can write a better book than the Bible myself." An old auntie in the audience shouted out, "Go in on it Bob there's money in it." To-day Bob's bones are dust and his sword is rust and the old Book still abides.

The most amusing part of this wholesale parting with the word of God by the critics is this, the more they can mutilate and discredit the Bible; the smaller they can make it appear to themselves and their people, the larger the old Book grows. Their love for the dear old Book as they say, grows in the same proportion as they can show that it is not reliable or inspired. The men have surely lost all sense of humor. Let me illustrate.

A number of surgeons lay a fine healthy strong handsome man on the operating table. They scalp him. They take out his two eyes, cut off his two ears and nose, they amputate his arms and legs and then they present him to his family and friends saying, "here is your father and friend a larger and divine man, see how he has grown." In like manner do these false teachers, after mutilating the Book beyond all recognition, look down on their people with countenance serene, and calm as a mid-summer morning, and say, "It appears as though we had taken away your Bible from you, but see how it has grown, how much larger a book it is since we have operated on it." These teachers no doubt will go on getting worse and worse deceiving and being deceived until the Lord descends with his winged squadrons of the skies, and gathers the tares from amongst the wheat. In the mean time Christians should be warned not to help sow the tares. H no; th s letters. If we help to propagate disseminate and perpetuate the theologs of the successors of Paine, Bradlaugh and Ingersoll, who have crept in unawares into the professing Church, we are bidding them God's speed, and we are partakers of their evil deeds.

There is just as much chance of a few school boys demolishing Gibraltar with their air guns, as there is of these self styled intellectual emancipators from the learned arena, destroying the "impregnable rock of Holy Scriptures." Yes, we do believe that the word of the Lord liveth and abideth forever, but we do also believe that these destroyers of the faith, should not live and abide forever inside the Christian Church, and that their teachings should be suppressed, and they themselves should forthwith be requested to step out of the professing Church and go to their own company. And if this is not done very soon, one need not be a prophet to predict with the certainty of a prophecy, that judgments swift and sudden will be visited on Christendom for this great trangression.

Yours,

Correspondent Disproves of the Action of City Fathers

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Would Mayor Morrow say whether or not that he, Geo. A. Cox, or the companies in which they are interested, are bondholders in the Electric Companies' merger, which has its head office at Belleville? Why is Mr. Morrow opposed to the Hydro-Electric Engineer's report?

If he is sore only because he is a Grit and opposed to anything like the Hydro-Electric Commission, which was brought into being by the Whitney Government, we should know.

I was told that the council wanted Mr. Duggan's head on a platter because the Hon. Adam Beck gave his [illegible] business men and not to our city solons. If this is so, Duncan should go back to his paint pots, Brown to the call of the chickens, Kernaghan to his little grocery, and the rest to their respective trades, after giving up the city affairs to a commission.

The C.P.R. can get their concessions through, but the Tory Hydro-Electric is not a pleasant pill for certain Grits there. Personally I am sick and disgusted with the action of some of the light ducks in that council. They were never able to reach any high degree of prominence in their respective lines, and should not have been entrusted with the city's affairs. As they were elected, we must suffer, but not in silence. I am gathering up matter for a chapter or two concerning members of the council, which I shall write up from time to time.

In conclusion I may say we have now taken the road to peace, quietness and village ways. The grass will grow on the city hall steps and the aldermen will slumber without being awakened by the noise of whistles and vibrations of factories.

There are three or four Rip Van Winkles in our council, and they seem to be its master minds.

Yours truly,

NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT BY YOUNG LADIES' MISSION CIRCLE

Indoor Garden Party at Charlotte St. Lecture Hall

A most attractive scene was witnessed at Charlotte street Methodist lecture hall last evening, the occasion being an indoor garden party arranged by the Young Ladies' Mission Circle of the church, and to the decorative and artistic ability of the young ladies and the officers, the extremely unique and picturesque interior was due. The affair was conducted on a very pretentious scale, and revealed excellent management, and a very noticeable sense of what was harmonious and beautiful. The hall was decorated as much as possible to represent a garden as it might appear in summer, and the naturalness of the scene was remarkably pleasing and novel. Chinese lanterns, a tree from which was suspended fruit, chairs, a hammock, and other outdoor summer necessities, all aided materially toward making the idea effective. All manner of inviting, cooked articles could be purchased, such as cake, home-made bread, buns, candy, etc. The dainties were all arranged on separate tables, presided over by pretty young ladies of the Circle.

A musical program provided by first-class talent, was another most delightful and appreciated feature of the affair. Every number on the informal program drew merited applause.

The names of the tables with those who were in charge were as follows:

Home-made Bread, Cake and Buns—Miss Annie Thistlewaite, Daisy Thistlewaite, Mina Edwards, Sophie Elliott, Mabel Wilson, and Electa Goard.

Candy Table—Miss Annie Rigby, Madeline Morrison, Margaret Neill.

The Orange Tree—Ruby Clegg, Ruby Adamson and Marion Lyle.

The Piazza, with orange sherbet and orangeade for sale—Miss Luella Jobbitt, Minnie Lightfoot, Letitia Elliott, Mabel Brown, Ethel Rehill, Edna Pringle and Beatrice Tovey.

All the booths and tables were gratifyingly patronized, and realized well. To the president of the Circle, and to the vice president, Miss Morrow, on whom much of the responsibility rested, deserved credit is to be and efficient members of the Circle, who worked hard to ensure the success of the party.

The following was the musical program:

Instrumental—Miss Sophie Elliott.
Vocal Solo—Miss Edna Pringle.
Instrumental—Mrs. Buchanan.
Violin selection—Miss Helen Flavelle.
Instrumental—Mrs. Buchanan.
Vocal solo—Mrs. G. B. Hughes.
Vocal solo—Mrs. Middleton.
Instrumental, piano—Miss M. Clarry and Miss Sophie Elliott.

LIVELY RUNAWAY

Occupants of Vehicle Got Out and Let Horse Go Free

A bit breaking near Morrow's Hill caused a lively runaway this morning when Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Braithwaite, of Cavan, were en route to the market.

Mrs. Braithwaite managed to climb out of the vehicle and her husband soon followed, the horse continuing towards the city.

As it tore along Aylmer street Captain Thomas, of the fire department caught and brought the terrified animal under control before it reached the Y.W.C.A.

The buggy was undamaged but a considerable number of eggs were broken.

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

In the Spring Most People Need a Tonic Medicine

If you want the best of health and new strength in the spring you must build up your blood with a tonic medicine. Following the long, indoor winter months most people feel depressed and easily tired. This means that the blood is impure and watery. It is this state of the blood that causes pimples and unsightly eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp, stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite, frequent headaches and a desire to avoid exertion. You cannot cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines—you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their tonic, life-giving, nerve-restoring powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood which drives out impurities, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired out, ailing men, women and children. If you are feeling out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive drooping spirits and fill your veins with new, health-giving blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or will be sent by mail to 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LIBRARIAN'S REPORT ON THE ONTARIO LIBRARY ASSOCIATION

Matters of Interest Discussed at Annual Meeting at Toronto.

The following is the report of F. M. Dela Fosse, librarian at the Public Library, on the Ontario Library Association which was submitted to the Library Board at the meeting on Thursday evening.

E. H. D. Hall, Esq.,
Chairman Library Board
Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—In accordance with the resolution passed at the last meeting of the Board I attended the meetings of the Ontario Library Association which were held on Easter Monday and Tuesday, April 17th and 18th in the Reference Library Building, College Street, Toronto. I now have the honour to place before you and the members of the Board my report on the matters brought forward at the various sessions of the Association. As the addresses of the different speakers will be available later in printed form I shall confine myself in the present instance to a resume of the more important features of the meeting.

The opening address of the Chairman, Mr. Cameron, of Woodstock, contained two points of special interest. The first of these had reference to the necessity for a change in the postal rates on books and the second to the propriety of asking the Ontario Government to consider the question of founding a Provincial Library. In regard to the postal rates on books Mr. Cameron pointed out that the present time publishers were allowed to pass newspapers through the mails for one cent for four lbs. weight whereas books for library purposes were subject to a charge of eight cents a lb. The Board may think it worth while to discuss this point with a view to passing a resolution endorsing Mr. Cameron's contention that the rate should be reduced. This would help to strengthen the hands of the Association in approaching the Dominion Government on the question.

In regard to the formation of a Provincial Library, Mr. Cameron's idea was that, by the fusion of the Osgoode Hall Library with those of the Legislative Assembly and other well-known institutions, a Library could be formed corresponding in design to the State Library at Washington. It was felt, however, that a Dominion rather than a Provincial Institution should be aimed at, and the matter was finally left in the hands of the Executive Committee to report on at the next meeting of the Association.

The addresses on the report of the Technical Education and Public Library Committees showed that the Ontario Government is doing a great deal to foster the growth of Technical Education in the Province. It was the feeling of the delegates, however, that, notwithstanding what the Government is doing in the way of providing technical and juvenile libraries for such sections of the community as need them the Inspector of Public Libraries is decidedly handicapped in his work by reason of insufficient assistance. Under present conditions he is burdened with far more work than he or any other man can effectively accomplish, and it was very strongly emphasized that extra help should be afforded in order to enable him to devote his entire time to the detail work of his office.

On the subject of Technical Education the address of Mr. S. H. Rancke of Grand Rapids, Michigan, was of very practical value. Mr. Rancke is the Librarian of the Ryerson Library at Grand Rapids, where technical education in connection with the Public Library has for some time past been in active operation. Mr. Rancke stated that in his Library, lectures illustrated by lantern slides are regularly given, reference books are being constantly added to the shelves and everything is being done that will tend to interest the workingman in technical study. He stated that the outlook was most encouraging but that one factor that works against the library is that of the correspondence schools

This is a matter that is of vital interest to this city. I have it on very competent authority that two or three years ago the average amount of money that went out of Peterboro to the correspondence schools across the border was $20 for every working day, or close on $7,000 per annum. I am informed by the same authority that at the present time this has increased by at least 15 p.c. so that we are allowing at least $8,000 a year to out of the city, for the estimate given to me was a conservative one. What other libraries are doing most assuredly the Peterborough Library can also do, and the work can be rendered all the easier if the manufacturers and merchants of this city will show themselves willing, like their brethren of Toronto, to aid us to the extent of their power.

Mr. Nursery's address on "Public Library Possibilities," contained much interesting matter and was noticeable for its cheerful and optimistic tone. He stated that many libraries that had for some time past been in a state of coma had within the past year come to life and were applying for reinstatement. One encouraging feature also was that rural municipalities seemed to be getting alive to the fact that they should help their local libraries. Mr. Nursery said that during the past year contributions with this object in view had aggregated $30,000 more than in the previous year. In this connection it may be pertinent to ask the members of this Board to consider the advisability of bringing to the notice of the township municipalities in this county the great advantages that the Peterborough Library holds out to its patrons. With moderate assistance on their part a system could be easily inaugurated whereby instalments of books could be regularly sent to distributing centres throughout the county for the use of the agricultural community. The farmers are very good friends to Peterborough, and nothing but good could result from our making our books available to them at the lowest possible outlay to themselves. In the United States a method such as I have noted has been in existence for years, for example, in the city of Cincinnati, and with the happiest results.

Work with the children, always an instructive and inspiring theme, was effectively dealt with by Miss Jessie C. Potter, of Dundas. She told the Association of the success attending the institution of the Children's Hour in the Dundas Library, and of the great interest manifested by the youngsters in such matters as were brought to their notice. It was brought out during the discussion that the Pittsburg Public Library publishes an annotated list of Juvenile books for use by librarians, and that the Finsbury Public Library of London, England, publishes a list of the same nature. It would be a great help to our librarian, and doubtless to your Library Committee were authority given to purchase both these lists for use in the library.

Another point of great interest that was discussed was the question of the relationship of the library to the public schools, and it was borne in on your representative that the closer the connection be between the library and the schools the better it would be for the pupils. The feeling was expressed very strongly at the meeting that the library schould act as a help to the schools in the matter of supplying the pupils with books and especially with literature of a nature to assist them in their school work. I respectfully suggest to the Board the advisability of discussing with the teachers the adoption of a scheme having for its objects the formation of a circulation department in such of the schools as need it.

The matter of a library school was also mentioned, and it was stated that it is a practical certainty that such an institution will be in operation this summer in this province. We shall be notified as soon as anything definite has been arranged in regard to this scheme.

I cannot close my report without referring in the warmest terms to the kindliness and courtesy with which I was greeted by the various officers of the Association. My thanks are especially due the Inspector of Public Libraries, and to Dr. Locke and Mr. Caswall for much information, cheerfully given, as well as to Miss Saxe, of the Westmount Public Library, for valuable hints on library work.

I remain,
Yours obediently,
FRED. M. DELAFOSSE.

PRESENTATION TO MISS WARREN

Banquet in Her Honor at Knox Church

One of the most successful banquets ever held in connection with Knox church took place last evening in the lecture hall when the teachers and officers of the S. S., the A.S.K. Class and Goforth Club gathered to honor Miss E. Warren, who leaves to-day for her home in Smith's Falls and later for Calgary.

Miss Warren has been a faithful worker in all the departments of the church and has been teaching the A. S. K. Class for three years.

In the address and presentation on behalf of the A.S.K. Class, E. Williamson presented Miss Warren with a group photo of the class, old and new Knox church, Rev. E. J. Keith and Miss Warren, while W. Rush, president of the class, read the following address.

Dear Miss Warren,—It is with unspeakable regret that our class is brought face to face with the fact that you are leaving our midst. It would be impossible for us to tell how great we know our loss will be but you have given yourself so keenly to the work of the class that we feel this loss would be mutual and we would not make your leaving any harder than we can help.

Some of us recall the early days of our class when we were left without a regular teacher and it seemed so difficult to get one who understood boys and who could hold them together. That you have succeeded is manifesting the constant and large attendance of the class and its present well organized condition.

You made a study of our needs and as a result there have been made interests to occupy our attention and to keep us in contact in the church. Your constant visits to our homes have also been means of holding us. We can assure you that we see for ourselves as a result of your years of service the reason for centering our lives in the church.

Your work in the class room has resulted in our choosing the high ideals you so fervently presented to us. Behind all your zeal and activity on our behalf during the Sabbath afternoons and in between, we believe your love for Christ, His church and our Spiritual welfare, has been the abiding motive. We assure you of our loyalty to the class, to the church, and its head, and believe we cannot better show our gratitude to you than by remaining true to them, seeking to realize the high standard you have presented. The souvenir that we present will ever keep us and our past associations in your mind and prayers and will keep your solicitations for our future. We pray our heavenly Father may ever guard and protect you and that wherever you may live your life may tell for as great things as it has in your service, so lovingly remembered to our class.

Signed on behalf of the class.
W. Rusk.
E. Williamson.

Miss Warren was remembered yesterday by the engineers of the C.G.E. where she has been private secretary to Mr. McGee, head of the engineering department. She was given a gold-headed umbrella and an address.

Lady associates in the office gave her a hand satchel and short address expressive of their regrets at losing her.

Miss Warren carries with her the good wishes of a host of friends.

Toronto, Chicago and Cleveland capitalists have bought the old Blairton iron mines in Belmont township for $75,000.

ONE FOURTH OF ALL THE MOTOR CARS BUILT IN AMERICA IN 1911 WILL BE

Ford Model T's

It has been estimated by Motor Car Manufacturers that 150,000 automobiles will be built in 1911. Out of this immense quantity 37,500 will be FORD MODEL T's built by the Ford Motor Company.

There is a reason for this exceptionally large number of FORDS and FORD popularity.

The demand for a car of Ford design and Ford quality has been so great that a yearly output of over 30,000 Model T's has been required to supply the demand of buyers.

Ford design and construction, Ford quality in material, strength, durability and service, and ECONOMY in UP-KEEP are features which have caused FORD to manufacture this season ONE-FOURTH of all the cars built in America.

FIGHT NOW IN COUNTRY

Scene of Reciprocity Battle Shifts to People.

Mr. Borden Will Go West For Whirlwind Campaign.

Ottawa, May 8.—With the departure of Sir Wilfrid Laurier this week for England, the scene of the political battle will change in a very short while from the capital to the country. Members are arranging for meetings in their constituencies and leaders are arranging for more or less ambitious tours. Naturally the western tour of the leader of the Opposition assumes first importance. While the dates are not definitely fixed the tentative program is that Mr. Borden will begin his tour of the west about the middle of June, and that it will last three weeks. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be covered as thoroughly as possible in the short time at his disposal. British Columbia will not be visited, the assurance of the British Columbia Ministers who have been in the capital being that the Pacific province will return no Liberals at the next general election.

There is some prospect now that there will be a general election in the autumn. If so, it will probably take place about the end of November, after the redistribution bill has passed the House.

There have been rumors that the Government, after Parliament adjourns, will prorogue. This may be dismissed as mere speculation. It is altogether improbable that the Opposition will allow enough supply to pass the House to lose their hold of the situation. The Conservatives are unanimous in declaring that Parliament will not prorogue, but that the reciprocity agreement will be fought to a finish.

CANADIAN BASIS WAS DIFFERENT

Senators Solve a Puzzling Discrepancy in Table.

Washington, May 8.—There will be a statement made in the Senate tending to re-establish the correctness of the figures of the tariff board on farm labor cost in the United States and Canada. When Senator Stone of Missouri, in an argument for the Canadian reciprocity agreement, showed that the cost of farm labor was in many cases as much in Canada as in the United States, and sometimes more, the opponents of the bill attacked the accuracy of the figures. Now the figures will be place in their right light in the Senate, and probably the best argument which the hostile Senators can find will be that the statement of the comparison was a trifle awkward.

It appears that in making up its farm labor cost estimate the Canadian Government included an estimate of board. The United States in preparing its estimate did not include board, so when the comparison was made it was necessary for the Canadian Government to deduct its estimate for board, and this was what puzzled the Senators.

$50,000 LOST IN MONTREAL FIRE

Blaze in Big Factory Lasted Three Hours.

Montreal, May 8.—Fire broke out in the testing department of the Allis Chalmers-Bullock factory near Lachine late Saturday afternoon and burned fiercely for nearly three hours before the combined efforts of the Montreal and Lachine fire brigades and the employes' brigades of neighboring factories could get it under control. The damage is estimated at between $50,000 and $100,000. A large oil tank in the testing department and lumber piles in the rear of the building made the fire especially difficult to cope with, and it was only after a steel cable had been placed around the tank and it had been hauled to a safe distance that the efforts of the fire-fighters met with success. The damage is chiefly in the testing, winding and punching departments, and is fully covered by insurance, the company carrying $100,000 of insurance with the Canadian Factories' Association, and $900,000 with the New England Mutuals. The cause of the fire was the crossing of a high voltage electric wire.

KING EDWARD AND QUEEN ALEXANDRA IN THEIR CEREMONIAL ROBES—FROM THE TATLER

WESTMINSTER ABBEY AS ARRANGED FOR THE CORONATION—FROM THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

ONE YEAR GONE

KING EDWARD VII.

King Edward, the Peacemaker, whose influence will extend to many more anniversaries of his passing away. His memory will grow greener as the years flit by into the buried past.

Queen Alexandra Returned For Service Quite Ill—Archbishop of Canterbury Conducted the Service—Political News.

London, May 8.—Court mourning ended Saturday with a memorial service at St. George's Chapel, at Windsor, for King Edward.

Queen Alexandra had returned for it. She is in impaired health and with little heart for the festivities of the coronation year. There was a full muster of the royal family at the Albert Chapel, with a small group of the late King's personal attendants.

The service was conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the corresponding clerics of the memorial service for Queen Victoria, which King Edward had attended year after year.

The Dean of Windsor and Canon Dalton were with the archbishop, and the regular choir of St. George's was strengthened by voices from the chapels royal. The hymns had been selected by Queen Alexandra, and the royal mourners subsequently visited the burial vaults, which were illuminated by an electric plant recently installed by the King's orders.

The second year of the new reign opens brilliantly next week with two "courts" and a state drive of the King and Queen to Crystal Palace for the Festival of the Empire.

Westminster pointers indicate a long vacation during June, with a prolongation of the session until the middle or close of August. The Parliament bill will pass its final stage in the House of Commons Thursday night, and there will be an abundance of time for prolonged discussion in the House of Lords after the coronation.

The insurance bill, "made in Germany" with the exception of the tentative proposals respecting unemployment in a few carefully selected industries, will be deferred until another year. The finance bill will not arouse contention, except the clause for the payment of members, and a few bills relating to shops, coal mines and copyright ought to be easily enacted.

Court influence is being quietly exerted in favor of the acceptance of the Parliament bill, which was submitted to the people in December.

Lloyd-George's insurance scheme, while too complex to be understood without a campaign of education, has caught the imagination of the masses, and whatever befalls in the bye-elections it is a vote making scheme of constructive legislation. Perhaps the employers' votes will be lost by it when it comes into operation and creates antagonism between classes, but the main body of wage-earners will be attracted by it, especially as they will themselvs administer the sick, invalidity and unemployment funds.

Speaking at Manchester Saturday, Premier Asquith took the opportunity to dispose of the reports that there were dissentions in the Cabinet over the subject of home rule for Ireland. "There is not a syllable of truth in, nor the shadow of a foundation for the statement," he said, and went on to remark that there had been an enormous change in public opinion on this question, adding:

"For the first time there is a really good understanding between the democracies of both islands. Material ties quite apart from all questions of sentiment bind them together in indissoluble union. During the last few years, the Irish question has come to be regarded more and more as the most urgent part of Great Britain's great imperial problem."

MIXED MARRIAGE TO BE DISCUSSED

Anglican Synod Will Take up Matter at Quebec.

Quebec, May 8.—Some interesting questions are to come before the coming session of the diocesan synod of the Anglican Church, which meets here on June 6.

Among the notices of motion given is one of the dean, to the effect that a committee to consist of three clergymen and three laymen be appointed to prepare a memorial to the general synod of the Church of England in Canada at its next session, on the subject of mixed marriages and the grave danger which threatens the whole community if the civil courts are allowed to annul marriages, which have been solemnized in strict accordance with the laws of the land.

Beer Flowed In Streets.

Acton, May 8.—The street in front of the town hall ran with beer Saturday afternoon, when twenty kegs of lager, seized in the basement of the Dominion House in this local option municipality, were battered open and the contents permitted to form a small river as an object lesson.

The spectacle followed convictions registered against William Lawson, lessee of the refreshment privileges in the hotel, and Albert J. Lehman, proprietor, and his two sons, Norman and Austin, who were convicted of having dispensed the lager also.

THE CORONATION

Illness of Queen Mary and Alexandra May Cause Postponment.

Special to the Review.

London, May 8.—Lloyd's insurance rate against the delay in the Coronation was raised to-day owing to rumors that Queen Mary is in poor health, and that the condition of Alexandra is such that postponement may be necessary.

FIRE GUTS BLOCK AT BROCKVILLE

Loss is About $10,000, Half Covered by Insurance.

Brockville, May 8.—A fire which broke out Saturday morning in J. M. McLennan's laundry on Buell street, for a time threatened the heart of the business portion of Brockville. The absence of a wind averted a conflagration that would have caused thousands of dollars worth of damage.

McLennan's Laundry and the adjoining livery stables of H. B. Sopers were completely destroyed. In addition to these buildings, the shoe shop of Thomas Bobier, W. H. Moore, the Central Hotel Stables, the carriage making shop of E. J. Kirst and the Brock Theatre were also damaged to a certain extent.

The damage is estimated at $10,000, with about half-covered by insurance. Hundreds of dollars worth of laundried goods and carpets and rugs left for spring cleaning at the owners' risk were burned.

The fire is supposed to have originated in the boiler-room of the laundry.

DEATH AT OTTAWA OF LADY RITCHIE

Ottawa, May 7.—The death occurred this morning at 8 o'clock of Lady Grace Vernon Ritchie, wife of the late Sir William Ritchie, former Chief Justice of Canada. The deceased was in her seventy-fifth year, and was known as one of the most prominent women in the Capital. She was born in St. John, N.B., in the year 1836, and was the daughter of the late Mr. T. L. Nicholson. In the year 1856 she married Sir William Ritchie in St. John, and came to Ottawa in 1875, when her husband was appointed a Judge on the Supreme Court Bench, and she has lived here ever since.

Work on Cornwall Canal.

Cornwall, May 8.—Fallon Bros., who have just finished a contract above lock 17 in record time, have been awarded another contract for work in the north side of the canal above lock 19. It includes 200 yards of elevator crib work, of the same general character as that put in above 17. The bottom will be dredged to make a bed for the cribs, which will be filled with stone to near the water level, with concrete above. The work will go on at once and will be finished this summer.

To Minimize Accidents.

New York, May 8.—A nation-wide movement to minimize the number of industrial accidents, placed at 1,000,000 annually throughout the United States, will be inaugurated, it is announced, at the sixteenth convention of the National Association of Manufacturers to be held in New York from May 15 to 17. Three thousand manufacturers, it is expected, will attend.

She has sustained practically no injury.

U.S. TROOPS IN READINESS

Trouble in Mexico Assuming More Serious Phase.

Diaz Won't Resign Until Trouble is Over.

New York, May 8.—The Washington correspondent of The American writes:

"Ambassador Wilson telegraphed the State Department Saturday that continuous rioting is going on in Mexico City, which is being quelled with great difficulty by the police and soldiers.

An order has been issued by President Diaz that all business houses shall be closed until further notice.

The banquet which was to have been given to the Chilian Minister has been cancelled.

Terror prevails in the city.

It is reported that the revolutionists are approaching the capital rapidly. The rioters are encouraged by the near approach of the revolutionists. Many have been killed and wounded. Ambassador Wilson reported that the rioting began Friday night and has spread to different parts of the city. As soon as the police and the troops put down the disorder in one part, it breaks out in another section.

President Diaz has retired to Chapultepec Castle, and has isolated himself. The ambassador believes that his resignation cannot long be delayed.

The Mexican Cabinet has been urging Diaz to resign at once, but the President refuses to accede to their demands.

Heading For Capital.

El Paso, Texas, May 8.—General Francesco I. Madero, provisional president of Mexico, has ordered all the insurrecto troops to abandon positions they hold along the U. S. border and to concentrate their attacks on cities in the interior. The cry among the insurgents now is "on to Mexico." Madero's decision is due, it is said, to a desire to avoid intervention, and also to a hope that such action will bring about the recognition of the insurrectos as belligerents by the U. S. and other powers.

The peace negotiations have been a hopeless failure. The political chiefs gathered for a final talk, completed the organization of the provisional government and bid farewell to their leader. Two committees were appointed on the executive council in Junta and to receive any new proposals from the Mexican Government and the other to direct the diplomatic or commercial relations of the revolutionists with the U. S.

In a statement issued Saturday night, when it became clear that the negotiations would be fruitless, Gen. Madero attributed the failure was due to the "inexplicable ambition of Gen. Diaz."

"He alone will be responsible before the civilized world and in history for all the misery which the war may cause."

While admitting that the Government has agreed to practically all the demands of the insurrectos, Gen. Madero says:

"While Gen. Diaz is in power all laws will be fictitious and all promises tricks of war.

"To Mexico City within a month" is the program set forth by the rebel leaders, as they prepare to march. They have 4,000 men in the State of Chihuahua, and hope to recruit 2,000 on the march. Gen. Rabago with 1,000 federals is reported on the march from Terrazas, and an engagement with him is expected soon.

At the time of filing the despatch foreigners were not being molested by the mobs. Foreign Minister de la Barra and Minister of War Coslo are directing operations against the rioters.

Following the alarming despatch from Ambassador Wilson, Secretary of War Dickinson, Major-General Wood, chief of staff, and Representative Hay, chairman of the house military affairs committee, held a brief conference with President Taft at the White House.

Gen. Wood informed President Taft that plans to move additional troops to San Antonio have been ready for nearly a month, and the War Department needs only orders to despatch 9,000 more troops to Texas.

Warning orders were telegraphed yesterday to Major-Gen. Carter, commanding at San Antonio, instructing him to hold the troops in readiness for an instant forward movement.

The War Department for several weeks has had complete plans ready for the mobilization of the National Guard, which will, in the event of intervention, be called out simultaneously with the orders to the San Antonio troops to cross the border.

President Taft, after the conference yesterday afternoon, reiterated to

TO RECOVER BODY OF BOY

$10 or $15 Needed to Have River Dragged for Eddie Taylor—Will You Help?

The body of little Eddie Taylor, the lad who was drowned at the Peterborough locks a week ago Saturday night, has not been found. The members of the Taylor family are unable to have the river thoroughly grappled to recover the body, and no one else has searched, although a man might be employed for a week at a comparatively small cost to make a thorough search of the river below the dam, where the body is almost sure to be found.

The Review has opened a subscription list for the purpose of raising $10 or $15 to cover the cost of employing a man to thoroughly drag the river where the body probably is. Already $2 has been received from H. B. Rye towards this worthy object, and it is hoped that the balance will be immediately forthcoming, that the body of the lad may be recovered before it is swept away by the current.

It may be said that Mr. Taylor, the father, is ill, and unable to assist. The two brothers are at work earning only enough to support the family, but they cannot leave their employment for more than a day at a time, and are unable to systematically search for the body.

The kindly citizens of Peterborough will, it is felt, want to assist the family in this. It would be a shame that the body should be left in the water with no real energetic search for it by anyone, as if the recovery were a matter of indifference.

Subscriptions will be received at the Review Office, and immediately enough money is received, $10 or so, a man will be put at work, and every effort made to recover the remains. Send in your subscriptions.

Hon. Mr. Duff at Creemore.

Cretmore, Ont., May 8.—The first of a series of meetings called by the Liberal-Conservative Association of North Simcoe, was held in Leonard's Hall Saturday night, to consider the reciprocity pact with the United States. At the special invitation of the Federal member, Major Currie, the Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, Hon. J. S. Duff, was present to discuss the issue from a farmer's standpoint.

Friction Between Chisa and Japan.

St. Petersburg, May 8.—The newspapers report fresh friction between China and Japan. The Rech asserts that Japan is about to present new demands to China with reference to free trade in Kwangtung Province and the transfer of the Dalny customs to Japan. In the event of refusal, Japan presents an ultimatum.

Denver, Colo., May 8.—The joint assembly of Colorado was dissolved on Saturday night without selecting a United States Senator.

Beachy Beats McCurdy.

Washington, May 8.—A three-mile aeroplane race between Aviators J. A. D. McCurdy and Lincoln Beachy was the feature which aroused enthusiasm Saturday at Washington's aviation meet. Beachy won from his opponent in the fast time of five minutes, ten seconds.

In bomb-dropping at a marked spot, representing the deck of a battleship, McCurdy hit the mark three times out of six.

The fifteenth anniversary of the first successful flight of a heavier-than-air machine, that of the late Dr. S. P. Langley, which was made over the Potomac River, was commemorated last night by a reception, known as Langley night at the University Club.

A DISGRACE TO PETERBORO'

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—There has been so much said about beautifying our city. Well, there can never be a beautiful city while there are such terrible odors from our back yards and lanes, it is a disgrace to the city to think that the garbage system is so neglected. I was speaking to a lady who has just moved into our city, and she said; "Well I have been here a month and the garbage man has never called, and the pails are fill and overflowing." Well, just to think I was obliged to tell her that we had no such system in Peterborough. Well, where I came from, a man called early each morning and if you did not have a clean yard an officer called and fined you, but in Peterborough all the refuse can lie there until the sun rots it and then we wonder why we have so many contagious diseases. There are lots of poor men who would be glad to get something of that kind of work to do and our Council should look into it at once, or we will be in the same state as Ottawa has been in. Now is the time to do something.

A HATER OF DIRTY YARDS.

The problem of whether Canada wants reciprocity or not is not at all of consequence beside the question of who owns those chimes.

Publish My Letter The World Over

The Words of Harold P. Bushy, Who Was Permanently Cured of Chronic Lumbago by "Nerviline."

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well-known man in the plumbing and tinsmithing business in Portland.

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that knifing, cruel pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments; not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in the Montreal Witness about Nerviline, and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently, and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating, pain-destroyer like Nerviline.

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS

Mr. Taft says, of the reciprocity pact;

"One path leads to practical, if not political union with Canada, and the development of the entire North American continent as the heritage of a great and free people. The other path leads to the hardening into two distinct political entities, two hostile or at least unsympathetic peoples on this continent. It leads to a closer relation between Canada and a great Britain. It means the carrying out of Joseph Chamberlain's great dream of an imperial federation, bound together no less by trade than by sentiment, with perferential tariffs on either side, with Canada taking the place of the United States as the chief food purveyor of food products and manufactures to Great Britain."

A few days ago in New York President Taft declared that the reciprocity pact meant the breaking of the imperial band that stretched from England around the world and back again. It was a case of now or never with the United States.

If the pact were not accomplished now, the opportunity would pass. Canada is at the parting of the ways. It is either closer imperial bonds or throwing Britain over to join forces with the United States as against the empire.

Surely the issue is clean-cut. Surely the utterances of President Taft are such that in the mind of no loyal, patriotic Canadian a vestige of doubt can remain as to the real purpose of this pact? It is simply, an effort to pry Canada loose from the British empire, of which it is the foundation stone.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared that he would not go to the imperial conference a few weeks ago, because he was going to stay home to put the reciprocity pact through. He was going to sacrifice the furthering of all imperial bonds for the purpose of allying Canada to the United States, and was unashamed. But public sentiment and the wiser men of his party, showed him that such a course was impossible. Not even he, who, in 1891, advocated unrestricted reciprocity, who was an ally of Wiman and other annexationists, dare go the length of refusing to have Canada represented at an imperial council, for the sake of treating with those who would loosen Canada's adherence to the British crown. So he has yielded, and he is going, unwilling and chagrined, to the conference. It is rather a sorry spectacle, but as Canada's Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier will have to put the best face possible on the effort he is making to weaken the imperial tie. Sir Wilfrid will probably feel like a deacon in church, singing bravely, after having tried to burn it down from behind, the night before.

HISTORY AND FACTS

The Montreal Herald quotes Sir John Thompson in 1891, as saying in an election address, "A fair measure of reciprocity is what we desire, and we have no doubt that that can be obtained without undue sacrifice." The Herald then asks if the Macdonald government would have rejected reciprocity as offered by the Taft administration, without sacrifice of business interests, and it opines not.

That is very interesting perhaps as political history, but the Canada even of 1891, is not the Canada of to-day. In 1891 the farmers of Canada had reason to look for the markets of the United States, because the home market was not so prosperous, not so capable of taking their products, and the Canadian trade to Great Britain was not heavy. The effects of the National Policy had been felt, but Canada as an agricultural country, still needed foreign outlets for a big surplus production.

The standing of Canada to-day is entirely different. The tide of immigration is strong towards Canada. Her bread fields and fertile prairies are filling up, but her manufactures and her industries grow apace. Canada is in many respects self-sufficient, self-sustaining. It is not necessary for her to have the American market at the sacrifice she is paying of opening the Canadian market to competition that promises to be ruinous in its cheapness. Canada would obtain a third market by reciprocity, but the United States and a dozen foreign countries obtain a third market too.

Canada to-day is importing considerable farm and dairy produce, under a duty. She will import a lot more with the duty removed, because the production of southern countries like Argentina and Australia, is made under vastly more favorable conditions, and prices are distinctly lower. It is being proved that with a few exceptions the price of farm produce in the United States is not higher than it is in Canada. In fact, the Canadian farmer is getting considerably more for his labor than the American, owing to the absence here of the great food trusts, sucking the juicy profits of handling, out of the people, in the hands of the great organizations, the United States farmer has to accept largely what they choose to pay. With the middleman getting greater play, both farmer and consumer are squeezed more violently.

Canada does not want reciprocity. Times are good in Canada, better than they have been in the United States for a considerable time. We do not want reciprocity with business that is running half-speed, with prices that are falling, thus injuring our own business. Mr. R. L. Borden has echoed the sentiment of the people of Canada when he says that he considers it his duty to fight reciprocity to a finish, for it is being forced on an unwilling people by a government that thought to make a master-stroke and has succeeded only in giving away what Canadians want for themselves.

The promised adjournment of Parliament for two months with the reciprocity affair still hanging fire, means that in the autumn the fight will be taken up with renewed energy, and probably an appeal to the people will result. The demand has been for an appeal to the people before the pact was ratified by Laurier and Co., and because of Mr. Borden's skill and strategy it will likely take place. Investigation into business conditions surrounding the operation of the pact has revealed the fact that it is distinctly most undesirable for Canada, apart from any imperial obligations, and with a vigorous campaign swinging on the strong opposition of the nation, the next election should see a decided overturn of the present administration.

POWER AT KINGSTON

Just at present, when Peterborough is interested in the question of cheap—or perhaps we should say "cheaper"—power, the experience of other municipalities is of interest. Kingston proposes to get power. It has two offers—one from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, the other from the Seymour Power Company. The Seymour Company offer is a straight price of $25 per h.p. for whatever quantity the city wishes to take. The Hydro-Electric offer is complicated, and, according to the Kingston Standard, would make the city responsible for $50,000 a year for thirty years, or $1,500,000. This is what the Standard says of the situation, though its presentation of the Hydro-Electric proposition looks so outrageous that one is led to wonder if it hasn't got tangled up—

The report of the Power Committee of the Council of the Board of Trade, submitted at the annual meeting on Tuesday night, is an important one, and one that cannot be ignored. If we are to have cheap power, when are we to have it? While we have several propositions before the city the fact of the matter is that we have only one proposition from an actually working company, namely, the Seymour Power Co. The present position of the Hydro-Electric Commission in the east is scarcely definite or certain enough to warrant us holding off, and perhaps losing the chance of cheap power at an early date—especially as an acceptance of the Seymour offer, if we understand the situation aright, would not commit us to anything binding beyond a year, after which we could be free to enter into negotiations with any or all other companies offering us power—not one of which, it is safe to say, will be ready for operation within a year or mayhaps a good deal later.

Let us look at the facts: The Seymour Company offers power for at least $25 per horse power for one year or more for any quantity the city wishes to secure. The Hydro-Electric Commission offers 1,200 horse power at $20 per horse power, to which is to be added interest, $9.45, maintenance $1.36, sinking fund $4.25, and depreciation $6.17, making a total cost per horse power of $42.23, with a contract of 30 years. For 1,800 horse power the total cost was reduced to $31.93 per horse power and for 2,400 h.p. to $25.51 per horse power. To the layman, therefore, the offer of the Seymour Company at $25, even if it is not further reduced, appears to be the better one—and is reasonably low as power rates go, for in Montreal the rates are above $30.

Then, too, as the Board of Trade reports show, we have as a warning to us the none too pleasant experience of some of the western towns in contracting with the Hydro-Electric for more power than they were able to dispose of; and it is perhaps not surprising that the Board of Trade committee "views with some alarm the proposition of the Hydro-Electric Commission which for the minimum amount of 1,200 horse power would make the city responsible for $50,676 per year for a period of thirty years in order to secure power for the city." Under such circumstances the offer of the Seymour Company, binding for only one year, and at a lower rate than that offered by the Hydro-Electric (whose ability to furnish power within a reasonable time has yet to be demonstrated) would seem to be a desirable one.

EDITORIAL NOTES

President Taft is proving to be one of the best sources of inspiration for those who believe that the reciprocity pact is against the best interests of Canada and the Empire. In his recent speech at the Publishers' banquet at New York he used the following words: "In one form or another the federation of Greater Britain is quite possible, and though the issue will not be settled in a day it bids fair to become within a generation one of the most momentous in politics. From the point of view of the United States there would be no cause to welcome this federation. If it should be based on internal reciprocity with protection against other nations, American exports, both raw materials and manufactured goods, would suffer. So vast are the markets included in the domain of Greater Britain, so imposing is its situation almost everywhere, that if this greatest of Empires was to follow a policy of exclusion towards other countries it might provoke a league to break its power. In such a league, too, the United States might conceivably have a place; for from the closeness of its relations with British America it might be forced either to become part of this Greater Britain, or as a matter of self-preservation to oppose it. It is fact of the present that the drawing together of Great Britain and Canada is in no sense to the benefit of the United States."

The Cake That Billy Bought

A Valentine Story

By MARTHA J. TOWNE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The door of the Woman's Exchange swung open and closed behind Billy Delwin's broad back. For an instant he hesitated, besieged by a battery of feminine eyes. Then he strode forward to the counter, where under glass cases were arranged handsome and toothsome cakes of every description and variety.

With his hat under his arm he stared down at the cakes with a calculating eye. "I want a plum cake," he said finally. "Have you got one today?"

"Wait a minute." And the woman disappeared, presently returning with a large box, which she opened and disclosed under tissue paper wrappings a huge round cake.

Billy's eyes sparkled dangerously as he surveyed the beautiful cake. "I'll take it," he said quickly. Then he added a question, "Is it plum cake?"

"Yes, indeed, and perfectly delicious," said the woman enthusiastically.

Then it was that he summoned courage to lean forward and ask a question in a low voice, "Is it against the rule to mention the name of the member who baked this cake?"

The cash register clanged noisily as the woman turned away. "Against the rules," she said crisply.

"May I inquire," persisted Billy hesitatingly, his voice still lower, "if this cake was baked—er—er—by an old lady?"

The attendant smiled shrewdly over her shoulder. "It's against the rules to mention ages also," she returned.

Once in the street he boarded a car and was conveyed with more or less rapidity to his bachelor rooms. He took the cake from its box.

"I dunno. That's more like it than any of 'em," he muttered as he went to and fro, hastily removing the things from his library table. Then he laid several clean white towels on the polished surface and, bringing from various places of concealment a number of large round frosted cakes, he placed them in a row on the table. There were seven in all.

"Looks like a cake sale," he grinned somewhat anxiously. "I hope none of the chaps happen in. They'll think I'm all off if they see this layout; but, by George, I'll find her if it takes the rest of my life!"

He walked around the table, surveying its toothsome burden with a critical eye. Of all the cakes he decided that his last purchase was the handsomest, the lightest and the most deliciously fragrant.

"Now for a taste," he said, plunging a silver knife in the first one. The slice was clean and yellow and full of currants. Billy wrinkled his nose disdainfully and laid down the slice.

"Phyllis never made that one," he commented. "Her cakes always have raisins in. Now for the next one!"

One after another he tried the different cakes, sniffing, tasting, examining and shaking his head dubiously after each operation.

At last he came to his latest purchase, the Valentine cake, and if one watched him closely they might have observed that his cheeks paled and his firm lips were compressed into straight colorless lines. Suddenly he groaned and laid down the knife.

"If this one shouldn't be hers!" he muttered desperately, and then, with an upward fling of his handsome head, he plunged the knife into the cake near its edge, careful not to disturb the decorations that adorned the top. He drew out a piece, yellow and rich and crumby, full of great raisins and tiny flecks of spice.

With the air of one participating in some great ceremony Billy Delwin ate the cake slowly, enjoying to the full its elusive flavor. When he had finished he laid down the knife and sat down in a big leather covered chair, the color flooding his tanned cheeks.

"I've found her! I've found her at last!" he cried exultantly. "Nobody in the world ever baked that cake except Phyllis Giles! She made one last year for her Valentine party—same size, same flavor, same decoration—and you can't fool me, sir!"

He turned the cake slowly around and viewed it from all sides. "Her hands made it, she touched it, and she placed all those little hard red hearts about the edge, and not one of those hearts is harder than Phyllis' own heart or she would never have hidden herself away from me in this manner. As if Mr. Giles' failure and suicide could make any other difference to me than to feel more tenderly toward her! If nothing had happened or if Phyllis had not hidden away after it was over we should have been married by this time instead of my following up the only clew I ever could get—that she had come to New York and was baking cakes for the Woman's Exchange! I've bought plum cakes from every exchange in the city, I believe, until the women look on me with suspicion." He sat for a long time in silence, and then he arose and bundled the cakes into their boxes.

The last purchase he wrapped carefully and replaced in its box. Then he got into his overcoat, picked up his hat and with the cake under his arm he sought the street. Presently he was once more standing before the counter in the Woman's Exchange.

The tea tables were empty now, and there was no one around save the stern visaged woman who had waited upon him earlier in the afternoon.

"Will you kindly break your rule and tell me the name of the young lady who made this cake?" he asked with the keenest anxiety in his deep voice.

"It is impossible," said the woman primly.

"Would you forward a letter to her if I should write one?" pleaded Billy.

"Certainly not!" And her shocked expression was the first glimmer of humor that Billy had seen in the dull fabric of this wearisome chase after the girl he loved.

"Will you call her on the telephone and allow me to talk with her?" persisted Billy. "Really, madam, you will be making two people very happy!"

"I could not do that either. I am very sorry, sir, but it seems to me if Miss Giles really wanted to see you she would not withhold her address." The woman flushed with vexation at the slip she had made in thus revealing the name Billy had been longing to hear.

"It is Phyllis, then!" he cried triumphantly. "I knew that cake. Nobody in the world can make a plum cake like Phyllis," he explained with enthusiasm. "The moment I tasted it I knew."

The harsh face softened a little. "Her cakes are different from the others," she said lukewarmly. "She said once that she could make cakes better than anything else in the world, and so she thought that was the thing she ought to do to gain a livelihood."

"Bless her heart!" muttered Billy under his breath, knowing well that if he had his own way that Phyllis' dainty fingers should never bake a cake in the world unless it was for some especial treat like St. Valentine's day.

"Do you know what day tomorrow will be?" he demanded suddenly.

The woman stared. "Valentine's day, of course," she said, busying herself with the wares in the glass case.

"Well, that's the day when separated sweethearts are reunited, you know," blurted Billy sheepishly. "Seems to me if I could help any one along in that way I'd do it!"

"It isn't part of the business," said the woman impatiently. "Really, sir, I'd like to help you out, but I simply cannot divulge the names of our members."

"Very well, madam," cried Billy grimly. "I'll find her without your help, and when I do you'll lose the best cake maker in your membership!"

The door closed noisily behind his indignantly retreating form, and the woman stared after him for a brief moment. "I wonder," she muttered softly—"I wonder if it would have done any harm to have told him; he had a good face and he seemed so much in earnest, and, just as he said, tomorrow is Valentine's day!"

In the street Billy paused for a moment and looked up and down. Suddenly a little black gowned form emerged from the crowd and paused for an instant before the door of the exchange and then laid a tentative hand on the knob.

Billy Delwin was beside her in an instant.

"Phyllis!" he cried sharply. "I've got you now, and you can't lose me again!"

She uttered a little frightened cry and turned a white face up to his. "Oh, Billy, Billy!" she gasped. "Where did you come from?"

"I just came out of this exchange, where the hearts of the attendants are harder than the little red hearts on your Valentine plum cake, for they would not divulge your address, though I begged almost on my knees. But I've got you now, Phyllis Giles! Don't you dare enter that ogre's den again!"

He drew her trembling form close to him, and they stood in the shadow of the doorway, her slight form leaning against him.

"How did you know, Billy? How did you find me out?" asked Phyllis after a little silence.

Billy told her of his quest for the cakes, of the slight clew he had followed and of his purchase that night of the Valentine plum cake, which he recognized as her handiwork.

"Darling," he whispered after it had been told, "tomorrow is St. Valentine's day. You have baked this cake, and on it you have asked the question, 'Will you be my valentine?' Now, I bought that cake and take it upon myself to answer that question. I will be your valentine under one condition."

"What is that?" asked Phyllis.

"That you will admit that you're not sorry that I bought the cake."

"Sorry!" echoed Phyllis joyfully. "Why, Billy, I was thinking of you when I made it, and I splashed so many tears over the little red hearts that they bled, and I had to replace them with others. Billy Delwin, I thought you'd never come!"

Mob Threw Coal Overboard.

Seattle, Wn., May 5.—Private cable advices received last night from Cordova, Alaska, report a mob boarded an Alaska Steamship Co.'s vessel when it arrived with a cargo of Canadian coal and began dumping the coal over board.

The action of the mob is said to be the result of agitation against the importation of foreign fuel.

It is asserted that the steamship company has appealed to President Taft to send troops to suppress rioting.

Several days ago agitators began urging the formation of a mob to emulate the "Boston Tea Party" of colonial days.

The trouble started as soon as it was announced that the Supreme Court would not take up until October the judgment quashing the suits against the English coal syndicate.

McLetchie Goes to Ireland.

Toronto, May 5.—When Herbert McLetchie was arraigned in the assizes yesterday, the jury having disagreed as to his guilt of the killing of Edward Jacobs, by running him down on Bloor street, with his employer's automobile, he was remanded to jail. He will be admitted to bail in his own surety of $1,000, when the crown is assured that he is about to go back to his home in Ireland. There are still charges of wounding and furious driving standing against him in the Police Court.

New Issue of Commerce Stock.

Montreal, May 6—The Bank of Commerce officially announced yesterday afternoon that it will issue 40,000 shares of new stock at 180 to shareholders of record of May 17th. As the shares are $50 par, this will mean $2,000,000 of new stock, bringing the paid up capital to $12,000,000.

The directors announced that $1,000,000 had been added to the rest account, which will amount to $8,000,000.

Commerce stock has recently gone up 10 points and sold yesterday afternoon at 230.

An Aeronautic School.

Montreal, May 6.—H. A. Somerville, an old member of the staff of The Daily Witness hopes to have his aeronautic school in operation by July 1. It will be situated at King Edward Park, and will include a factory for building the machines, and a garage to accommodate their own and any outside machines. Those who care to undertake this fascinating, but expensive sport will also be given tuition.

Telegraphers to Meet.

Toronto, May 6.—The convention of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, which comes to Toronto next week, is to be well entertained by the city and local membership. Among the chief events will be a reception at Massey Hall on Monday evening, at which Sir James Whitney will tender the order an address of welcome. Mayor Geary will also address the convention.

NATURE WILL CURE YOU

Of Kidney Disease, Aided by Father Morriscy's No. 7.

Kidney trouble is one of the most distressing ailments of mankind, and leads to backache and rheumatism. This is because of the importance of the work done by the kidneys,—work which must proceed normally to insure good health.

A very large proportion of civilized people have some form of kidney trouble, sometimes without knowing that their malady is of that nature. Many obscure pains can often be traced to diseased kidneys.

These organs are the filters of the body. Their function is to strain out of the blood and eliminate through the bladder the worn out tissue and other impurities gathered by the blood in its course.

When the kidneys become congested and sluggish, these impurities, including the irritating and poisonous uric acid, are not entirely removed from the blood. The result is that the uric acid is deposited in the joints and tissues, causing the agonies of rheumatism and frequently affecting the liver and other organs.

Father Morriscy, the famous priest-physician of Bartibogue, N.B., after much research compounded a remedy which worked hand in hand with Nature. His doctrine, justified by thousands of cures, was that the need is not a patchwork relief, but a treatment that will enable the forces of Nature, working through the kidneys, to accomplish their intended work.

His famous prescription, No. 7, assists the kidneys to work vigorously and eliminate the harmful uric acid from the whole system. In the form of tablets, No. 7 is easy to take, and will effect cures where other remedies have failed. Do not trifle with kidney disease, but take No. 7 Tablets, the treatment that has proved so successful with other sufferers.

THE REVIEW'S NEW STORY

"Cameo Kirby" by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson Commences To-morrow

Novelized From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

Subtle humor, tear impelling pathos, dueling, lynch law, suicide, attempted murder, gambling, heart entanglement and realistic character drawing combine to make "Cameo Kirby" an unusual play and an unusual novel---a cameo of modern fiction finely graven, richly set; a word cameo by those master craftsmen Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, whereon are shifting pictures of the old days along the Mississippi when the Natchez and the Robert E. Lee raced to New Orleans with fortunes at stake; old days when gamblers, amateur and professional, won and lost almost unbelievable sums on the river steamers; days when Mark Twain was a pilot and when the real life prototype of Jim Bludso of the Prairie Belle held "her nozzle ag'in the bank till the last galoot" was ashore. A well born, well intentioned young man through association with bad companions becomes an accomplished gambler. Falsely accused of murder, he meets a young girl, with whom he falls in love. How vital complications baffle him, how conspiracy places his life in the balance, how the love of a pure woman may work wonders in the regeneration of a man---these themes and others give "Cameo Kirby" its thrill, its fascination, its powerful heart interest.

That Canadian cheese sent to Scotland is often found from 1-2 to 10 lbs under weight is the complaint of Canada's agent at Glasgow.

DIP NETS MUST NOT BE USED

The Fine for Violation is From $5 to $50.

Fishery Inspector Watt has received the letter given below and will have to act accordingly. This means that the use of all dip nets will be prohibited. The letter is as follows;—

Toronto, May 2, 1911.

Sir,—One of the Peterborough papers had an article last week, stating that Fishery Inspector Watt gave his views on the Fishery Act, and it ended as follows; "The suckers have begun to run, and Inspector Watt states that it is permissible to use dip nets to capture these fish, Of course the permission to use nets will be rescinded when the game fish make their appearance."

I should like to know what authority you had for having an article like that published, when such is not the case. No one is allowed to use dip nets, or any other kind of nets, excepting under authority of a license from this department, and anyone so doing subjects himself to a fine of from $5 to $50 for every fish so taken.

A FAMILY MIXUP

Not a Case of Kidnapping as Rumored

A rumor that a case of kidnapping had occurred in the vicinity of Peterborough, caused some little stir, but an investigation of the facts show that the impression was erroneous, and no action is being taken in the matter.

It appears that a man and his wife have been living apart for some years. There were two children and the husband becoming aware that the children were not in the best of hands, when with the mother, went up to Toronto where his wife was living a somewhat questionable life, and brought the children down to Peterborough, leaving them at the home of his mother near the locks bridge. The mother of the children arrived here, discovered the whereabouts of her children, and left with them to a point north of here about six miles.

No police action has been taken in the matter locally and it is likely that the affair will be let drop.

Indian River lost a well-known resident last evening, when Maurice Meade passed away at the age of 84 years. Three years ago he was stricken with a paralytic stroke, but recovered to such an extent as to be able to be around and enjoy good health. Several weeks ago, however, his health declined and the end came. The late Mr. Meade was born in Ireland. He came to this country about the year 1847 and took up farming at Indian River. SUGGESTION ON CHIMES AFFAIR

Chimes Should be Handed to Mayor and Returned

The following has been suggested as a simple, practicable way of solving the question of the ownership of the Chimes, satisfactory to all parties concerned.

Referring to the matter of the decication of the People's Chimes, it is suggested that a procedure that might be followed and which would be entirely satisfactory, is that the Chimes Committee formally hand over to Mayor Morrow, as the people's chief officer, the chimes, that Mayor Morrow formally hand them back to the Rev. Canon Davidson and his committee, with the request that they be dedicated under the auspices as proposed by Canon Davidson and his fellow workers.

OFFICERS OF THE BROTHERHOOD AT KNOX CHURCH

Installed at the Evening Service Helpful Talk by the Pastor

At the service in Knox church last night the officers of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and Phillip, who were elected in the afternoon, after a splendid address from Judge Huycke, were installed by the chaplain, Rev. H. J. Keith.

The following are the officers for the ensuing year:—

Chaplain—Rev. H. J. Ketih.
President—K. M. Denoon.
1st Vice-Pres.—W. J. Byers.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Dr. J. Malcolm McCullough.
Secretary—H. Young.
Treasurer—A. Parker.

CONVENERS OF DIFFERENT COMMITTEES.

Lookout—W. Routley.
Devotional—W. T. Bartley.
Literary—R. T. Mead.
Social—H. McCannon.

After the ceremonies Rev. Mr. Keith went on to talk of the aims of the Brotherhood.

He told the story of Ridley and Latimer, and of the former saying, "play the man," when they were about to be martyred at the stake.

The world needed "men" to-day.

It was not only necessary to play the man for personal interests, but for Jesus Christ.

Some men regarded the man who could do a little of everything—evil things also—as pretty near perfect.

The church had no claim on such men as they regarded it as an institution which interfered.

The cry had gone out for God to give us men—men whom the lust or office could not change—men whom the spoils of office could not kill.

There were a great many in the world who had not a right knowledge of what they ought to believe. They never stopped to think or go outside of themselves where God existed.

Because of the love inside for sin, or because of slight misunderstanding they did not believe.

There were others who did not believe there was a God. The Bible classed such believers as fools.

It was not sufficient that as a result of our thinking we came to believe in God, but that we should realize our relationship to God.

It made a difference to God what kind of life a man lived, for man was the offspring of God.

The Brotherhood stood on the surface for the highest manifestation of manhood.

The members were implored to try and recognize what the true type of manhood was. Each one should think it was his place to go outside and help some needy soul, thus trying to live up to the Brotherhood code.

A male choir under the leadership of Mr. D. Thompson supplied appropriate music for the service.

TOO MUCH TIME GIVEN UP TO UNSATISFYING PLEASURES

Large Congregations Heard Rev. J. G. Potter at St. Andrew's Church

St. Andrew's church was filled to capacity at both services yesterday, the occasion being the seventy-eighth anniversary of the church, for which Rev. J. G. Potter had been secured to deliver the anniversary sermons. At both services Master Wilfrid Morison, the popular and gifted boy soprano, was heard in beautiful sacred numbers, and his voice, since his former visit to Peterborough, seems to have expanded wonderfully in volume and purity of tone. His selection last evening was "Ora Pro Nobis," to which his sympathetic and expressive voice lent itself admirably.

At the evening service every pew was occupied and chairs were brought into requisition. At seven o'clock it was impossible to accommodate the people who continued to come.

Rev. J. G. Potter delivered a most forcible and inspiring sermon, preaching from Phil. 1, 25, "Let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ; that whether I come and see you or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel," and from the 21st verse, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

"What is it for some people to live?" asked the pastor. "For some people to live is pleasure. They may, from Sabbath to Sabbath evidence a slight regard for the things of God by attending church once a day, but that is their limit. The remainder of their lives is given up wholly to pleasure. They become engrossed in chasing fleeting, unsatisfying pleasure bubbles. Others live for their associations, and if these are not good, they often are dragged away from the path of rectitude. Many men make their business their god, to the exclusion of everything else. While business and its associations are clearly necessary, still, if we make them our sole aims to the exclusion of Christ, then, sooner or later we will be brought to a halt."

The preacher told, as an illustration, a story of three elderly ladies of means, who, after spending years in card playing and other idle amusements, seeking pleasure, failed to be satisfied, and admitted later that those things did not satisfy the longings for happiness as did the teachings of God.

"Before and in every life there are great possibilities and opportunities," he continued, but in every life there are things which will contribute to disaster if not carefully guarded. Our heart must be right, and be charged with the proper Christian spirit. The second thing at enmity to God is our liability to listen to the subtle and unwise promptings of those who are opposed to God. Nothing tells more against a striving Christian, sometimes clouding his spiritual vision and putting to rout the early teachings of a Godly mother or a devoted Sunday school teacher and all home-instilled truths, than listening to the tempter in the shape of ungodly and skeptical souls. It should always be shunned.

"There are old men to-day," remarked Rev. Mr. Potter, "whose bitterest regrets are that they did not accept God when young."

In concluding, he urged all to so live on earth that their lives would be stamped with fidelity, earnest striving and all the Christian attributes.

Previous to the sermon Miss Olive Howell sang, in splendid voice, "Nearer to Thee."

ACKERMANS TO BUILD A FIVE STOREY WAREHOUSE

Will be the Largest in Regina To be Completed Early This Fall

The Daily Standard, of Regina, says—A five-storey warehouse, of liberal dimensions, and of a type calculated to place it in a class of its own, will be constructed during the present year by the B. F. Ackerman, Son & Company. Plans have been drawn and accepted with some minor changes, and the contract for the work has practically been let to the Parsons Construction Company. The building will not only be one of the largest in the city, but being situated on lots 19 and 20 in block 203, will be one of the most central warehouses of the city. Storey & Van Egmond have arranged the plans, which call for an approved style of warehouse, and although the external appearance will be of the usual type characteristic of warehouses, it will be of the highest efficiency. Some slight alterations are being made to the plans at the present time to comply with suggestions made by the Ackerman Company. The original intention was that the warehouse be four storeys in height, but that has been changed, it being deemed advisable to have it five storeys.

The warehouse, when completed, will easily outclass everything of its kind in the city. It will be five storeys in height, and while the plain design usually characteristic of warehouses will be in evidence, its efficiency will be first-class. The building will be 50 feet by 180 feet in dimensions. The construction is of the most approved type for such buildings, the slow burning heavy mill type.

The original intention of the Ackerman Company was to erect a four-storey warehouse, of the ordinary type. It was later considered advisable to add one story, and have the type of construction changed to the heavy slow-burning mill construction, which has been largely adopted in this city of late. In place of the ordinary joists as supports, originally planned, the flooring will be of heavy construction and depend entirely on the steel girders for support. The flooring will be six inches in depth, with wooden flooring covering it, one inch in thickness.

The plans for the new building have been practically completed, although some of the minor details of the changes advised by the B. F. Ackerman, Son & Company have not yet been completed. Until the plans have been completed in every detail the contract for the erection of the building will not be let. It is understood the Parsons Construction Company is the lowest tenderer.

The new warehouse will be erected on lots 19 and 20, in block 203, on Dewdney street, between Cornwall and Scarth street, or in the very centre of the warehouse and wholesale district. The proposed structure when completed will have a much greater capacity than the other warehouses, and will be at least one storey higher than any of the other warehouses either erected or contemplated in this city so far as is known.

Work on the excavation will be commenced without delay in order that the building may be completed at the earliest possible date. The B. F. Ackerman, Son & Company will continue to occupy their present warehouse apartments in the Lair building on Dewdney street, until their proposed new structure is completed.

IMPROVEMENTS AT STONY LAKE

Change to Pavilion and Dock a Juniper Island

All of the Stony Lake cottagers who have visited the lake this season, and who have passed near the store on Juniper Island, have been agreeably surprised to notice the improvements which have taken place there since last summer. Not only has the pavilion been very much enlarged, but the dock has also had an extension made to it for the greater convenience of an ever-increasing number of both large and small boat owners. This new part of the dock has been roofed over, so that in wet weather persons coming off the boats can step right under shelter. This will surely be a great benefit to the patrons of Juniper Island store and post office. Mr. Harry W. Stook, the lessee of the store, has also built a nice large, two-storey boat house, with sleeping rooms over, so as to be able to accommodate the large number of people who patronize this popular summer resort.

The water at Stony Lake has not been as high this spring as formerly, at the present time being between two and three feet lower than a year ago.

GOOD MONEY IN GROWING CELERY

Lindsay Man Has Made Money From This Specialty

Talking with a Lindsay man the other day, he derided the idea that people had to rush off to the Northwest to make money by tilling the soil. He holds extremely sensible ideas with regard to a decent cultivation of the land, and is optimistic as to the results from careful farming. He maintains, and rightly, too, that the day when Ontario was a wheat raiser has passed, but that her day as a grower of necessaries of life is only commencing. He got down to clear, straight business talk when he told of his efforts and experience with one line of product.

"Take the matter of celery," said he, "in which I make a specialty. I have mastered the way in which to grow it, and I have the ground for it to grow in. Last year, from three-quarters of an acre of ground I grew 27,500 head of first-class celery. It was so good that I could have sold double the quantity if I had it. For this I netted $2.40 per 100 head, delivered at express office at the station. That was only one end of my business, but it will give a fair idea of the possibilities in that direction. Lots of people in the district between Toronto and Kingston may have thought they were consuming California celery all winter. A deal of it came from my land. It is some trouble to take care of it and have it nice and fresh, but trouble is incidental to all business.

"Fourteen years from to-day I will, if I live, have an income of $3,000 to $4,000 per year without doing much work for it. I am discounting the future. On 50 acres of land I am setting out over 1,000 apple trees, with plums and other fruits in between. In eight years such varities as the Wealthy will be in very fair bearing, and in twelve years the Spys, the king of all Canadian apples, will be giving a full crop. With careful pruning, keeping off the scale, and attention such as should be given, I will have an orchard that will be a perfect mine. There's nothing to equal it for a sure thing. But I'm one man, possibly, in the hundred who has patience to wait.

As the population of our province and country increases the call is larger for produce. It might just as well be supplied from round here as from anywhere else. We are reaching the point where we will consume pretty nearly all we can raise. Take eggs. A few years ago they were exported from round here a quarter of a million dozen of eggs. For the last two years there has been no export. Why? Home, city and Northwest consumption has taken care of the egg crop. The garden truck consumed in Toronto, for instance, can be raised two hundred miles away, just as well as outside the city. For a good thing in produce there is an almost infallible demand. If the men who are getting off to the west would stay at home, put intelligence and care and work and variety into their farm work, they would be largely better off and escape all the discomforts of pioneer life."

C.G.E. CHAMPIONS WIN THE OPENER AT HAVELOCK 2-0

The Midland League opened on Saturday with C.G.E. at Havelock and the game ended in a win for the 1910 champions by 2 goals to nil.

C.G.E. won the toss and decided to kick uphill in the initial half. There was a slight breeze flowing across the field which tendered the game to be rather slow, as the ball was constantly out of play. Soon after the kick off, Williams got going on the left, and through a nice piece of combination got in close, only to see the ball go over the bar. From the goal-kick Lancaster got going, but shot wide. Bridge received rather a hard blow and the game stopped till he recovered. A nice rush by Corliss, French and Miller, resulted in a corner, which was well cleared by Walters, who was playing a sterling game. C.G.E continued to press, but were unable to score, and the whistle blew for half-time with no score.

In the second period although with the sun in their faces, the C.G.E. were not to be denied and came with rush after rush, when after 10 minutes of play, Miller beat Capp, with a low swift shot. From the kick off Havelock woke up and Doran sent in a puzzling shot, which Jones tipped over the bar, for Havelock's first corner, this was badly placed and Pagett soon set his forwards going, only to meet a stubborn defence in Waters and Easton. Bridge made a nice run up the left, but his pass was short. However, from the return Mason passed to Pagett, who scored No. 2 with a long drive. After this both teams took matters easy, as the heat was telling on the players, and nothing of any merit happened in the closing stages, and the final whistle came as a welcome to all

The teams lined-up as follows:

C.G.E.		Havelock
	Goal
Jones		Capp
	Backs
Hull		Waters.
McNamee		Easton
	Halves
Mason.		Kindred.
Pagett		Hitchins

W. Patterson gave entire satisfaction as referee.

"Y" ELEVEN CAME BACK IN THE SECOND HALF AND TIED GAME

St. James' Defeated St. John's 9-1—All Saints' Blanked Park St. 3-0.

The Y. M. C. A. team tied the Knox eleven, on the latter's grounds, Patterson Street, Saturday in a Church League fixture.

Half-time, Knox, 2 Y. M. C. A., 0
Full-time, Knox, 2 Y. M. C. A., 2

The field is only eighty yards from one goal to the other and rather rocky. This handicapped the "Y" boys while on the other hand, the Presbyterians were used to such conditions.

FIRST-HALF

The first half was featured by some good football, neither side having much the advantage. Considerable time was wasted chasing the ball from the road and adjourning lots.

After about 30 min. play, McPherson for Knox fooled Fleming off a nice pass from centre.

Soon after he repeated the trick this time from a scrimmage before the "Y" goal.

A penalty kick, which Knox was taking, caused considerable discussion Knox protesting against a decision as to where the Y.M.C.A. goalkeeper should stand. Referee Robertson stood by his decision, however, and the Knox bunch wasted a considerable amount of wind which might better have been saved for the better half which came soon after.

SECOND HALF

The second period started off at a fast clip and remained so to the final call.

Knox played a one man defence game which made it very hard for the "Y" forwards to make connections as they were continually being called back for off-sides. The left wing men scored a couple of times but on off-sides.

About 20 mins. after the half-way house Ingram managed to start the good work for the Y.M.C.A. when he scored from close in. Score, Knox 2, Y.M.C.A. 1.

For a time it looked as though there was to be no more scoring though the Y.M.C.A. was having considerably the better of the play.

With 10 mins. to play Y.M.C.A. started a nice combination rush, and Adams scored the last goal of the game.

The line-ups were as follows.

Y.M.C.A.		Knox
	Goal
Fleming		Calladine
	Backs
Hampton		Hardie
Dr. McPherson		Shinner
	Halves
Adams		A.H. Watson.
Tarte		Knight.
Flowers.		Lorimer.

Kerr.		Jackson.
Ingram		W. McPherson.
	Right Wings.
Canniff		A. S. Watson
Bowness		McArthur.

Miller		Sutherland.

ST. JAMES' 9 ST. JOHN'S 1

St. James beat St. John's to the tune of 9 to 1 on Saturday. Captain Braun won the toss, and sent St. James' to face the wind, this being an important factor, as the wind changed considerably during the course of the game. Three of the goals scored by St. James' were a trifle lucky, the second, by Gash, bouncing over Horrell's arm, and in the second half Turner was standing well up the field, and as St. John's goalkeeper was taking a goal kick, his foot caught in the ground, and the ball went straight to Turner, who instantly shot giving the custodian no chance. Gash's third goal was scored while the St. John's goalkeeper was under the impression that a free kick had been given. St. James' throughout the game played with more precision, the ball passing from half back to wing forward and on the centre in fine style and their defence was remarkably sound. Leader kept a good goal, his only mistake costing his side a goal. Gribb and Braun at back were very sound and they seemed to have a good understanding with their halves. Sandiford Yates, and Hodson fed their forwards well, and though they had to give away weight, they held their men in fine style. Turner took every opportunity to shoot, scoring five goals. He was given several of the chances by Newton, who played a very unselfish game. Gash scored three goals, one of them from a corner being the prettiest of the match. The two Hotstons put up a fine game on the wings always putting the ball for the inside men to score.

For St. John's, Simmonite stood out above them all, his head work being fine. He combined defence with attack, feeding his forwards judiciously. Renshaw and Hancox played a nice game, and Brown was a good second to his captain in the half back line. Copson played a good game but he was a trifle selfish.

Mr. F. Harris, gave every satisfaction as referee.

The line-up was as follows.,

St. James.		St. John's
	Goal.
Leader		Horrell
	Backs
Gribb.		Renshaw.
Braun		Hancox
	Half-Backs
Sandiford		Smith
Yates		Simmonite
Hodson		Brown.
	Forwards
E. Hotston		Davis
Gash		Sharman
Turner		Copson
Newton		Edwards.
W. Hotston		Stuart

Linesmen—Rellon and Gaskell.

"PILLS LIKE A FYLE"

So Harsh and Drastic are Many Pills as to Seriously Injure Health.

In a letter written from his home in Valencia, Mr. Marsh Selwyn does service to thousands by drawing attention to the injuries inflicted upon delicate people by drastic purgative pills.

"For a long time I suffered from constipation. This condition compelled the use of pills. Like many another, I made the unwise choice of using pills that were like lightning in their activity. I began to be filled with intestinal disturbances, constant rumblings, gas in the bowels and diarrhoea. I grew pale and emaciated. Then the doctor told me drastic irritating pills had caused catarrh of the bowels, an almost incurable disease. Explaining my situation to a friend, he advised a trial of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I speedily experienced the healing and curative effect they exert on the stomach, liver and bowels. The intestines, freed from irritating drugs, rapidly regained natural tone, the bowels acted as if nature and not Dr. Hamilton's Pills were at work. I know it will be of value to thousands to know that a pill as mild and curative as Dr. Hamilton's is available to the ailing."

For bowel disorders, sick headache, constipation, liver and stomach derangement, there is no pill so invariably sure to cure as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse a substitute. Sold in 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Are Mild--Never Gripe

MR. TAFT AND OTHER WITNESSES

(Toronto News.)

Discussing reciprocity The New York Times speaks of Canada as "a nation that is asserting itself against the world's greatest empire." The Americans understand the true inwardness of the Washington bargain if some Canadians do not. They see that in drawing Mr. Fielding into this agreement the Washington Government scored heavily against Canada and Great Britain. They know that in entering into the arrangement the Laurier Government dealt a severe blow at the Imperial connection.

Let us not forget that at New York a few days ago in the presence of many United States newspaper men and of some Canadian journalists, President Taft, himself the author of reciprocity, used this language in regard to it:

> I have said that this was a critical time in the solution of the question of reciprocity. It is critical, because unless it is now decided favorably to reciprocity, it is exceedingly probable that no such opportunity will ever again come to the United States. The forces which are at work in England and Canada to separate her by a Chinese wall from the United States and to make her part of an imperial commercial band, reaching from England around the world to England again, by a system of preferential tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty, and if we would have reciprocity, with all the advantages I have described, and that I earnestly and sincerely believe will follow its adoption, we must take it now or give it up forever.

This statement leaves no doubt that the chief aim of American statesmen is to separate Canada from the Empire, to convert the Dominion into a fiscal dependency of the Republic, and to exploit its vast stores of raw materials for the enrichment of American interests. Moreover, these same interests have millions of dollars with which to promote their campaign on both sides of the boundary.

If further proof is needed of American intentions we have only to recall Mr. Champ Clark's annexation speech in congress, and a number of other similar utterances. Only on Monday of this week Mr. Madden, of Illinois, spoke thus in the House of Representatives:

> My hope is that we can have closer commercial relations with the people of Canada some day this relationship may blend the two peoples into one harmonious whole; and that the territory lying north of us may become part of the United States, as it should be. I have always believed we should be one people, under one flag, and under one form of government.

A Boston newspaper, a Minneapolis newspaper and other United States journals have expressed similar sentiments. No doubt remains that the average American sees in the reciprocity compact an influence that will work insiduously, but none the less powerfully and effectually for political fusion and towards a day when the Stars and Stripes may float from the Gulf of Mexico to the North Pole.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Found Dead Body.

Toronto, May 8.—As Policeman Scott was making his rounds through St. Enoch square, an alley running south from 11 Shuter street, early on Sunday morning, he came suddenly upon the body of a man wedged tightly in between a brick wall and some old doors. At first he thought the man might be still alive, and he sent a call for the police ambulance, which hurried what proved to be a corpse to St. Michael's Hospital. Here it was found that he had only been dead a short time, however, and, as there were no marks of violence on the body, the cause of death could not be ascertained. The body was then taken to the morgue.

The man was 5 feet 5 inches tall, and weighed 170 pounds. His hair and moustache were of steel gray color. He wore a blue serge suit, a white stiff shirt, and a polka dotted tie with red flowers.

Belled the Boundary.

"Artificial boundaries" are generally invisible. But a highly artificial one forces itself upon the notice of the traveler by rail between the Lake of Lugano and Lake Maggiore. The frontier between Italy and Switzerland is followed for a considerable portion of the journey, and it is marked by a lofty barrier of wire netting hung with bells for the purpose of preventing smugglers from getting into Italy without attracting the attention of armed defenders of Italian revenue. In extreme contrast with this is the natural boundary between Italy and France provided by Mont Blanc, which in spite of its naturalness is so vague that it is still undetermined, though scarcely worth disputing, whether the summit of the mountain is Franco-Italian or all French.—London Chronicle.

Mortification Well Earned.

An Englishman, alone with Richardson, the novelist, said to him, "I am happy to pay my respects to the author of 'Sir Charles Grandison,' for at Paris, and at The Hague, and, in fact, at every place I have visited, it is much admired."

Richardson appeared not to notice the compliment, but when all the company were assembled addressed the gentleman with, "Sir, I think you were saying something about 'Sir Charles Grandison.'"

"No, sir," he replied. "I do not remember ever to have heard it mentioned."—From Orvine's "Cyclopedia of Anecdotes."

Remarkable.

"One of the astronomers claims that he has charted 60,000 new worlds."

"By George, it's remarkable!"

"Not so very when you consider the fact that he has the use of the largest telescope in the world."

"I wasn't thinking of that. What I consider strange is that with so many other worlds in existence the lady who is acting as stepmother for my children had to light on this one."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Memory Resents Distrust.

I remember telling the bishop of Ripon that I envied him his splendid memory. "I seem to remember a thing quite well," I told him, "then I get frightened."

The bishop said: "That's the worst thing you can do. Memory is a very delicate organ and resents distrust."—Ellen Terry in McClure's Magazine.

A Matter of Luck.

"Bad luck is sometimes good luck."

"Ridiculous!"

"Not at all. Did you ever get a club to fill a heart flush and afterward discover that some one else had a full house?"—Detroit Free Press.

A Legal Compliment.

"Yes, young Coke handled the case magnificently. He proved beyond the possibility of a doubt that the accused man wasn't guilty."

"But he was guilty, of course."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Says He'll Retire.

Mexico City, May 8.—Gen Porfiro Diaz last night issued a manifesto to the people of Mexico declaring his intention to resign the Presidency as soon as peace is restored. In this manner the President has virtually acceded to the demands of Fransico I. Madero that he make announcement of such intention.

As to when peace is actually restored Gen. Diaz reserves the right to be the judge. In the words of the manifesto, it will "when," according to the dictates of my conscience, I am sure that my resignation will not be followed by anarchy.

The President made it clear that he does not propose to abandon the Presidency while his country is at war and that he would not do so at any time under compulsion.

AMONG THE PORTO RICO DARKIES

Mrs. Farum, College street, has received a very interesting letter from Dr. John Morse, her nephew, who is in Porto Rico. Dr. Morse was connected with the Battle Creek sanitarium, and is well known in Peterborough, where he spent his vacations occasionally some years ago. Dr. Morse went to Porto Rico early in the new year, and has charge of the welfare of the people employed by sugar planters and manufacturers.

In his letter to Mrs. Farnum, he says, in part—

I am consoled for the lack of any mail from home this week by the fact that it is packing time, or was, rather, and so, of course, every one was busy, and that, as a result, I shall have some company a week from next Thursday. That will not be long, but it cannot come any too soon to suit me. As I get better acquainted with the woman who keeps the boarding house, I shall try to improve conditions by way of having less grease and more fruit and vegetables. Things have improved somewhat—more tidy and clean, more salads and a little greater variety. I hope to be able some time to get a photo of this proprietress. She is black as you please, about six feet tall, and weighs perhaps 250 pounds. A smiling, kindly face, framed by a fringe of black wool, which peeps from under the red and yellow kerchief. Much of the time she smokes a long, black cigar, and she is queen of the kitchen, if such her greasy, smoky den can be called. She has a good deal of character, and a strong voice, so that she makes things move from the ground up—cats, dogs, naked pickannines, boys and girls, men and women. Every little hamlet around here swarms with dressed and mostly undressed "kids" of all shades, of tan and black. Goats and their offspring, guinea fowl in numbers, and slab-sided, long-legged hogs are the most obvious vermin of the streets. The native spirit of the land is best typified by the meek-eyed oxen who toil uncomplainingly, even if it is slowly, at the plow or the ponderous two-wheeled carts. The thrusts of the spiked goad may draw blood without stimulating a move on their part. Still the load always moved in the end. The yoke is a heavy oak affair that rests on the neck just behind the horns to which it is bound by rope. The head cannot be moved from side to side and must bear the load. In plowing they use four, six or eight yoke of oxen, driven by small darkies who sit on the yoke and with their goads control the oxen whose yoke they ride and the pair in front.

The people are wonderfully good natured, improvident, happy-go-lucky lot. They usually have part or all their earnings spent before pay-day and never lay anything by. Most of the laborers can carry all their possessions, an extra shirt and cotton trousers, in a bandanna handkerchief as they travel from place to place, working a day or two or longer, as the fancy strikes them. When the day is over they drink or gamble and have a jolly time. So far as I have observed the laxness of morals is chiefly indicated by the almost universal prevalence of certain diseases. One longs to help them and it is encouraging to see how readily the most intelligent make use of simple remedies. Being unable to talk the language one depends chiefly on kindness and sympathy expressed by signs to which they respond like children.

I am well and liking things better each day. Friday I took a cleaning spell and swept the whole house and went over floors with dust-mop so I had a clean house for Sabbath. I did not make my usual long afternoon trip so had a nice time reading. To-day I was fortunate enough to have use of the auto so could make all my trips before dinner which avoids the hot afternoon sun and gives time for study, writing, etc., which is much appreciated. I had hoped the company might furnish a light runabout auto for me, but it has been decided not to incur the expense, so I must be content with slower methods and less spare time. To-day has been a bit cloudy and one appreciates the shadow as never before. Isa. 32, 2, says, "a man shall be — — an hiding place from the wind, covert from tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as a shadow of a great rock in a weary land." May the good Lord help each of us to all that is represented by that verse.

Must close now, and run away to dispensary in a few minutes. Hope this may find each of you well and prospering.

WOULD TAKE AWAY CHILD

Second Opposition Entered on Behalf of Mrs. Hebert

Montreal, Que., May 5—In the quality of tutrix to Marie Eva Cloature her two-year old daughter, Marie Emma Cloature, through her attorney, filed a second opposition to Mr. Justice, Charles Laurendeau's judgment declaring her marriage with Mr. Hebert null and void, in the Superior Court this morning.

The former wife sets up that if the judgment is given effect, her child will be illegitimate, and represents, on behalf of the child, that her opposition to the judgment should be maintained, and that she should be allowed to plead to the action to nullify her marriage. She also alleges that she as the wife, set up in her first opposition, filed two weeks ago in which it was stated that her consent not to oppose the annulment proceedings was gotten by threats, undue influence, and duress. She further claims that her husband represented to her that unless she consented to the annulment her child would be taken away from her.

It is understood that Mr. Paul Emile Lamarche, attorney, in the absence of Mr. L. J. Lefebvre, attorney, who secured the annulment, will represent the husband in opposing the opposition to having the judgment declared invalid.

Sacrificial Efforts Necessary to Save the World

Rev. Professor Thomas Eakins Ph D. of Toronto, at the morning service in St. Paul's Church, yesterday, preached from the text found in John chapt. 20th, 25th verse, which reads "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger in the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe."

After some preliminary remarks in which the reverend gentleman pointed out that although there might be many things about God which people did not understand, yet they were all agreed upon the fact that the Cross meant sacrifice. All the way up from savagery till the present day of enlightened manhood and womanhood God has been giving himself. Calvary was not the only cross that Jesus bore, and it was a well-known truth that Jesus demands of his followers, the denial of self interests.

One thought which the speaker desired all to take home, was that embodied in the saying "God and one man could make any other religion on earth, but it takes God and two men to make Christianity."

"Had Jesus chosen to walk the primrose path" asked the speaker, "would he have been the moral conquerer of the world."

"Men are here on earth as Christ's representatives as his ambassadors," said the speaker. We were meant to speak his winsome words of love with our lips, we were meant to use all our faculties of hearing, seeing to do his work in the fields of time.

"There are men who sing God's adoration who have never done a single day's work to hold up God before men as an example. God is not well represented by the men who call him God. It is the desire of nearly all to obtain as much as possible for ourselves and often we are selfish. If society is to be born again, it must be through the sacrificial efforts of men. This alone is the spirit that can arouse the world. Recognize the common brotherhood. live for God. and the state will be redeemed, society will be saved and the Kingdom of God will reign on earth."

The occasion was the sixth anniversary of the Church, and large congregations attended the services. In the evening Prof. Eakins preached again. Special music was given by the choir.

WATCH BARGAIN

Youth Only Wanted Twenty-five Cents for Ticker

A youth of tender years was brought into police court this morning by Detective Newhall, having been caught trying to dispose of a gold watch for 25 cents. He had taken the jewelry from a man with whom he had been doing some chores. The lad was let go with a warning, and the watch was restored to its owner.

A young girl named Gertie Mercer was taken into custody yesterday by the police, who had information that her moral department was not of the best. At police court this morning she was remanded until Wednesday, but later in the day, on her promise to keep her word, she was allowed to return to her old abode, Port Hope.

HIGHER CRITICISM.

To the Editor of the Review:

Sir,—While millions to-day are believing in the infallibility of a mortal man now living on the earth, there are professed Protestants and Christians who, with unblushing effrontery, are denying the infallibility of our Lord Jesus Christ, the great Head of the church. They tell us that Christ was as liable to err and make mistakes as were His poor brethren, whom He came to redeem. The Holy Ghost, through the pen of John the Apostle, nails that lie when he says "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God . . . . and the word (or God) was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory; the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." Jno. 1, 1-14. Because the teaching of our Lord Jesus Christ gives the straight lie to the teaching of modern higher critics, His august authority must be degraded and denied in order to glorify these would-be infallible guides. In the language of Prof. Geo. Jackson, they say "A man may not do violence to his intellectual conscience at the bidding of any authority, however august." What audacious impudence. Higher criticism? I should say it was, when the most high Himself is criticized, His teaching and authority degraded and denied.

CITY COUNCIL AND THE FIREMEN

To the Editor of the Review,

Sir,—As a lover of justice, mercy and fairplay, I feel that the time has come when I can no longer keep silent, if you will allow me space to express my very humble opinion on the action of our City Council, or at least some of its members. We have no right to condemn all for the weakness of a part of the board. At present they are handling a matter that is of vital interest to every citizen, one in which the interest of the whole city should be considered, not merely the interest of one or two individuals, namely, the matter of proper fire fighting department.

Judging from the attitude of some of the aldermen, one would think they had been elected to fight the fire chief instead of serving the interest of the city. I feel that if our city is to prosper, and the business properly attended to, that this bickering and fighting against certain officials must cease. Let us look this matter fairly in the face and see whether or not our interests are being looked after. It is a well known fact that since the organization of the new fire brigade that a few of our citizens have bitterly opposed it. Whether they are right or wrong in that opposition is not for me to say. However, I can say I have listened to a great deal of the wrongs of our fire brigade, especially of the chief, from the opposing faction. This caused me to be suspicious of the brigade, and I have watched them carefully and have seen nothing wrong, more than the usual wrongs of the human race.

When I learned, through the press, that the firemen would be on trial before the Council that night, May 7th, I concluded to hear what the trouble was.

Now, Sir, to my very great surprise, when the question came up for discussion I found no charges of an official nature had been made; no firemen there to answer to charges. There was, however, a request from a committee of the council, asking Assistant Chief Grange and Captain Thomas to resign. It is proper, I think, for the public to view the ground on which this resolution carried. Alderman Metheral, the big gun in the discussion, at once showed that it was the chief he was after, and not the men mentioned. He said everything had been wrong from the beginning, but no wrongs mentioned; only so many men leaving was proof of something being wrong with the bosses.

As to the two criminals, they had knowledge of certain statements made against one alderman. The proof he gave for this was that the writer of the letter in question said so. The writer of the letter he designated as a "poor simple fool." Thus two faithful officials of our city, or common workmen, if you please, are to be beheaded on such evidence. Is this the way Alderman Metheral and his colleagues would wish to be treated? I think not. Ald. Metheral further blamed the chief for the men leaving, then he insists upon those (who stand by the chief and don't leave) tendering their resignation. "Consistency, thou art a jewel." Ald. Morgan had moved the resolution, and would, therefore, stand by it, and, if needs be, go even further and get after the chief. This was his argument. Ald. Kerneghan, being the one insulted, had asked for an apology. The mayor insisted on the right of the men receiving an official notice and having a hearing. This brought Ald. Brown to his feet, who spoke strongly in favor of the men having a hearing, then took his seat and voted for the dismissal of the two men without a hearing. This ended the discussion and the men must go.

Thus we learned something of the justice and business methods of our city fathers. I shall not attempt to pass judgment on the action; I have just aimed at giving the public the argument concerning our firemen, as I heard them, and allow the public to judge. As for myself, I have always made a practice of upholding our representatives, and I am very sorry to have to record my utter disapproval of the action of the council on this occasion. And would say if this is a sample of the fruit of the ward system, my opinion is that the sooner we abolish it the better. Envy and spite are not the elements that should control a city. Righteousness and truth should govern public affairs, as well as private, then shall we have prosperity and peace.

Thanking you for valuable space,

Sincerely yours,

R. J. TODD.

TIRE CO. TO TAKE $20,000 AT GUELPH

Bargain Looks Considerably Different From Peterboro' Deal

Guelph, May 7.—The City Council put through a by-law authorizing the city to make a loan of $20,000 for twenty years, at four and one-half per cent. interest to the Independent Tire Company of Toronto. This loan is in addition to a loan from Mr. J. W. Lyon of $5,000. In return the Independent Tire Company are to erect in this city on or before the first of July, 1912, a factory which will cost at least $50,000, and in which at least fifty and probably 100 hands are to be employed. The two loans are both to be on first mortgages, but Mr. Lyon is to be paid back before the city. The by-law will go to the ratepayers to be voted on on the 29th of this month. The new industry, of which Mr. H. H. Hastings is director and general manager, will manufacture automobile tires, inner tubes, truck tires, carriage tires, rubber hose and other similar goods. It is on the building which they are to erect, with its heating and lighting apparatus, as well as other equipment, that they are agreeing to spend $50,000, and as the city, with Mr. Lyon, has a first mortgage on the whole building, land, and all, as well as the plant, including all machinery, and as they have the company tied down to Guelph, making them agree not to start another factory in Canada, except a small branch factory in the west, for five years, those who have been working on the proposition are of the opinion that they have arranged for first-class security and have protected the city's interests.

GENERAL ELECTION IS FORESHADOWED BY HUGE EXPENDITURE ON PUBLIC WORKS

Government Proposes to Bribe Doubtful Ridings Into Being Good—Nova Scotia is Specially Favored — Peterborough Gets $20,000.

Ottawa, May 9.—That the Government contemplates a general election at an early date is evident from the supplementary estimates which were laid on the table of Parliament yesterday by the Minister of Finance. The Conservatives say that wholesale debauchery of many constituencies has been thus arranged for. The supplementaries amount to over $17,000,000, which, with the main estimates, total $156,000,000, or $23,000,000 more than last year. Of this huge sum $23,000,000 will be spent by Mr. Pugsley on public works and $27,000,000 by Mr. Graham on railways.

The most significant outlays are to take place in Halifax, the constituency of R. L. Borden, leader of the Opposition. Mr. Graham will spend one million there on a branch line, while Mr. Pugsley will spend $600,000 on docks. Those important works have been held over until the eve of the general election, and with them a tremendous effort will be made to fill the constituency with solid Liberals for the purpose of defeating Mr. Borden.

The Ontario list shows 51 items for harbors and rivers, as against the 120 for Nova Scotia and 104 for Quebec.

The following are some of the items: Hudson Bay Railway construction, $2,000,000; to complete survey of Welland ship canal, $50,000; Welland Canal turning basin at Thorold, $15,000, and to widen canal near Welland, $4,000; lighting equipment of Williamsburg Canals, $55,000; Guelph public building, share of cost of sewers, etc., $1,776; Hamilton examining warehouse, $10,000; Hamilton public building improvements, $5,000; Windsor landing dock, $30,000.

Weddell & Co., for overtow in connection with their contract for the construction of a new western entrance to Toronto harbor, $25,368; Windsor landing dock, $30,000.

STILL AFTER COOK RECORDS

New York, May 8.—Announcement is made here that Mr. Harry Whitney, the big game hunter, and captain Robert Bartlett, who commanded Peary's ship, the Roosevelt, would head another Arctic expedition for the double purpose of hunting and making search for the records which Dr. Cook says he left at Etah.

A number of wealthy men will be parties to the expedition, which will start in the latter part of June. Captain Bartlett has gone to Boston to complete arrangements.

MR. BORDEN ANNOUNCES HIS ITINERARY FOR WESTERN TOUR

Andrew Broder, of Dundas, Will Accompany the Leader — Warm Campaign is Likely.

Ottawa, May 9.—The itinerary of R. L. Borden's western political tour was completed last evening. It is as comprehensive as it was possible to make it under the circumstances that Parliament will reassemble in July. The Opposition leader will leave Ottawa on June 17 and will be back in the capital on July 9.

While all the speakers have not been decided upon, it may be stated definitely that Andrew Broder of Dundas, an inimitable campaigner and probably the leading authority in the Opposition on agricultural matters, will accompany Mr. Borden. Dr. Roche of Marquette will probably also be in the party. The Provincial Premiers of British Columbia and Manitoba will be in England attending the coronation, but they themselves will also campaign the western provinces on their return. British Columbia will not be visited on the present tour by Mr. Borden.

It is not considered necessary, the huge majority of the people there being actively against the reciprocity agreement.

Meetings will be held as follows: June 19, Winnipeg; June 20, Carberry; June 20, Brandon; June 21, Weyburn; June 21, Moosejaw; June 22, Indian Head; June 22, Regina; June 23, Maple Creek; June 23, Medicine Hat; June 24, MacLeod; June 24, Lethbridge; June 26, High River; June 26, Calgary; June 28, Wetaskiwin; June 28, Edmonton; June 29, Vegreville; June 29, Lloydminster; June 30, North Battleford; June 30, South Battleford; July 1, Prince Albert or Saskatoon; June 3, Rosthern; July 3, Saskatoon or Prince Albert; July 4, Yorkton; July 5, Birtle; July 5, Minnedosa; July 6, Grandview; July 6, Dauphin; July 7, Portage la Prairie.

Beards as Tribute to Edward.

London, May 9.—Among the many suggestions for fittingly commemorating the reign of King Edward VII., perhaps the quaintest is that now put forward by Captain MacIlwaine, R.N. His suggestion is that the men of the British Empire, following the example of the late King, should put their razors aside and proceed to grow beards.

"King Edward," said Captain MacIlwaine, "not only grew a beard, but encouraged the growth among members of his personal staff. His brother, the Duke of Edinburgh, who was a naval officer, grew a beard. The present King, sharing the views of his father, grows a beard and make his staff do the same."

POWER CO. NOT SOLD

Says Mr. W. G. Ferguson of Otonabee Power Co.

"The Otonabee Power Company has not sold out," was the emphatic statement made by Mr. W. G. Ferguson, manager of the company, to the Review to-day. "The company is just the same as it has always been," he continued.

Mr. Ferguson's statements came in reply to a question as to whether the report that the company had sold out to the Electric Power Company was correct.

He was inclined to put the report and the visit of Hon. Adam Beck of to-morrow night side by side, and give the credit for the report to some local "powers that be."

MARRIAGE IS HELD TO BE GOOD

Court of Review Renders Decision in Quebec Case.

Montreal, May 9.—Judgment has been given in the court of review maintaining the marriage as having been legally contracted between Napoleon Tremblay, farmer, St. Victoire, Richelieu, and Albini Des Patie.

The parties were married on Oct. 25, 1904, and five years afterwards the husband took an action to have the marriage declared null and void on the ground that they were first cousins and that previous to the wedding the submitted necessary dispensation had not been obtained from the church.

The Superior Court of Richelieu gave judgment on Oct. 4 last granting dissolution of the marriage, but against this the wife appealed, and the Court of Review, Judges Tait, Fortin and Mercier have just reversed this judgment.

TALKED OVER 2000 MILE WIRE

Conversation Held Between New York and Denver.

New York, May 9.—For the first time in the history of mankind the human voice carried 2,000 miles direct last night, when New York found Denver over the long distance telephone wires. A group of Manhattan newspaper men in one of the top floors of a downtown skyscraper threw their voices across the plains and the mountains of nine states to another group awaiting the message in the Rocky Mountain cliff, picked up Omaha on the way and also gossipped with Chicago.

"The next stop is San Francisco," declared J. J. Carty, chief engineer of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. "We are on the right tract, and before long will have our wires clear through from New York to San Francisco."

AGAINST THE EMPIRE

PRESIDENT TAFT.

"I have said that this was a critical time in the solution of the question of reciprocity. It is critical because unless it is now decided favorably to reciprocity, it is exceedingly probable that no such opportunity will ever again come to the United States. The forces which are at work in England and Canada to separate her by a Chinese wall from the United States, and to make her part of an imperial commercial band reaching from England around the world to England again by a system of preferential tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty, and if we would have reciprocity, with all the advantages that I earnestly and sincerely believe will follow its adoption, we must take it now, or give it up forever."—From the speech of President Taft at the joint banquet of the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, held in New York on April 27, 1911.

BIG MARINE MERGER PUT THROUGH; DETAILS COMPLETED

Navigation Companies Combined in One Big Concern, After Some Trouble.

Montreal, May 9.—The big steamboat merger, involving the R. & O., Northern & Inland Navigation Companies is through at last. All that is necessary now is the authorization from the Government to increase the R. & O. capital to $10,000,000. This will in all probability be put through the House at Ottawa on Friday next.

The executive will be in Montreal, with divisional points at Toronto, Sarnia and perhaps another western point. It is probable that the management of the combined companies will fall on R. & O. officials, although several changes may be made.

According to a director, the Furness people receive 125 for their holdings in the Northern Navigation, or the figure at which they acquired control. The Inland stock held by these interests will be taken over at the valuation of the appraisers, plus the amount decided upon as due the company for vested interests in the way of contracts for freight and passenger-running [illegible]

TO GUARANTEE BONDS OF C.N.R.

Government Will Assist in Railway Financing.

Ottawa, May 9.—The Minister of Railways has given notice of the intention of the Government to guarantee the bonds of the Canadian Northern Railway over the completed and uncompleted portions of the company's line between Montreal and Port Arthur. This will enable the company to connect up its different sections east and west and carry out its scheme of a third transcontinental railway.

(1) Montreal to Port Arthur, including the part already constructed, to the extent of $35,000 per mile at 3 1-2 per cent. interest.

(2) That the company shall give the Government a first mortgage on the line from Port Arthur to Montreal, except on the completed portion from Hawkesbury to Rideau Junction, near Ottawa, 62 1-2 miles, and about 10 miles of the company's Hutton branch south of Sollwood Junction, the trustees to be the British Empire Trust Co. and the National Trust Co., with which trust companies the company is to deposit bonds to the amount of $55,000 a mile, being approximately $2,585,500.

It is provided that, at the request of the Canadian Northern Railway Co., the Government may pay interest on the bonds for the first two years, charging the company therefor at the rate of 3 1-2 per cent.

It is made conditional to the guarantee that the company shall carry traffic destined to a Canadian port over its own line; that the through rate on export traffic from the point of origin to the point of destination shall at no time be greater to a Canadian port than to a United States port; that all such traffic shall be carried to Canadian ocean ports, and that the company shall not advise or encourage transportation to foreign ports. The Canadian Northern Railway is bound to construct terminals in Montreal and make arrangements for an interchange of traffic with the Intercolonial Railway.

Bush Fires in Manitoba and in New Ontario—Fire at Boston.

Fort Francis, May 9.—Owing to the extremely dry weather, the forest fires have started again, and unless rain sets in soon will be serious to the standing timber as well as to the lumbermen and loggers who have timber cut and ready for the drive. On the Duluth branch of the Canadian Northern between Ericksburg and Virginia, the fires have been raging with disastrous effects. The Village of Ray was within an ace of being wiped out on Saturday, while Bush, a little farther south, was completely burned. Fires are also raging south of International Falls and along the Minnesota border, which threaten to be a repetition of those of last fall. At Hannaford, a settler who was burned out last fall, was burned out again the end of the week, and with a strong wind blowing, the fire will sweep along the river.

No great damage was done on the Canadian side, although fires are reported at Frog Creek, north of here. Timber cruisers who have returned from the Quitico forest reserve, Hunter's Island, say fires are again breaking out there, and unless rains come soon, great damage will be done to the big timber, which is held by the Government as a protection to the game reserve.

Fire-Fighters Have Hard Work.

Dauphin, Man., May 9.—Bush fires have been raging on the Riding and Buck Mountains for the last few days, with everything most dry as tinder and a hurricane blowing day and night. Fire-fighters have had a hard task, but to-day the situation is practically under control. In the Riding Mountains, two outfits are fighting the biggest fire, working in from east and west towards a central point, when this fire will be under control. Another fire was sweeping down southwest of Grandview, but has been checked. Although these fires have swept a considerable area, they were checked before really getting into the standing timber. This town has lain under a pall of smoke some days, and all are praying for rain.

More fires are just reported at Roblin in the Riding Mountains. Forest Ranger W. A. Davis reports fire in Duck Mountain successfully coped with, though there is still a very bad bush fire at Birch River. The same conditions prevail at Bowman, where the Canadian Northern Railway bridges burned and being rapidly repaired. Every man capable of handling a pick and shovel has been pressed into service. Traffic is suspended, the train from Winnipeg having been sent back, and around to Prince Albert via Warman, Sask.

Until rain comes, fires are apt to break out anywhere at any time. The situation is grave throughout a very wide area. Most settlers have been forced to flee their homes.

Two Lost Their Lives.

Boston, May 9.—In various sections of Maine, Massachusetts and Rhode Iseland, tired hands of fire-fighters were able yesterday to relax their labors, secure in the belief that their troubles had succeeded in bringing under control the blazes that had destroyed thousands of acres of valuable lands, and in some cases, houses and farm buildings.

So far as known only two persons lost their lives in combating the flames. An unknown French-Canadian wood-chopper was burned to death near South Kingston, and the badly burned body of Albert Eldert of Winthorp, was found in a fire swept tract of woodland, near Marlboro, Mass.

Bad Fire at Buckingham.

Ottawa, May 9.—Fire, which broke out in a restaurant kitchen in the town of Buckingham at an early hour yesterday morning destroyed a large section of the business centre, entailing a loss estimated at $125,000, only partly covered by insurance. The buildings burned were:

Cosgrave block: Loss on building, $10,000; insurance, $4,000; occupants, E. Johnson, jeweler, loss $1,000; insurance, $275; E. Pommier, jeweler, loss $3,000; insured $1,700; J. E. Gagnon, restaurant, loss $1,000, insurance $600; E. Fournier, barber, loss $600; Mrs. L. O. David, dressmaker, loss $500.

McCallum and LaHale's three-storey brick house, loss on building and general mercantile stock, $75,000, insurance $34,000. Also occupied by Bank of Ottawa, loss $1,000, insured.

Grenier's livery barns, loss $1,000, no insurance.

There were many narrow escapes, several persons having to jump to safety in their night clothing. Three children of the Gagnon family had to be dropped from upper windows by their parents.

Village Suffers.

Halifax, May 9.—Fanned by a strong westerly wind, a raging fire destroyed 16 buildings at Ailesford yesterday afternoon. Fully one-third of the village was swept away in two hours. It was the worst fire ever known in that part of the province. The fire raged with terrific fury. Men, women and children worked to save their valuables, many of them not having time to save anything, so fierce and swift was the progress of the flames.

TAFT SAYS U. S. FARMERS WILL GET BEST OF NEW TRADE DEAL

They Will Sell More to Canada Than Canada Will Sell to U. S. in Farm Products

Washington, May 8.—President Taft indulged in some plain talk to-day in explaining to 25 members of the National Grange that he does not intend to play politics with the Canadian reciprocity agreement, even if the enactment of that measure by congress costs him the farmer vote. The president told his visitors bluntly that he was sorry to hear that Republican farmers would desert the party if the agreement goes through, but fear of such desertion would not change his conviction as to the wisdom of such legislation.

"I believe this treaty to be the best thing of the whole country, including farmers, merchants, laboring men and all," said the president, "because I believe it is contrary to nature, it is flying in the face of Providence to put an artificial wall like that between this country and Canada, and not get the benefit that will inure to peoples of the same traditions, the same language and practically with the same character of labor. If we take down that wall, we will benefit by it, FOR WE SHALL SELL MORE AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS TO CANADA THAN SHE WILL SELL TO US. We do now, and we shall sell her even more after the treaty goes into effect. That is my judgment. I am not arguing—I am merely stating my conclusion. If I did not believe this I should not have taken the responsibility of doing what I have done to put this reciprocity treaty through. I am willing to abide the judgment of history—the judgment that will come after the event."

Opium Agreement Signed.

Pekin, May 9.—The Anglo-Chinese opium agreement was signed yesterday, and becomes operative immediately. It provides that China shall annually diminish its production of opium proportionately with the Indian export, until its extinction in 1917. Great Britain agrees that the importation of Indian opium into China shall ceases earlier, if the native production in that country ceases.

Great Britain is to be granted facilities for investigating this diminution, and China is to have similar facilities with reference to the sales and packing of opium in India. The Indian exports to China shall not exceed 30,600 chests in 1911, and they will be reduced 5,100 chests annually.

Intercolonial Postage.

Ottawa, May 9.—By agreement with the postal administration of the Union of South Africa, newspapers and periodicals published in Canada may be sent to all of the four provinces comprised in the union, viz.: Cape of Good Hope, Natal, Orange Free State, and Transvaal, at the same rates of prepayment, and subject to the same conditions as are applicable to that class of matter when posted for delivery within Canada.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME

Judging by the different explanations about the power report, it is apparent Dr. Cook had better hurry to Peterborough to protect his reputation.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes: "For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifing the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER

In another part of the Review today appears a letter by Mr. Daniel O'Connell treating in an exhaustive manner the peculiar situation produced by the refusal of the city council to re-engage Publicity Commissioner Duggan.

Mr. O'Connell advances all the arguments that can be used in support and defence of the publicity commissioner, but he has not pointed out the way in which Mr. Duggan will be able to co-operate in a harmonious manner with the members of the city council, including the mayor. The city council has, rightly or wrongly, taken decided action in the matter. The aldermen are certainly marks for criticism on their action, but while strong objection may be taken to it, the fact remains that a reconciliation looks impossible, and no one surely will deny that it would be a very difficult task for even the industrial commissioner to work under the city council's direction for another year without it. If the members of the board of trade have a proposition that Mr. Duggan continue to act under their direction, being paid wholly by the city council as the representatives of the people, they should advance it. But the present situation is not one that can easily reversed, otherwise.

It is difficult for any man to serve two masters, and it may be that Mr. Duggan in acting as an official of the board of trade could not work in co-operation with the city council in the manner that was to be desired. At the same time, the city council is elected by the people to transact the city business—to use its best judgment on behalf of the city, not perhaps in the sense of servants, but as trustees of the public interest. If the citizens who find so much room for criticism in the actions of the aldermen would only offer themselves as candidates at the next elections, and improve the management of civic affairs and the tone of administration they would be most heartily welcome. Criticism should be constructive, not altogether destructive.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

In writing letters to the newspapers, citizens should remember that attacking other citizens under a nom de plume is not the most elevated way of conducting a warfare, and should exercise discretion about what they have to say. It is, of course, often the wish of a citizen to say something about a public man or a public movement to which he does not wish to subscribe his name, for publication, and he may have very good reasons. But it is generally a safe rule to follow that no citizen should say in a letter for publication things that he would not be willing to substantiate or acknowledge if confronted personally by those whom he writes about.

Letters for publication are acceptable when they refer to public questions, or to matters of public interest. When they descend to the level of merely personal, and often acrimonious attacks on other citizens, under the guise of anonymity, a strict line must be drawn. We refer to this because sometimes those who write letters to the newspapers forget that judgment and fairness are most desirable qualities in writing for publication concerning others.

It should also be borne in mind that letters to which no name and address, as a guarantee of good faith, is appended, must go into the waste-paper basket. There are occasions when letters in a most worthy cause, and expressing only the best of sentiment and ideas, must be consigned to the waste basket because of breach of this rule. A newspaper, in giving publication to letters, has a two-fold duty. It must consider that the letter contains views or information of interest, and that its publication is not libellous or reflecting on citizens unwarrantably in a personal manner. Having passed these tests, a letter from a citizen is a welcome addition to the general news of the day, providing it is reasonable in length, and deals with a topic of current interest.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Detective Burns says that he has got absolute, sure and positive proof in the McNamara case, and that has never made an arrest without a conviction following. In race track parlance, he is the man with the "sure hunch" every time.

There are many appeals to the public for help, but few are more worthy than the one made to produce a fund to have the Otonabee river dragged for the body of the lad who was drowned a week ago. The amount is small, and the circumstances pitiable. They give twice who give quickly.

The matter of the actual ownership of the chimes does not seem to be important. They are to be known and operated as the people's chimes, at the expense of the congregation of St. John's church, and as long as the city generally gets the benefits in practice of ownership, what matters it whether the title is in the name of the city or St. John's. They will hang in the tower just the same.

It is evident from the discussion around the city that the action of the fire and water committee in asking for the discharge of the two fire department officials without even a chance at a defence is decidedly offensive to the people. And the people at large may be trusted to take a fair and sound view of the proceedings. The sense of British fair play is too decidedly developed in the Canadian constitution at large to permit of silence at the action of the members of the fire and water committee.

The Toronto Globe in its account of the postponement of the Farmers Bank cases until September, said:—"The affidavits of Mr. Stratton and Mr. Hall urged that the present condition of the minds of the public would make a fair trial of these cases impossible." This is the first intimation the public has had that its mind was so prejudiced and excited that it couldn't give a man a fair trial now. Of course it may be that the public is really laboring under the delusion that it is prepared to stand by and see a fair trial of the cases.

The latest reason for Sir Wilfrid's cave-in on the reciprocity debate question is the fact that the premier was afraid of the health of Mr. Fielding. The government organs are working their ingenuity overtime trying to get plausible excuses. The truth of the matter is that Sir Wilfrid Laurier found the temper of the country was such that he could not be put in the position of throwing British imperial bonds to the four winds for the sake of closer relations with the United States, and had to give in. Mr. Fielding was the man who opposed in the Liberal caucus any surrender.

The Toronto Globe is getting quite wrathy these days by trying to explain the utterances of President Taft as to breaking up the imperial band, that would be of great detriment to the United States. It says that the Chamberlainite movement to give the over-seas dominions a preference in the British market is quite dead, and its tomb is sealed forever. Therefore, in the opinion of the Globe, there is no chance of a closer imperial union built on trade lines, and each part of the empire should henceforth seek estranging alliances. Such a defence of the past as this will do the Globe's cause no good, because Canada should not in any event, with its great prosperity and growing wealth, be the one to make impossible the closer relations imperial councils are sure to bring.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

SWAT THE FLY.

Toronto World.

Over in the United States the slogan against the germ disseminating fly is everywhere meeting with response. The boy scouts and the school children are being enlisted in the cause of public health, and the campaign so instituted should become universal. The house fly and the mosquito brethren in arms against humanity have been tried and proven guilty in the one court whose judgments are not only final, but unappealable. Science has traced some diseases at least to their origin, or at least to their efficient cause. The slogan "swat the fly" on its first emergence into the light of day and the home should be that of every household, but of even greater importance is the elimination of its breeding places. Here the scouts and the school children can be enlisted as fly-fighters. They can do no better service.

CHAPTER I.

"ONE card," said John Randall quietly, extending a hand as firm as was his voice. For the first time in twenty-four hours the debt of intoxication was paid solely by his eyes. Perhaps the pile of double eagles strewn before him on the green baize table conveyed a fugitive and sobering realization of the present; drove home the fact, as only hard earned money can, that this delightful levitation of the senses, this genial warmth of body and soul, this impression that he was a nabob who might hazard with a care free hand, was purely fictitious and that the morning would find him a sepulcher filled with the decaying bones of dead emotions and the living worm of remorse. That pile of gold twinkling under the oil lamps in a private stateroom of the John W. Shotwell represented one-tenth of his yearly income, and yet he was blithely staking it on the turn of a single card at poker, for that was the game that was being played—staking it as indifferently as he had staked and lost its predecessors.

He pulled himself together with the air of one who, guilty of a false start, is but the more confident of the future, while he reflected with some pride that his extended hand was as steady as that of his impassive opponent. As the cards lay he was beaten, but luck must eventually change, and a four card "inside straight" was his weakness—weakness and strength, for when he drew to one he "filled."

"Here's luck!" said Colonel Moreau heartily, extending the pasteboard. "It's bound to change some time, suh, and even a niggah could beat a measly pair of deuces. I'll take three."

Randall glanced at his card and as he laid it face down on the table strove to keep the sudden exultation from his eyes. But as Moreau spread out his draw, disclosing trash, the planter lost his momentary self control.

"Drew to an inside straight and filled it, by gad!" he cried excitedly. "There's the turn in the tide, colonel! It rarely ever goes back on me. That's what I've been waiting foh. Let me draw to a four card inside straight and I'll bet my immortal soul that I fill her. Yes, suh."

A satiric gleam flickered in Moreau's black eyes as he indifferently shoved his lost bet across the table.

"One thousand to yoh, suh," he said courteously, stifling a yawn—"a most remarkable example of good fortune and one that was a-coming to yoh. Allow me, suh, to drink to the turn in the tide." And, filling the other's glass, he bowed with the most admirable courtesy and good feeling.

"Yoh health, colonel," replied the other thickly, mopping his face with an immense silk handkerchief, "and my compliments foh the sentiment, suh. I can return them by adding that the tide had already turned even befoh I had the pleasure and good fortune of making yoh acquaintance, suh. I reckon that, all in all, my trip to New Orleans this year has been very lucky—very lucky, suh—foh I have sold my sugar crop foh ten thousand, a much higher figure than I reckoned, considering the poh price of cane. And my luck still follows me by permitting this indulgence of my favorite game with a gentleman, suh, of yoh standing. My plantation is at Plaquemine, and"—

GAVE MR. SAWERS A PURSE OF GOLD

Appreciative Address From Lakefield Congregation on Parting

Accompanying a purse of gold from his Lakefield parishoners, the following address was read at a farewell gathering in Lakefield yesterday to Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A., on behalf of the congregation. Mr. Sawers assumed charge of St. Luke's church to day, and will preach his inaugural sermons as rector next Sunday. The address, highly appreciative of Mr. Sawers' work, was—

Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A.

Dear Sir,—For the last year and eight months you have been our pastor, priest and spiritual guide, and none could have been better. By your untiring devotion to the duties of your high calling; by your incessant labor for our spiritual benefit, by the high standard which you have ever held up before us in your teaching, and exemplified by your life and by the excellence of your sermons, always clear, logical, instructive and impressive, you have won our fond esteem, affection and gratitude. And now you are about to leave us. Your work here has been finished, but its effects will remain. The good that men do lives after them. The good that you have done in Lakefield, be assured, will be permanent; but its amount, not time, only eternity, will reveal.

The Bishop, recognizing your great attainments, your earnest devotion to the church and to the cause of Christ, has, in his wisdom, seen fit to appoint you to a larger parish, where your opportunities of doing good will be greatly increased. If we may take what you have done here, and surely we may, as an earnest endeavor of what you will accomplish there, these opportunities will be improved to the uttermost, and the greatness of the results no man can estimate.

And now, will you accept this purse of gold as a totally inadequate, but a very sincere expression of our gratitude, for the good you have done to us individually and collectively? And will you kindly convey to your amiable and accomplished wife our thanks for what she has done for our good? She has spared no pains to make herself useful; she has been in our opinion, an ideal wife for a minister, and much of the good she has done has been unconsciously, but none the less effectively, for no boy or girl, no man or woman, can come within the sphere of her influence without being uplifted by it.

That you and she may be long spared to continue your work in the service of humanity and of the Saviour of humanity, is the sincere prayer of your Lakefield parishoners.

Signed on behalf of the congregation—

WILLIAM M. GRAHAM,
E. ROLLESTON TATE,
Church Wardens,

MARGARET ANGLIN IS WEDDED NOW

New York, May 8.—Margaret Anglin, the Canadian actress, was married last night in St. Patrick's Cathedral, to Mr. Howard Hull, a magazine writer. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Father Gleason and the Rev. Dr. Sinnott.

Miss Anglin met Mr. Hull last summer when he went to California to assist Prof. George Riddle, of Harvard, in the production of "Antigone," in which she played at the University of California at Berkeley, Calif. The couple will leave for France in a few days, where they are to motor for some weeks.

SHE HAD CONSTANT PAIN

Until Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dewittville, N.Y.—"Before I started to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered nearly all the time with headaches, backaches, and bearing down pains, and had a continuous pain in my left side. It made me sick if I tried to walk much, and my back was so weak that I was obliged to wear corsets all the time. But now I do not have any of these troubles. I have a fine strong baby daughter now, which I did not have before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. A. A. GILES, Route 44, Dewittville, N.Y.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

NEIL GIVEN NINE MONTHS

Port Hope Guide.

William Neil, of Haliburton, who was remanded for a week on a charge of stealing a horse from Melvin Bowins, of Pontypool, appeared this morning for sentence. Crown Attorney Kerr had made inquiries about Neil's past record and had learned that Neil had never been in trouble before.

Neil explained to Magistrate White that he went from Haliburton to Peterborough and wheeled from there to Pontypool. He left Pontypool again and went into a swamp to rest, and while there drank a bottle of whisky. Returning to the village he broke into Bowin's barn and stole the horse.

His Honor informed the prisoner that he had since learned that the wheel he referred to was stolen by him at Peterborough, and a warrant was then issued for his arrest. After stealing the horse he rode it to Port Hope, a distance of thirty miles, and he considered this cruelty. He then cut off one of the forelocks and tried to sell the horse for $155. It did not appear to His Honor like the work of a drunken man, but rather a deliberate plan. The maximum punishment was fourteen years in penitentiary, but this being his first offence he would deal leniently with him. He sentenced the prisoner to nine months in the Central Prison at hard labor.

paper despatch from Berlin, Germany, which stated that an arrangement had been come to between Canada and Germany that as soon as the reciprocity agreement with the United States had been carried through Parliament, better trade relations would be brought about between the two countries.

Hon. W. S. Fielding said there had been no negotiations between Canada and Germany, and there was no understanding. He had no doubt, however, that the German Government would be willing to open negotiations, but there had been none so far.

A long discussion ensued over the Senate bill to incorporate the Grain Growers' Grain Co. Mr. Foster claimed that the powers of the company went far beyond the purpose indicated by the designation of the company, including manufactures, lumbering, coal mining, publishing, shipbuilding, holding of bank debentures and the authorization to lend money generally. Such legislation might be dangerous.

Mr. Rutan said that these powers could have been got by incorporating the company under the Companies' Act.

A. S. Meighen (Portage la Prairie) remarked that the place to curtail the powers was in the Companies' Act itself. The gravest point of danger was in chartering a company with indiscriminately wide powers with such a name.

Not Our Words

Dr A. P. Grinnell, dean of the Medical Department of the University of Vermont, put on paper what he had said shortly before in a public address:—

"I wanted to say that 80 per cent of all men living at age 45 were prosperous, contented and more or less successful in business, well established in whatever pursuit they were following, and were receiving an income in excess of their expenditures, and therefore, were laying up money and were independent.

Now it is a well established fact that 50 per cent all men living at age 45 live to be 65, and at this time I find only 3 per cent of these persons are independent or self-sustaining. In other words, about 97 out of every hundred at age 65 are dependent upon some relatives, friends, the town, or some charitable institution for a part at least of their daily subsistence.

These figures are exceedingly startling and I am free to admit have very seriously impressed me with the necessity of men, in professional work at least, to take out Life Insurance between the ages of 25 and 50 as a safeguard against possible disaster which may overtake us a little later in life.

I am sure no stronger argument than the above can be made to convince men of my profession, and equally lawyers and clergymen, of the necessity of the preparation for the future which Life Insurance guarantees."

There is no safer, surer, or better way to make provision for your declining years than by securing one of the guaranteed income policies of

MEETING OF MUCH INTEREST OF Y.P.A.

Subject of "Young Canada" taken by W. J. Neale

The meeting of the St. John's Y.P.A., last-night proved a most enjoyable affair, the main feature being an address by Mr. W. J. Neale, on "Young Canada."

Mr. Neale, since his coming to Peterboro has done good work in the schools, and amongst the Boy Scouts In last night's address he referred to the duties incumbent upon young Canadians in the building up of this great country. They should be fit physically, morally and intellectually The body should be a main consideration, as without a sound physique the mental equipment would inevitably be found weak. Study should be prolonged beyond school. College days to keep the mind in good shape Great care should be taken to keep the moral issues pure and untarnished He advocated a wise study of Canadian politics, with a view to the future welfare of all classes, and brought an interesting address to a close by reciting a patriotic poem by Rudyard Kipling.

At its conclusion Mr. Neale was accorded a warm vote of thanks, and all expressed the hope that he would continue his subject at some subsequent date.

The Stoney Lake Navigation Company have commenced their trips for the season. On reference to their advertisement it will be seen that they will run Monday, Thursday and Saturday until further notice. 107 2d

Owing to the increase in his dispensing business, Mr. Wm. Madill has secured an experienced druggist John Burgess, of Perth. Mr. Burgess is a graduate of the Ontario College of Pharmacy and comes to Peterboro highly recommended.

Activity still reigns around the immigration office and the difficulty which the officer experiences most, is not the securing of employers for new arrivals, but rather to meet the insistent demands of prospective employers looking for men. The quarantining of the steamship "Dominion at Gros Island in the St. Lawrence river is inconveniencing Mr. Howson as there are quite a number of farm laborers on board destined to Peterboro.

The Board of Managers of St. Paul's church, will meet in the Dominion Bank Chambers to-night at 7.45 o'clock.

C.N.R. Royal Edward, due at Quebec, 8 p.m. to-day and at Montreal to-morrow afternoon, Lake Manitoba from Liverpool expected at Quebec 8 p.m. to-day.

Dr. Sampson, lecturer-in-chief for the Dominion Government, will give an address in the Collegiate Assembly hall to-night on Government Annuities.

MR. DUGGAN EXPLAINS HIS CONNECTION WITH REPORT

Didn't Have Time to Communicate With Aldermen

In explaining his position regarding the much discussed power report, at a banquet of the executive of the Retail Merchants' Association last night at Hooper's palace garden, Industrial Commissioner Duggan said that he had had an investigation of all the available power from below Campbellford to Healey's Falls.

When the negotiations were begun as to the possibilities of Peterboro's purchasing the available power, they dwindled down to Lakefield, 2, 3, 4 and 5 dams.

Lakefield and 4 and 5 dams were persuaded to give the city an option on this property.

As the city of Peterborough was always averse to spending money he had asked the mayor to have the Hydro-Electric investigate the matter and report and he also requested the mayor to apply for Healey's Falls in case the Provincial Government might decide in the city's favor in event of a clause in the agreement allowing it to do so.

The mayor failed to mention it in his request for the acquisition of the other places and he applied to the council and an application was made out.

"When the Hydro-Electric people came here they were acting in co-operation with me," said Mr. Duggan, "and they used the data secured by me."

Mr. Duggan further said that as the report was coming slowly he made a trip to Toronto to interview Hon. Adam Beck, and the latter gentleman decided to come to Peterborough at once and read his report before a citizen's meeting being held that night.

Then as the time was so short he was unable to communicate with the aldermen and hence the report being read in their absence.

Mr Duggan also referred to the resolution of the Retail Merchants' Association, which was forwarded to the mayor and council and which was not read until after the discussion about the office of the Industrial Commissioner had taken place.

President T. Barrie occupied the chair and others present were:—C. K. Lech, W. D. Campbell, Keith G. Lech, T. H. Adams, J. V. Duggan, J. H. Conrad, A. W. Cressman, Walter J. Oke, R. G. Kingan, W. E. Conway, Robt. Fair and H. A. Harrington, provincial organizer, who in the course of his remarks spoke of the conditions in Brockville before the organization of the Retail Merchants Association there.

He outlined a plan whereby a successful campaign could be instituted here and the membership of the association increased.

The executive was authorized to look into the matter and report at a general meeting to be held next Monday at 6.30 o'clock in Hooper's.

TRESPASSERS TO BE PROSECUTED

C.P.R. Issues a Warning That Should be Taken to Heart

Tramps, hoboes, and other individuals who have been in the habit of transporting themselves from place to place by riding the bumpers, and stealing rides should take warning before they are caught.

Mr. W. S. Dodd the local C.P.R. freight agent has received a circular letter from Toronto railway authorities with the warning that all those caught, will be severely dealt with from now on. Personal accidents to trespassers also have assumed such proportions that the company has had to adopt strict measures, and trespassers will be prosecuted before a Magistrate. If the parties are known to be offenders they shall be served with a summons. If habitual tramps they will be arrested.

Last year on Eastern lines, out of a total of 123 casualities, 93 or 75 per cent were sustained by trespassers. These alarming figures should arouse people to the extreme danger of trespassing on railway property.

TORONTO LEAFS WON OPENER RUDOLPH SCORED SHUT OUT

23,000 Fans Cheer Team on to 3-0 Win

Toronto, May 9.—Over 23,000 raving, hungry and dyed-in-the-wool fans and fannettes fought and shoved their way into the Stadium yesterday to get their initial glimpse of the Leafs, and incidentally to have the honor of attending the opening game for the season of 1911. And what an "Opening" it was, the vast multitude filling the Park to overflowing, much to the joy of old President McCaffery, who has oftentimes stated that his one great wish was to see the bleachers around the field as well as the grandstand, filled. His wish was gratified, also that of the starved bug, who has waited long to see the Leafs perform.

Perfect baseball weather greeted the gladiators and public, while more sunshine was added along about the fourth innings, when Eddie Phelps slammed out a double that sent the first two runs across the plate, and the ever willing Jimmy Mullen made his infield out so that another Leaf Leaf crossed the plate from third. This was the innings where the "Big Noise" prevailed, and the only spasm where a player touched the four stations, so well, did Dick Rudolph and Lavender twirl. Three runs, however, are a heap in any pitcher's battle, and yesterday was no exception, the game ending with the Torontos kalsomining the Grays, 3 to 0.

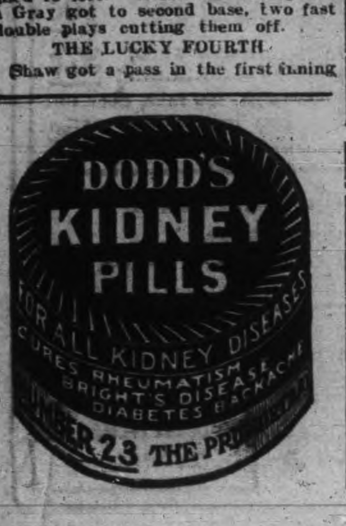
Both teams did some sensational fielding, Willie Keeler starting it in the first inning, when he ran back into the crowd and grabbed Nill's fly and, while falling, he still clung to the sphere with uplifted hand. Al. Shaw, also made a sensational one-hand catch of Tarleton's liner in the seventh. Elston in centre was there with bells on in the eighth on Tim Jordan's bingle, while in the Providence half Bill Bradley started a fast double play for the Leafs by a sensational pickup and throw to Mullen.

For three innings the visitors were retired in order, but in the fourth Anderson began with a slow roller to Mullen. Perry sacrificed him to second, but Nill whiffed at the ozone. With Elston at the bat, Rudolph made a wild pitch and Anderson cavorted to a peg from home, but he might just as well have been resting on the bench, as Elston flied to Keeler. This was the first time the Grays were dangerous, while the second and only other time came in the fifth inning, when Rock singled and Bobbie Vaughan, on Tarleton's grounder, in an attempt to get both runners, made a bobble and everyone was safe. Gillespie sacrificed, but Peterson fanned and Lavender flied to left. After this inning not a Gray got to second base, two fast double plays cutting them off.

THE LUCKY FOURTH

Shaw got a pass in the first inning with two down and stole, but Tim Jordan struck out. Another runner—Jimmy Mullen—got to second on Lavender's boot and wild throw combined, but there he died, and the crowd waited until the fourth innings before the fireworks started. In this spasm Shaw began with a single and then Jordan and Bradley were passed, filling the sacks. Eddie Phelps did the needful with a nice double to centre, sending Shaw and Jordan home. Gillespie robbed Mullen of a hit by a nice pickup and throw to first, but Bradley scored the play. Vaughan and Rudolph, the next two batters, were easy outs.

Toronto had only one more chance after this, that being in the seventh, and had not the ground rule been in force Rudolph would have had a home run on his bingle to centre field. As it was it only went for two bases. Two were out at the time and Keeler proved the third, but then who cared, we had the game in the bat bag, and the crowd were in rare good humor till they hit the wharf.



DIXON'S TEAM WON FROM HILLS

Good Ball in Second Collegiate Game—Score 5-3

The second game in the Collegiate League was played on Riverside yesterday afternoon, and it was very different to the variety dished up on Friday.

It was featured by fast, snappy ball The batteries worked steadily throughout and received good support from the rest of their mates.

Dixons' team lead in the second 2-1 but in the third, Hill's nine tied up the game at 3-3. The score remained unchanged until the last of the sixth when a timely hit by Gilbert brought in the much sought for run, and before the side was retired, Dixon came home for a counter making the score 5-3 in favor of his team.

This ended the scoring as Huycke struck out the next couple of men while the third met his Waterloo on a nice infield effort which was easily fielded.

The batteries were:—
Dixon's—M. Huycke and N. Phelan
Hill's—Smith and Hill.

ZAM-BUK CURES PILES

Read What Those Who Have Proved it Say

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes:—"I must thank you for the benefit I received from Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief, so I continued it and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say that it has effected a complete cure."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, of 183-185 St, Joseph street, St. Roch, Quebec, P.Q., writes:—"I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to everyone who suffers from piles. I have also found it most effective in curing a sore thumb with which my little son was suffering. The thumb had began to swell and fester and had lost the nail. I persevered in the application of Zam-Buk and the sore is now entirely healed."

Not only for piles, but for inflamed sores, ulcers, eczema, ringworm, boils, eruptions, scalp sores, itch, children's sore heads, old wounds, etc., Zam-Buk is without equal as a healer, and also for cuts, burns, stiffness and wherever and whenever a handy balm is called for. All druggists and stores at 50c. box. Zam-Buk Soap will be found as as superior amongst medicinal and toilet soaps as the balm is amongst salves. Mothers should use it for baby's bath, 25c. tablet, all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

New Train Service to "Lake of Bays"

An important feature that will be inaugurated during the coming season will be a new train service to the "Lake of Bays" district. A standard Grand Trunk passenger train will leave Toronto with through coaches, parlor cars and dining car at 10.15 o'clock in the morning, daily except Sunday, for Huntsville, reaching the latter point at about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, connecting with the steamers for points in the "Lake of Bays" district, and affording passengers the opportunity of reaching their destinaion in time for dinner.

The Sunday evening boat service from the Wawa Hotel, Britannia, Point Ideal, Portage, Deerhurst and other important calling ports on "Lake of Bays" to Huntsville will be run on same schedule as for season 1910, during the months of July and August, and which will be a boon to week-enders desiring to return to the city for business on Mondays.

Platinum and diamonds have been found in the Tulamen Mountains, B.C.

W. R. Payne's roadhouse, near Elk Lake, with contents, was destroyed by fire.

Hereafter it will cost 10 cents for Windsor folks to telephone to Detroit and vice versa.

OWEN SOUND IS LENDING MONEY

Citizens Pass By-laws and the Town is Securing Factories

While Peterboro is turning industrial propositions down, such as the Tire Co., because of a slight loan necessary to secure them, Owen Sound is carrying a series of loan by-laws with practically no opposition on the part to the citizens.

Owen Sound's slogan is 20,000 population in 1915 and that is the way they started out to realize it.

An Owen Sound dispatch to the Mail & Empire says:

The by-law to aid in the establishment of a knitting factory by a loan of $15,000 at 4 1-2 per cent. interest for twenty years fared best, carrying with 1,614 votes in favor and only 19 opposed. The promoters are Messrs. Lake and Ward, formerly connected with a similar industry at Alton. A similar by-law submitted about six weeks ago was defeated through lack of sufficiene number of votes polled, though having practically no opposition. The vote of to-day was anticipated. The industry is to commence with forty operatives and have a plant worth thirty thousand dollars before the town's loan is paid over.

The second proposition is to loan parties identified with the Adams Furniture Company of Toronto, $25,000 for twenty years at 4 1-2 per cent. to erect a factory for the manufacture of high class furniture and upholstered goods. The factory will be operated in conjunction with the three big factories now in operation here, the National Table Company, the National Furniture Company, and the North American Bent Chair Company, and which, with a contemplated factory for the manufacture of cheaper grades of case furniture, will round out Owen Sound's claims to be a furniture manufacturing centre.

The third proposition authorized the loan of $20,000 to C.S. Lloyd & Co. of Toronto, to establish a baby carriage and childs' wagon factory here. The conditions are the same as those of the other by-laws, the terms of repayment being arranged so as to in no way affect the tax rate. During the past few months Owen Sound has seen a sharp advance in real estate values, and several blocks of residential property were picked up as soon as they were placed on the market. Buildings are being erected at a rate which promises to exceed last year, which made a record, and from an industrial standpoint the prospects are bright.

THE OLD BELL.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In the controversy as to whether St. John's church is the owner of the chimes or they are the property of the citizens generally, I would suggest that they should be vested in the church provided the church hands over to the citizens the old bell to be hung on the city buildings. It would be useful, among other things, to arouse the board of health from its lethargy. The fact that the bell having been already given to All Saints' church and subsequently sold to Mrs. Fitzgerald for the same purpose, need not be a barrier to making a third disposal of it. There should be no difficulty in St. John's church again acquiring it. It would be a slur upon the old bell which has rendered such splendid service in the past, to leave it as at present.

Yours, etc.,
PAX.

THE POWER BUSINESS.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Wow! wow! And so the press gang is going it hot and strong on the $600,000 job for the town to take hold of. The Examiner announces that the Electrical Power Trust is to buy the up-river dams right off sure, for Mr. R. R. Ball and Mr W. G. Ferguson have gone up to Toronto. This is a special despatch from Toronto mind you, and Mr. Beck is coming down Wednesday night to "show us" what we might have lost. Then the Times comes out and says (having special wire too, don't yer know) that it ain't so, that there is 'ope for the old town yet, the chimes will be here soon. Now feller citizens, if you want to buy step right into it and do so. The river that was here when you were a child and will be here when the politicians is all dead (I hope) could have been got for the catching and now a few yards of it for $600,000!! Hooray! And cheap at that. If you don't get it, Guelph will get it like the tire factory. Hooray!

Yours,
BILLY BARLOW.

AGREEMENT IS NOW CONFIRMED

Board of Works in Session—Water May be Used on Some Streets

The agreement between the city and the Auburn Power Company, in regard to the retaining wall and water main proposition was gone into again at a meeting of the Board of works last night, and the matter finally settled.

It was decided that steps be taken to secure for the city proprietory rights on some land at the corner of Crescent and Lake streets, where a house is situated on property shown by a survey to belong to the city. Mr. L. LaPlante, it is alleged, is filling in what is said to be the city's land at this point.

The McDonald Estate and Mr. LaPlante will be notified.

Street Commissioner Evans remarked, during a discussion on the oiling of the streets, that according to present indications it would be necessary to water some of the streets, as the use of oil will run into more expenditure than allowed for in the appropriations. The present quality of oil, while less odorous than that of last year, is cheaper, but it does not last as did the other.

$20,000 FOR NEW WHARF

Proposed Site is Along Waterfront From Matthews Co. to McDonald's Mill

Of the supplementary estimates before the Dominion Government $20,000 is for a new wharf for Peterborough and $2,800 is for a wharf at Mt. Julian, Stony Lake.

Superintendent of the Trent Canal, Mr. J. H. McClellan, stated to the Review to-day that the proposed site for the wharf for Peterborough was along the water front for the Matthews Company to the McDonald mill, but that it would be necessary first to purchase some property from Mr. Hatton. If the property could not be secured the wharf might be constructed south of the Quaker Oats Co., with a swing to be put in at the C.P.R. bridge.

As to the wharf at Mount Julian it will probably be of concrete 66x150 with 60 feet of water on the side so that three boats can dock at the same time.

FOR FAMILY USE

An Ideal Remedy for Coughs, Sore Throat, Catarrh, Weak Chest.

After having made a special study of the treatment of the throat and lungs for twenty years, Prof. D. Jackson states that in his opinion no preparation for general family use is so efficient, so healing, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone.

As his reasons for making this claim for Catarrhozone, Dr. Jackson says:

"Catarrhozone is free from opium.

"The patient can breathe its rich, balsamic fumes direct to the diseased spot.

"It is a remedy that treats and cures causes—prevents disease spreading.

"Reaches the innermost recesses of the throat, nose, bronchial tubes, and lungs.

"Alleviates chest soreness.

"Stops coughing instantly.

"Prevents bronchial irritations.

"Relieves clogged nostrils.

"Cures sniffles and nasal catarrh.

"Prevents La Grippe.

"Has proven itself a cure for weak lungs, loss of voice, speakers' sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, coughs, colds, and winter ills."

Catarrhozone is unquestionably the world's greatest breathable cold, cough, and catarrh medicine, and being free from all drowsy drugs, entirely safe for children and old folks; it makes an ideal family remedy. Recommended by the medical profession, and sold by all reliable dealers. Beware of imitations, get "Catarrhozone" only; large size lasts two months, and is guaranteed, price $1; smaller sizes 25c and 50c. By mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

KIND WORDS FROM RURAL DEANERY

To Rev. Dr. Langfeldt Now of Innisfail

The following is a copy of a letter sent by Rev. F. J. Sawers, secretary of the Rural Deanery of Northumberland and Peterborough, to Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, at Innisfil—

Lakefield, May 6, 1911.

Dear Dr. Langfeldt,—As secretary of the Rural Deanery of Northumberland and Peterborough, I take pleasure in forwarding to you the following resolution—

Resolved, that this chapter of the Rural Deanery of Northumberland and Peterborough has received with sincere regret the resignation of Rev. Dr. E. A. Langfeldt, as their rural dean, occasioned by his removal to another part of the Diocese. They desire to express to Dr. Langfeldt their appreciation of the great gifts with which he has been endowed by a generous Providence, and they assure him that they will follow with affectionate fraternal interest the exercise of those gifts for Christ and the church in the new field of work to which he has been called, and they pray that God's richest blessing may rest upon him and all that are his for all time.

Yours sincerely,
F. J. SAWERS,
Secretary.

THE DOCTRINE OF RECOVERABILITY

Following is a synopsis of the sermon preached on Sunday evening by Prof. Eakin, to St. Paul's congregation—a masterly discourse on a vital topic of interest to all Christians—

"Strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die." Rev. 3:2.

The basis and beginning of all physical healthfulness, the cure for mental perplexity, and the secret of moral regeneration lies in taking heed to the remainder, the wealth of unclaimed resource. Your Christian Scientist, with a philosophy that is idealism run mad, your faith healer and mind curer, with all their half-baked theories, have this much that is genuine and reasonable; they enable discouraged men to see their own dormant powers of recoverability, and in many cases the battle of health is won. That is an illustration of what is possible in planes above the physical. The text was applied to the realm of faith and the realm of life. In place of the spirit of credulity which is fast dying, there is a spirit of inquiry which, because it has not the key to unlock every door in the universe, may refuse to enter those palaces of truth whose portals are open wide. However much may have been taken by the widespread diffusion of scientific knowledge, enough remains to make life strong and purposeful. An illustration was taken from Watt's picture of Hope, in which the woman got music from the one unbroken string in her harp. And there have been men who have begun with one or two strings, and who have beaten their intellectual music out in triumph and in certainty. In the last analysis enough remains for the great healings and the great life. There is the difference between right and wrong. Alternatives are presented to every man, and he knows he must choose. That is one string in the harp. This he must reverence. It speaks to him with unescapable authority. Second, there is a moral order in the world, a power not ourselves which makes for righteousness and for love. Perhaps you do not see this. Be it so. You believe there ought to be such a Power. Then you are under obligation to live for righteousness and love, even though there were no other being in the universe righteous and loving. That's the second string. Third, we know that Jesus gave the truest direction for the ordering of human life. He holds His supreme place by common consent. The metaphysics of His relation to the world as Teacher, Saviour, Guide, is absolutely clear. The miracle of water changed to wine may be puzzling, but the miracle of hearts made pure, and joy made new, and peace made regnant, are things about which there is no doubt whatever. Live as He lived, and you know that you have the life that is life indeed. Yield to the moral demand which every spiritual truth makes upon you, and you will find that the good and the true are ultimately one. The preacher said that he was not here stating his own faith, but was trying to arrive at the remnants of belief of those who are in the throes of intellectual difficulty, that they might see that they had remaining some great positives which would form the basis for a larger faith. The text was then applied to the multitudes under moral defeat, that they might be saved from the despair which such defeat too often brings. It is no Gospel that makes men look into the pit of their own degradation till the mind reels and the heart sickens, and the fires of hope die out. If men stand where they can only hear the "yelp of the beast" no angel song of encouragement will touch their chilled hearts. As a preparation for the Gospel it may be necessary to insist on the fact of sin; but when the sense of sin excludes the more fundamental fact of the Divine life in man it makes men despair of the goodness that is normally theirs, because sin is abnormal. Man is like a palimpsest; and through the Divine chemistry of the love and power of the Christ, the secondary superscription may be erased, and he may be seen for what he is—a child of God. Jesus made the normal, not the pathological, the basis of His appeal, therefore He never disposed of any, not even the most despairing. He matched His Gospel against the most inveterate human need, and kindled hope on the very confines of the outer darkness. He believed in the recoverability of man, reinforced by the kindred Spirit of God. Man, puny as he is, is king of the physical realm, because he can unite his inner force with the outer. We, too, can believe that the Infinite Goodness, Love and Power are also in contact with the personal soul, and trusting those mystic, upward movements of the spirit, we will find ourselves enfolded in the shining light and helped by the power of God. Men need to believe that there are resources in them that have never been utilized, that the truest self still waits expression, that the holiest, divinest, and strongest element in them is still unborn. Men, in bewailing the mistakes of the past, sometimes say that all is gone. But is it? Have they never a sense of shame? But shame in man is the shadow of God. Do they never feel the sting of remorse? But remorse is the instrument of Divine love. Have they never an aspiration after the good? But the aspiration of man is the inspiration of God. They are better equipped than they realize, and they have more allies than they can see. The redemptive forces of the universe are all on the side of the man who desires moral betterment. Since man has God in him, and even the most degraded has not lost all traces of the Divine, no one need despair.

OTTAWA MOURNS FOR LADY RITCHIE

Deceased Prominent in Work of National Council of Women

Ottawa Citizen:—The death occurred on Sunday morning at eight o'clock of Lady Grace Vernon Ritchie, relict of the late Sir William Ritchie, former chief Justice of Canada, after an illness since March 27th, with pneumonia, followed by typhoid fever. The deceased lady was in her 75th year, and was known as one of the most prominent women in the capital. She was born in St. John, N.B., in the year 1836, and was the daughter of the late T. L. Nicholson, of that place. In the year 1856 she married Sir William Ritchie in St. John, N.B., and came to Ottawa in the year 1875, when her husband was appointed a judge on the supreme court bench, and she has lived here since. Prior to this fatal illness deceased always enjoyed the best of health. In religion she was an Anglican and attended St. George's church, in which she was dearly beloved.

As a member of the local and national council of women she was exceedingly active and did not cease her work up to the time of her illness. She was the first president of the local council of women holding that office at the time it was started by Lady Aberdeen. She held that office for several years when the position was taken by another member. However, four years afterwards she was re-elected to the office of president and retired three years ago. Mrs. P. Larmonth, president of the local council, stated to the Citizen, that Lady Ritchie was one of the most active members, both in the local council and on the executive of the national council; that she was a woman of great intellectual powers, and that her aims were always to further the work of the council. She was greatly grieved to hear of her death.

The late Lady Ritchie was also one of the governors of the Victorian Order of Nurses, being one of the original members of the board, which was started in the year 1897. Miss MacKenzie, chief superintendent of the order, stated that the deceased had been very active in the work of the order, and that even age did not cause her to cease her deep interest.

She is survived by six sons, Robert R., sheriff of St. John, N. B., J. A. and O., barristers of Ottawa, Hazen, electrical engineer employed with the General Electric Company, at Peterborough, and W. J. and D. V. of British Columbia. Five daughters, Mrs. Hodgins, wife of Col. Hodgins, D.O.C., of London, Ont.; Mrs. Macnaughten, wife of Hon. F. A. Macnaughten, Mrs J. F. Smellie, of Ottawa, and Grace and Elsie at home. She also leaves one brother, V. C. Nicholson, of the department of secretary of [illegible] and a sister, Miss Ellen Nicholson, who has resided with the deceased for a number of years. Deceased resided at 417 Laurier avenue.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m., from Lady Ritchie's late residence to All Saints' church and thence to Beechwood cemetery.

WILFRID MORISON AT ST. ANDREWS

Fine Concert Under Auspices of Young Men's Guild

Large Audience Heard the Clever Boy Soprano

Youthful and talented Wilfrid Morison, the marvellous boy soprano, proved last evening that his popularity and welcome in Peterborough was in no manner diminishing when he assisted largely in the annual concert of the Young Men's Guild of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, and won enthusiastic encores at every appearance throughout the excellent program.

While Master Morrison assisted very materially in making the entertainment such a success, still the accomplished and skilful work of Miss Julia Choate, the well known violiniste and the humorous French-Canadian readings of Mr. R. J. Soden were also strong factors in the success of last evening's affair.

The pastor of the church, Rev. Jas. Rollins, officiated as chairman and introduced each performer on the program.

Master Morison reveals faultless musical ability for one so youthful, and appears to be instinctively the master of sympathetic and expressive interpretation. His vocal range is also surprising, and every note and tone is taken in a clear bird-like manner, without the slightest apparent effort, and with a smoothness that denotes splendid cultivation and training. His rendering of "I Am Thine, Only Thine," was remarkably pleasing, and allowed his extensive vocal register full scope. As an encore he sang the beautiful Irish melody, "Erin My Erin," with delightful effect.

Miss Julia Choate also excelled herself and won repeated encores. As a violiniste her talents and training long ago placed her in the front rank of musicians, and she fully sustained her reputation last night.

R. J. Soden recited several selections from the book of poems of the late Dr. Drummond, the popular French-Canadian story teller. "The Wreck of the Jule Plante," and "De Nice Little Canadienne," were two very popular numbers. Mr. Soden was encored at every appearance. The following was the order of the program:

Violin solo—Miss Julia Choate.
Vocal solo—"I Am Thine Only Thine" Wilfrid Morison.
Reading—R. J. Soden.
Violin solo—Miss Julia Choate.
Solo—Master Wilfrid Morrison.
Reading—R. J. Soden.
Violin solo—Miss Julia Choate.
Solo—Wilfrid Morison.
God Save the King.

During an interval in the program Rev. J. G. Potter was called upon by the pastor to speak a few words to the audience. Mr. Potter made a few general remarks in which he urged loyalty to the church and earnest endeavor on the part of the members to keep fighting upwards or to keep "pounding ever pounding," as one noted military leader is credited with having said. The best people in the world he remarked, were those who had associated themselves with the church. He also referred to the great power which the newspapers and the press were exerting in the land in helping along Christianity. All newspapers, he said, record either in their news columns or refer editorially to any important religious event of importance or consequence. It all tended to show, he concluded, that the church and religion occupied the highest place in the affairs of the world.

OBITUARY

The Late Miss Alexander

A pioneer resident of the city passed away this morning in the person of Miss Rhoda Mary Alexander, at the advanced age of 72 years.

The deceased lady was the second daughter of the late James Sanderson Alexander, of Stirling, Scotland. She was born in Otonabee, and has always resided in Peterborough. Her only sister, Mrs. George Schneider, predeceased her about four years ago.

The late Miss Alexander has resided with her brother, Charles A. Alexander, over fifty years, at the corner of London and George streets, where they conducted a grocery and bakery, and later only a grocery business.

Miss Alexander has been ill about two years, seldom leaving the house. She was stricken with paralysis a couple of years ago and this morning succumbed to a second attack.

She was a strong believer in the Church of England and a regular attendant previous to her illness at St. John's church.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, from the late residence, corner of George and London streets, and proceed to Little Lake cemetery.

Arthur Greenwood

A bright young life was brought to a close at the Nicholls Hospital yesterday, when Arthur Greenwood, aged 18 years, succumbed after a critical operation had been performed.

The deceased was born in Yorkshire, England, coming to Canada a year ago with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Greenwood, and his brothers and sisters. They arrived in Peterborough one year ago yesterday.

He had been employed as a carpet weaver by the Brinton Carpet Co., and by his straightforward manner of living he won the esteem and respect of his employers and fellow-employees.

He attended the Knox church A.S.K. Bible class, but was a member of the Church of England.

Besides his parents, three sisters and one brother are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral will take place at 1.30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, from 104 Lansdowne Avenue, to All Saints' church, thence to Little Lake cemetery.

THE INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER AND THE CITY COUNCIL'S ATTITUDE

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—There is evidently considerable misconception in the minds of the members of the city council in respect of the Industrial Commissioner's fund, and of their relation with the citizens.

Somewhat over a year ago a public meeting of the citizens of the city of Peterborough was called at the instance of the Board of Trade, and a resolution was passed thereat, urging upon the council of the city of Peterborough, in order to promote the industrial interests of the city, to procure the services of a competent and efficient officer, who should devote his whole time and energy in acquiring knowledge of the peculiar advantages possessed by the city in consulting and advising with the Municipal Council regarding the same and in promoting and advancing the industrial welfare and the interests of the city generally, and that for this purpose an appropriation be made by general levy for such sum as might be necessary. This resolution was subsequently presented to the council by representatives of the Board of Trade, and notwithstanding the fact that the citizens had at this representative wish that the city should appoint this officer for the purposes mentioned meeting unanimously expressed their and bear the expense of his office, they refused to do so and acquiesced only so far as to contribute the sum of $2,000 towards this expense, upon the condition that the Board of Trade should raise by subscription an amount at least equally large, and that in the event of their so doing, that that body should have absolute control of the office. The Council having come to this conclusion, some gentlemen connected with the Board of Trade, and who had no interest in the matter, other than the desire to promote the city's welfare, spent considerable time and expended much energy in interviewing a large number of the business men of the community, and in obtaining contributions to the fund to satisfy the Council's condition. They were successful in their efforts and succeeded in raising the sum of about $4,000, including the sum contributed by the city. Upon this fact being communicated to the City Council they paid the sum of $2,000 over to the Board of Trade and the office of the Industrial Commissioner was in accordance with the understanding between the two bodies, placed absolutely under the control of the Board of Trade. Upon this being done the Board of Trade appointed a committee of its own to advertise for a man to fill the position, to appoint an officer and to take charge of his duties.

This committee forthwith, upon receiving its instructions, advertised extensively in the public press, and in response thereto received a very large number of applications, and after a perusal of the same selected a number of them from parties whom they thought might be able to fill the position satisfactorily, and requested these persons to come to Peterborough for a personal interview. After interviewing a number of applicants and examining their credentials the committee finally decided to appoint Mr. Duggan to the position. His personal qualifications for the position made a favorable impression upon the committee, his business experience had been extensive and he came highly recommended from some of the most prominent business men in the city of Montreal.

This committee having in view the purposes for which the Industrial Commissioner was to be appointed as mentioned in the resolution passed by the citizens' committee, namely, That he would devote his whole time and energy in acquiring knowledge of the peculiar advantages possessed by the city and in promoting and advancing the industrial welfare and interest of the city generally and that he should consult the Board of Trade now, instead of the Municipal Council as the former body had charge of his office, instructed him, first, to acquire a knowledge of the conditions mentioned and to endeavour, to the best of his ability, to advance the Industrial welfare of the city.

The committee recognizing the fact that perhaps one of the most important factors in the city's industrial progress was the advantage acruing to it from the energy to be derived from its water power, and to be made available for manufacturing purposes instructed the Industrial Commissioner to gather and systematize all the information he could obtain on the subject and place himself in communication with the Hydro Electric Commission and have an exhaustive and complete report made of the waterpower situation generally and of all the waterpower adjacent to the city of Peterborough that might be made economically and serviceable for its industrial and commercial purposes. In pursuance of these instructions, the commissioner took up the matter with the Hydro Electric Commission and succeeded in getting a personal interview with the Commission in the month of November last and succeeded in getting that body interested in the power question in this district. As it was necessary under the Hydro Electric Power Commission act, that a request should be made by the municipal authorities directly to the Commission, to have a report made by its engineers, the commissioner, I am informed by him, in the month of January last, laid the whole proposition before the Mayor and requested him to make an application to the Commission and in consequence of this request the application was made by him. The Industrial Commissioner did not make this formal request to the Mayor until the month of January, because he found it necessary to have a definite scheme arrived at before such application should be made. Upon the application being made, the Industrial Commissioner carried on most active negotiations with the Hydro Electric Commission in the matter, assisting every way in his power to obtain the information required by them and was most enthusiastic in his efforts to have its engineers complete and prepare a report and present it to the citizens at as early a date as possible. As a result of these efforts the report was prepared and presented at a meeting of the citizens in the month of April last.

It is quite evident that this very important question of electrical power had been for many years neglected by this city, and that in fact, little or nothing had been done respecting it by the Municipal Council or by any other representative body until it was energetically taken up by the Industrial Commissioner with the result herein before mentioned. A complete and reliable report has now been prepared and placed in the hands of the citizens, a clear and definite knowledge has been obtained in respect to this very important matter and the citizens for the first time are placed in a position to form a correct opinion respecting it and to come to a proper conclusion as to what should be done in securing for the city, control and a considerable quantity of electric power and of what seems to be absolutely necessary for the future Industrial development of this city.

Complaints are made by members of the City Council that there was undue interference in respect to the water power question by the Industrial commissioner and that he and the Council were working at cross purposes. If this is so, the members of the council and not Mr. Duggan are to blame. He was carrying out the instructions of the committee who had his office in charge, and whose instructions he had to obey in order to retain his position. He gave that amount of attention to the work which was necessary and no member of the council or any other municipal officer had time to devote to it. After the application was made by the Mayor at his request, he carried on the work and conducted negotiations with the knowledge of almost every, if not every member of the City Council. He had no knowledge whatever of the City Council or any members or committee thereof conducting any negotiations with the Hydro Electric Commission respecting the same. If the council found that Mr. Duggan's efforts were interfering with their efforts in the same direction, it would have been a simple matter for them to have told him so, but throughout the whole transaction they never uttered a word of warning. Is it not plain that in these circumstances that if there is any blame to be attached to anyone in the matter it should be attached to the members of the City Council, who to say the least of it were apathetic, and who had it in their power to have harmonious action on the part of the industrial commissioner and their own body, if they saw fit.

It is very clear that a number of the aldermen had taken very little trouble to correctly inform themselves of the facts of the case before discussing the discontinuance of Mr. Duggan in the office. If they are guilty of the same lamentable ignorance of the city's affairs generally and in their discussion of other public matters as they were in this particular instance, one might well feel an apprehension as to efficient management of the municipal affairs. One of the aldermen mentions the commissioner's salary as being $4,000, and complains that it is altogether too high, and the fact is that the salary is only $3,000 and $4,000 is intended to defray not only his own salary but the wages of his stenographer and all the expenses and salary incident to his office.

Again it is asked by one of the aldermen, as stated in the public press, why should the city retain a four thousand dollar man to sit in an office and read over communications that come to the mayor and clerk respecting the location of industries. This in my opinion is a very unfair way of representing the service performed by the commissioner. He has been most energetic ever since he took the office in his efforts to procure factories for this city. He has taken, it is true, the letters that came to the mayor and the city clerk and has conducted extensive negotiations with these writers. Nothing was said by the members of the council about the thousands of letters written by this gentleman while in this office. It is no exaggeration to say that he has written to upwards of two thousand people, that he has communicated with manufacturing concerns throughout the United States in all branches, that might be likely to locate in the city of Peterborough, and he has carried on a most extensive correspondence with such persons who had given him any hope of eventually locating here. At the present time, active, live negotiations are being conducted with about sixteen industrial concerns, a number of whom he hopes to be able to locate here during the present year. There is little doubt that Mr. Duggan has done more during his brief term of office than any other city official to bring Peterborough industrial advantages before the manufacturing concerns in the United States and Canada than any other office in the civic service. That he has not succeeded in procuring many factories during the present year should not occasion any surprise. Before results can be expected very considerable efforts would have to be put forth and very considerable area covered. To represent that his services were restricted to answering communications coming to the city clerk and the mayor was a very unfair way of putting it.

There seems to be a desire also on the part of some members of the city council to attach blame to him in face of the result of the vote upon the by-law proposed assistance to the Independent Tire Company. In this matter Mr. Duggan sought and obtained the assistance and co-operation of a large number of progressive and prominent citizens. He organized every polling sub-division in the city and made arrangements for committees to look after the same and bring out the votes in each of these districts. All that was possible for a man to do he did, and if the necessary vote was not brought out it was not due to any neglect upon his part. Might I not ask if it is not as much the duty of the city council to take some means to have the necessary vote brought out as it was that of the industrial commissioner, or any other person or body in the community, yet apparently nothing was done by them?

If I may be permitted to say so, a number of the aldermen seem to have misconceived their relations with the citizens and the position which they occupy. They appear to be only too anxious to act as an autocratic body, whose public acts are above and beyond the control of the citizens. They seem to have completely forgotten that the citizens themselves exercised their choice in selecting them to occupy the position at the Municipal Board, that they placed them there and solely for the purpose of carrying out their wishes and not the individual wishes and desires of the elected body. They seem to have constructed some peculiar theory or other of municipal government, that the wishes of the community that selected them and placed them in a position of public trust to perform the public services according to the express wishes and desires of the citizens were to be entirely disregarded, and that the whims and personal inclinations of the members of the council alone were to be given effect to. There could be no better instance of it than the case in consideration. The citizens in the first instance expressed their wish for this office, and that the remuneration and expenses should be paid out of the public funds, and their wish was not acquiesced in. A representative body of the citizens had appointed the Commissioner to the office and expressed satisfaction with the way in which he discharged his duties, and asked that the Council continue him in the service, and their wishes were not given effect to. The representatives of the Board of Trade and a larger number of influential citizens and members of the citizens' associations appeared before the City council and requested that this gentleman be continued in office, and their wishes in the matter were ignored. A communication had been sent from the Retail Merchants' Association and placed in the hands of the Mayor and City Clerk, so I am informed by the Industrial Commissioner, requesting that the office be continued, and that the services of the present incumbent be retained, and this communication was not read to the Council until after the question of the dismissal had been disposed of, and again the wishes of the citizens were not acquiesced in.

The action of the Council in this matter seems to me to be entirely unwarranted and to be arrived at on the part of several of the members without proper information—information that might have been easily obtained, and in express opposition to the wishes of several of the representative bodies of the citizens.

Yours truly,

D. O'CONNELL.

ARCHBISHOP M'EVAY DIES; WAS RECTOR OF ST. PETER'S

Career of Distinguished Prelate Began Career With Labors at Peterborough in Eighties—Born in Lindsay

Toronto, May 10.—After an illness of more than a year, Most Rev. Fergus Patrick McEvay, Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Toronto, passed away peacefully at 12.25 a.m. this morning at the palace, 510 Sherbourne street. Those present when the end came were his nephew, Father McGuire, Rev. Father Burke, editor of The Catholic Register and Extension; Father Kidd, Father Whelan, Dr. R. J. Dwyer, and a number of sisters of the church.

While it became evident some months ago that his grace was suffering from an acute form of pernicious anaemia, which threatened to end fatally, the archbishop at times showed improvement in his condition, which gave rise to hope of ultimate recovery. He visited Mount Clemens, Michigan, and Atlantic City in quest of health, and appeared to be considerably benefitted, but of late it became evident that dissolution could not long be stayed. On frequent occasions both through pulpit and the columns of The Catholic Register special prayers of the faithful of the diocese were besought on his behalf.

The Right Rev. Fargus Patrick McEvay, who succeeded to the archdiocese of Toronto upon the retirement of Archbishop O'Connor three years ago, was a native of this province, having been born in Lindsay in 1856. His earlier education he received in the county schools and afterwards continued his studies in St. Michael's College and the University of Toronto. He took his theological course at the Grand Seminary in Montreal, and was subsequently ordained at Trenton in 1882 by the late Archbishop Cleary.

Combined with a thorough classical training, the late archbishop possessed to a remarkable degree business acumen, which was evidenced by the development in every parish with which he was associated. His ministrations had many ramifications, and his different clerical responsibilities were perhaps more varied than those which fall to the lot of most priests.

At Kingston he assumed his first duties, but shortly afterwards on the formation of the Peterboro diocese, he was moved to that jurisdiction and took charge of the missions at Bobcaygeon, Galway and Fenelon Falls. In 1887, when Bishop Dowling succeeded Bishop Janot of Peterboro, the then Father McEvay was appointed rector of St. Peter's Church at Peterboro. In his ministry there, the zeal, enthusiasm and activity of the young cleric found ample scope. Bishop Dowling entrusted the renovation of the cathedral to him, and through his executive ability the property for St. Joseph's Hospital was secured and parochial and diocesan houses erected.

While in the midst of these labors, Father McEvay went to Hamilton, where he occupied the dual position of secretary to the bishop and rector of the cathedral. During his stay in Hamilton honors came to him from Rome. He was appointed private chamberlain to his holiness Pope Leo XIII., and later domestic prelate and Mexican Fighting Gives Trouble to the Americans Fierce Battles Are Being Fought.

Washington, May 10.—The danger to American lives on the border as a result of the revolution in the Mexican republic, was again yesterday the subject of sh talk in the Senate. The killing of several citizens in El Paso, Texas, as the result of Monday's battle at Juarez was the immediately provocation. Senator Stone again urged the use of American troops to protect Americans, and changing his attitude toward the President's course practically charged him with playing a game of bluff in sending the troops to the front. He expressed apprehension lest the bullets of Monday be followed by shrapnel and cannister.

Senators Bacon of Georgia, Works of California, and other Senators replied, commending the attitude of the President and advocating a conservative course. Senator Bacon contended for the right of the Mexican combatants to pursue their war, even though American lives should be incidentally endangered.

Representative W. Sulzer, chairman of the House committee on foreign affairs, issued a statement deprecating any talk of intervention.

Fierce Battle at Jaurez.

El Paso, Tex., May 10.—What perhaps was the fiercest battle of the Mexican revolution, was fought at Jaurez, across the Rio Grande yesterday, but without result. Last night both federal and insurrectos were resting on their arms ready to resume the battle at daybreak.

While the insurrectos are in possesion of the greater part of the city, the federals have strongly entrenched positions.

The aged Gen. Navarro is confident that he can hold out for at least a week until Rabago and Escudero come up with reinforcements. The rebels are equally confident that by to-morrow night they will be in full possession.

The loss on both sides is estimated at from 30 to 60 dead and nearly a hundred wounded.

Town Taken by Assault.

Tijuana, Lower California, Mexico, May 10.—Three companies of independent rebels, comprising 280 men, are encamped in the buildings and streets of Tijuana. The town was taken by assault yesterday, the battle lasting from 5.30 until 9.40 o'clock. At that hour resistance ceased. Conservative estimates of the dead and wounded on both sides place the number at 75.

The attack was planned and executed by Gen. Sam Pryce, who is said to belong to a distinguished British family. He is said to have served with the Canadian contingent in the Boer war.

Still Fighting.

Laredo, Tex., May 10.—Passengers arriving yesterday say a serious fight has occurred between the federals and revolutionists in the outskirts of Saltillo. A federal lieutenant and 22 soldiers were killed. The insurrecto loss is not known. Another battle has occurred at Conception del Oro, about 80 miles from Saltillo. Information is that the federal garrison, believed to number fifty men, was annihilated.

CHINESE LOAN

Regent Authorizes Raising Money For Railways.

Pekin, May 10.—An imperial edict issued yesterday authorizes the conclusion of the Hukwang loan of $30,000,000 for railroad construction in Central China. The loan was signed a year ago this month by groups of financiers representing Great Britain, the United States, France and Germany. Despite provincial opposition the amount of the loan to the Chinese Government remains at $30,000,000, and notwithstanding the elimination of a branch section of the railway, the four groups of bankers will participate.

Another edict exhorts the viceroys to abolish the production of opium expeditiously, Great Britain having consented by the Anglo-Chinese agreement signed Monday to reduce the exportation of Indian opium to China as rapidly as the home growth is exterminated. The anti-opium societies are most active and as the country has been aroused it is believed the Government will succeed in abolishing the production of the poppy within a few years.

The important edicts of yesterday and the one of Monday which abolished the grand council, substituting for it a constitutional cabinet of ten members, indicate that the Government is assuming a responsibility which heretofore has lacked revolutionary evidences, and that the assembly's unabated hostility has forced the Government to lead or be led.

ANGLICAN PRIMATE ISSUES MIXED MARRIAGE PASTORAL

Says That Once Performed They Are Indissoluble by Church of Rome.

Ottawa, May 10.—On May 21 there will be read in all the Anglican churches in Canada a pastoral letter signed by Archbishop Matheson of Winnipeg, primate of all Canada, and Archbishop Hamilton of Ottawa, metropolitan of the ecclesiastical province of Canada, on the question of mixed marriages.

The pastoral will deprecate the performance of these marriages, but says that when once performed they are indissoluble by the Church of Rome.

The disbelief of the Anglican Church in divorce is also strongly brought out, and the clergy are prohibited from remarrying divorced persons during the life of the other party to the first marriage.

Subsidy For New Line.

Ottawa, May 10.—A contract was signed yesterday between the Government and the Union Steamship Co. of New Zealand, for a direct service between Vancouver and Victoria and Auckland, 18 days to each trip, at the rate of $180,509 per annum. New Zealand will pay a similar amount. Thus cuts out Australia, which declined to include New Zealand.

First Court Held.

London, May 10.—The first court of King George's reign and the first big ceremonial function since the death of King Edward was held at Buckingham Palace last night. Although another court will be held to-night and that last night's was especially for diplomatic representatives and officials, the attendance was very large, many visitors from the colonies who are here for the Imperial Conference being present.

RETURNS FROM TRIP TO WEST

B. F. Ackerman Home—Business Men Against Reciprocity

Mr. B. F. Ackerman returned home last night, after having been in the west on a business trip, his main object being to get operations under way on the new fives-torey warehouse, which he is opening up at Regina, and on which the excavating work has been commenced.

Mr Ackerman reports the crops in the west to be very promising. The weather has been splendid, and very warm, he having only experienced one cold day.

Practically all the business men in the west with whom Mr. Ackerman conversed were against reciprocity. Feeling there is decidedly stronger than in the east.

BOYS KILLED BY A TRAIN

Sad Death of Two Hamilton Lads Last Night.

Had Been Gathering Dandelions Along the Track.

Hamilton, May 10.—Instant death overtook Harold Tye and Morris Holden, two English boys, about 11 years of age, when they were run down by G.T.R. passenger train No. 12, about a quarter of a mile west of the Jockey Club, a few minutes before six o'clock yesterday afternoon. The bodies of both boys were terribly mangled, the face of the Tye lad being unrecognizable, with both hands and one leg cut off, while Holden's body was cut in two at the waist. So far as is known, no one except the engineer of the train which killed the boys, saw the accident. The boys had been gathering dandelions along the track and at the approach of the train it is supposed they lost all presence of mind and in their confusion ran in front of the train.

The G. T. R. tracks at the point where the accident occurred, are on a high embankment, but as there are three tracks, the boys could have avoided the fatal accident by staying on one of the other tracks. After striking the boys, the train stopped and the crew telephoned to the railway company's office about the matter. A brakeman was left in charge of the remains and the train proceeded on its way to Buffalo. Dr. H. S. Burns, whose office is nearby, was called, but of course, could do nothing. The bodies were removed to the city margue, where they were viewed by Coroner Hopkins and a jury at nine o'clock. The inquest was adjourned till next Friday. Both boys were sons of carpenters, who have not been long out from England. Ernest Tye, 83 Kensington avenue, is the father of the Tye lad, while Holden's father is John Holden of Rosslyn avenue.

The party was taken for a trip over the lift lock on the Bessie Butler, and at noon Hon. Mr. Beck was the guest at a luncheon. This afternoon he was escorted about the city and through the various industrial concerns. He is to address a public meeting on the power question at the Collegiate auditorium this evening, and citizens are invited to be present. The meeting will commence at eight o'clock, and His Worship Mayor Morrow will preside.

Presumed Dead.

Vienna, May 10.—The controversy regarding the fate of Archduke John Salvator of Austria, otherwise known as John Orth, was legally settled yesterday. The Supreme Court decided that his death must be presumed to have occurred July 21, 1890.

Archduke John was the younger son of the late Grand Duke Leopold II. of Tuscany. He was born in 1852. He renounced his rank and titles and called himself John Orth. He married Milly Stiebel, an actress, in London, July, 1890, and with his wife sailed on his vessel, Santa Margaretha, for Chile. Since then nothing has been heard of the archduke, and it is believed that the vessel was wrecked in a terrific storm and that al. on board perished.

Site For Legislature.

Winnipeg, May 10.—Five hundred thousand dollars in cash and the purchasing of a new site for a drillhall by the Provincial Government, with permission to occupy the present quarters until the completion of the new buildings, is the reply of the Government to a delegation which visited Ottawa in connection with securing the Fort Osborne Barracks as the site for the proposed new Provincial Legislature buildings. It was decided, however, that the Provincial Government could not accept the proposition, and a wire to this effect was sent to Ottawa.

HON. FRANK OLIVER INTRODUCES FOREST CONSERVATION BILL

MORE CHARGES

Ottawa, May 8.—It is understood that Mr. Blondin, proposes to make further charges against Mr. Lanctot, the member for Richelieu. It is stated that there will relate to materials which entered into the construction of Mr. Lanctot's house.

Most Important Feature is Making Eastern Slope of Rockies a Reserve.

Ottawa, May 10.—Consideration of Hon. Frank Oliver's bill respecting forest reserves and parks was proceeded with in the Commons yesterday. The measure covers a complete revision of the present Forest Reserves Act, and its most important feature is that it authorizes by statute the setting apart of the entire eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains as a forest reserve. Already there are various reservations within the area, but it is proposed to make the whole eastern slope one reserve. It is also provided that any portion of the area included in the reserve may be placed under additional restrictions, which would provide for it being set apart as a park or a pleasure resort. After the bill goes into effect the acreage of Dominion forest reserves will be 16,760,640 acres, as compared with 3,379,000 acres at the present time.

Dr. Schaffner introduced a short discussion as to the policy to be pursued in regard to the timber on the reserve by saying that he was suspicious of the proposal to destroy part of the timber by lumbering operations and to depend upon it being replaced by a system of reforestration.

Mr. Oliver said the forestry branch of the Department was studying the question in all its bearings, with the object of working out a system which would mean that when a crop of timber is harvested there would shortly after be another to harvest. He pointed out that in the west timber was particularly valuable and cognizance had to be taken of the force of public opinion. In reply to another question by Dr. Schaffner, Mr. Oliver said the policy would probably be to allow the cutting of such timber that had reached a certain stage of maturity. Major Herron urged the necessity of settlers in the vicinity of the reserves being permitted to use the dead timber for fuel and lumber. He also expressed the hope that a large section of the Rocky Mountain Park would be set aside as a game preserve. He asked if any further homestead entries would be allowed within the reserve.

Mr. Oliver replied in the negative. He said that no alienation of surface rights would be permitted, although it was possible that under certain conditions grazing rights might be granted without prejudice. As to these, however, no policy had been outlined.

It took the members over six hours to put the bill through the committee stage. The discussion for the most part was in connection with technical points, but the Opposition made a general complaint that the Minister would have too much power.

Mr. Middleboro moved that in the event of concessions being granted they should be advertised for a period and sold by auction.

The proposal was negatived on a vote of 39 to 17.

Late in the evening the steamship subsidies and subventions were piloted through by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and a number of supplementary estimates were passed.

The Quebec & Ontario Railway bill was talked out by E. A. Lancaster and Dr. Sproule. The objection to the measure is that while by the charter it is proposed to build a line through northern Quebec and northern Ontario, with feeders in New Ontario, there is no stipulation that the main line should be built. It is believed that the company intends to build the feeders only, and as these propose to tap the country through which the T. & O. operates, particularly the Porcupine district, it is agreed that it should have an Ontario charter. The opponents of the bill demand that there be a proviso for the construction of the main line first.

MORE FIGHTING IN JUAREZ CITY

Federals Are Besieged in Cathedral by Insurrectos

Special to the Review.

El Paso, May 10.—With the city in flames at many points, fierce fighting was renewed in Juarez this morning. The Federals are besieged in a cathedral, and are making a stubborn resistence.

WOMAN MUST HANG FOR MURDER

Soo Woman to Pay Penalty for Atrocious Crime.

Sault Ste. Marie, May 10.—Angelina Napolitana was found guilty at the assizes yesterday afternoon of the murder of her husband on Easter Sunday. Judge Britton sentenced the prisoner to hang on Aug. 9. U. McFadden, counsel for the prisoner, made a strong plea, claiming that her husband had threatened the woman with desertion if she did not resort to prostitution to obtain money for him. The woman will become a mother in two months. She is 28 years of age, and killed her husband with an axe while he slept. T. C. Meredith, for the crown, said that the woman in her own evidence admitted having lived with a man named Nish for a week while her husband was absent. Justice Britton charged strongly against the prisoner.

The Carroll murder trial will commence this morning.

Blown Out to Sea.

Philadelphia, May 10.—Blown over the waters of Delaware Bay and heading rapidly for the Atlantic Ocean, two men and a woman, passenger in the basket of the balloon Philadelphia II., were rescued yesterday by the tug Mary J. Walker and towed up the Delaware River.

The occupants of the basket were Dr. Thomas E. Eldridge, president of the Philadelphia Aeronautical Recreation Society; John Hoggle, president of the Philadelphia Chemical Co., and Mrs. Ada Turner Kurtz, all of this city. With the balloon still 50 feet in the air they were towed to Delaware City, where a landing was finally affected after the passengers had been drenched and nearly drowned when the basket sank beneath the waters of the bay.

Telegraphers Prosper.

Toronto, May 10.—An unparalleled year of progress and prosperity has been the lot of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, as shown in the reports given at yesterday's session.

In the last two years the organization has made and revised 113 schedules, and these agreements have given to their members over $2,000,000 increase of wages.

The purchase of 127 feet 6 inches square of land in the most important downtown district of St. Louis, cost $51,000, and already is worth $75,000 to $100,000. On this is to be erected an office building fifteen or sixteen storeys in height, and let for office purposes, besides being headquarters for the order. It will cost about $600,000.

Five Thousand Fishermen Starving.

St. John's, Nfld., May 10.—Yesterday's information from Battle Harbor, Labrador, that the 5,000 inhabitants of the coast are starving was not wholly surprising to people here. It has been known for months that a food shortage threatened the hardy fisher folk, and repeated efforts have been made to carry help to them. Vessels laden with supplies of food and clothing endeavored repeatedly to pierce the ice fields which enclosed the Labrador coast, but were always forced back, some times badly damaged.

It is expected that the relief party organized here will be able soon to make its way to Battle Harbor, as the ice has broken up and is drifting south with the advancing spring.

LIVES LOST IN MUSIC HALL FIRE

Trained Lion Broke Out of His Cage — Nine Dead

Special to the Review.

Edinburgh, May 10.—Nine performers lost their lives in a fire that destroyed the Empire Music Hall last night. A trained lion escaped from his cage, and, maddened by burns, blocked the main exit from the dressing rooms. Lafayette, its trainer, and two assistants, perished trying to control the terrified beast.

Severed an Artery.

Kingston, May 10.—Cadet Godwin of Vancouver, attending the Royal Military College, was seriously injured in swimming at Navy Bay. While ascending the ladder against the bathing house his hand went through a window, severing an artery. Twenty-five stitches were necessary to close the wound.

Failed to Cure Rheumatism

Miss Flora Chapman Vividly Describes Her Sufferings and Ultimate Cure With "Nerviline."

"After being an enthusiastic user of Nerviline for years, I feel it my duty to tell you personally what your wonderful preparation has done for me.

"I suffered torture from rheumatism and heart trouble, tried scores of so-called remedies, consulted for weeks and months with Toronto's most eminent physicians, but derived only slight benefit.

"A friend insisted on my using Nerviline, and to my surprise a vigorous rubbing of this powerful liniment eased the pains and reduced the stiffness in my joints. I continued to use Nerviline and was permanently cured. I am now perfectly well, and for three years have had no rheumatism at all. I know many families where no other medicine but Nerviline is kept—it is so useful in minor ailments like earache, toothache, neuralgia, coughs, colds, lumbago, and sciatica. I call Nerviline my "Life Guard," and urge all to try its merit."

UNION LABEL

TAFT'S SPEECH

The Hamilton Herald (Independent) says:—At last the chief organ of the Laurier Government has ventured to take notice of President Taft's declaration that the reciprocity agreement is worthy of support because it will prevent the development of a preferential trade policy within the British empire. This morning the Toronto Globe deals with that unfortunate part of Mr. Taft's New York speech. Its manner of dealing with it cannot be said to be satisfactory or convincing. The Globe says that Mr. Taft's mistake is in regarding the policy of imperial preferential trade too seriously. That policy, it points out, has been defeated in three successive general elections in Britain, and the cause is now "more hopeless than ever."

We are inclined to think that Mr. Taft takes a more accurate view of the political situation in Britain than the Toronto Globe does. He sees one of the great historic parties committed to the policy of imperial preferential trade. He knows that the agitation in favor of that policy is only a few years old and that it has made wonderfully rapid progress. He knows too, that the British electors have never had an opportunity to pronounce upon it fairly, because it has been only one of several important issues upon which the parties were divided. With these other issues out of the way, he thinks it not improbable that the electors would pronounce in favor of it. It is hardly reasonable to expect that the Unionist party will be permanently banishished from office, and when it is in office it will be bound to give effect to the principle of preferential trade within the empire.

The Globe's plan of dealing with Mr. Taft's declaration is unsatisfactory for another reason. It virtually assumes the insincerity of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Fielding. The Dominion Premier has on more than one occasion declared that whenever a British government is ready to grant a trade preference to Canada, his government will reciprocate by an enlargement of the existing preference in Britain's favor. Mr. Fielding, when he introduced the preferential tariff fourteen years ago, and on several occasions since, has made it clear that the new policy was introduced with the expectation that it would be reciprocated in Britain. Once, on the floor of parliament, he intimated that if there appeared to be no prospect of an exchange of preference, the Canadian preferential trade might be either modified or withdrawn.

If the Globe's comment on Mr. Taft's speech is warranted by the facts of the situation, then the Canadian Premier and Finance Minister must either have been insincere in their utterances on the subject of mutual preferential trade, or they took a singularly fatuous view of the situation in Britain.

THE POISONED WELL

Below are two dispatches, one appearing in the Toronto World yesterday, one in the Toronto Globe. Compare them. The Globe dispatch gives only what is suitable to publish to support the political policy of the paper. The Globe doesn't publish the most important statement in the whole dispatch—the most illuminative to Canadian farmers. "WE SHALL SELL MORE AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS TO CANADA THAN SHE WILL SELL TO US." This statement is entitled to publication, as one item of important news, but Globe readers get nothing that isn't "properly edited" for their consumption. Much has been said about the "poisoned wells" of journalism, and it must surely be a shock to the believers in the fairness of the Globe news columns at least, to find that damaging evidence on reciprocity is not published.

Toronto World.

Washington, May 8.—President Taft indulged in some plain talk to-day in explaining to 25 members of the National Grange that he does not intend to play politics with the Canadian reciprocity agreement, even if the enactment of that measure by congress costs him the farmer farmer vote. The President told his visitors bluntly that he was sorry to hear that Republican farmers would desert the party if the agreement goes through but fear of such desertion would not change his conviction as to the wisdom of such legislation.

"I believe this treaty to be the best thing of the whole country, including farmers, merchants, laboring men and all," said the President, "because I believe it is contrary to nature, it is flying in the face of Providence to put an artificial wall like that between this country and Canada, and not get the benefit that will inure to peoples of the same traditions, the same language and practically with the same character of labor. If we take down that wall, we will benefit by it, FOR WE SHALL SELL MORE AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS TO CANADA THAN SHE WILL SELL TO US. We do now, and we shall sell her even more after the treaty goes into effect. That is my judgment. I am not arguing—I am merely stating my conclusion. If I did not believe this I should not have taken the responsibility of doing what I have done to put this reciprocity treaty through. I am willing to abide by the judgment of history—the judgment that will come after the event."

Toronto Globe.

Washington, May 8.—President Taft indulged in some plain talk today in explaining to twenty-five members of that National Grange that he does not intend to play politics with the Canadian reciprocity agreement, even if the enactment of that measure by Congress costs him the farmer vote. The President told his visitors bluntly that he was sorry to hear that Republic farmers would desert the party if the agreement goes through, but fear of such desertion would not change his conviction as to the wisdom of such legislation. He said that he believed reciprocity to be the best thing for the whole country, and that he did not intend to argue it.

Mr. N. P. Holt, spokesman for the farmers, intimated strongly that the farmer does not like reciprocity, and that the Republican votes are likely to be lost if it is passed.

"I am willing," replied President Taft, "to abide by the judgment of history—the judgment that will come after the event. When you gentlemen come to see the result, I believe that you as fair-minded men will admit that you have been wrong in your fears and that I have been right."

A MARRIAGE DECISION

The Court of Review has given a decision in a marriage case in Quebec that is of interest. First cousins, Napoleon Tremblay and Albine des Pati, were married in 1904, and five years later the husband took action to have the marriage nullified on the ground that they were first cousins, and that the necessary dispensation had not been obtained from the church. The Richelieu Superior Court granted dissolution, but an appeal to the Court of Review brought judgment reversing the finding of the Superior Court. The taking of shelter behind the decrees of any church in the matter of marriage and its annulment is repugnant to British ideas, and the movement that will remove civil law relating to marriages from all connection with ecclesiastical ordinances in Quebec is bound to keep up until the matter can be properly settled.

In this connection it is interesting to note that Sir Allen Aylesworth, in reply to Mr. George Taylor, M.P., in the House of Commons, stated that the government considered the Dominion had no jurisdiction in the matter of marriage regulation, that it intended to take no action, and would not even seek to test the question of jurisdiction. It is obvious that the Dominion Government will take no action that might alienate the church, having less courage than the Roman Catholics of France, or Italy, or Spain, or Portugal.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The action of the manufacturers and business men last night in deciding to approach the aldermen in a conciliatory mood to ask them to reconsider their action in reference to Mr. Duggan, was the only sane course to be pursued in the matter. The business men of the city are certainly anxious that the city shall go ahead; so are the aldermen. What remains is an amicable conference to see if the warring views cannot be reconciled, and the good of Peterborough considered above all things.

The C.N.R. has got the Dominion Government to guarantee its bonds for the construction of its line from Port Arthur to Montreal, a thousand mile stretch that will complete its transcontinental line. Mackenzie & Mann have been able to get provincial government guarantees for the [illegible] lines; in fact, they mean to get what they want wherever they go, even if it be to London for a few odd million more. M. & M. are "some lobbyists."

Fate of Canada's Imperialism.

London, May 9.—The Pall Mall Gazette says Taft has proved to the hilt that reciprocity is no ordinary matter of business accommodation, but a great move in a policy fraught with fate to Canada's imperial position.

Everything seems moving towards a most desired development, giving Canada full time not only to think, but to speak out.

DIRECT EVIDENCE FROM NOVA SCOTIA

Numerous Cases of Kidney Disease Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mr. Stillman Perry adds his experience to the many that have given rise to the general statement, "There is no case of Kidney Disease Dodd's Kidney Pills cannot cure.

Cape Negro Island, Shelburne Co., N.S., May 9.—(Special).—That Dodd's Kidney Pills are continuing to do grand work in Nova Scotia is evidenced on every side, and Cape Negro Island can provide direct testimony that there is no case of Kidney Disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure. Among those who are talking in this strain is Mr. Stillman Perry. "Yes," Mr. Perry states, "I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills are all that is claimed for them. My son had trouble with his Kidneys. I sent for some Dodd's Kidney Pills and since taking them he has had no return of his trouble. They certainly did him good."

It is tales of this kind, heard on every side, that make for public faith in Dodd's Kidney Pills. People suffering from Kidney Disease have used Dodd's Kidney Pills and been cured. That's why from one end of Canada to the other it has become almost a national saying, "There is no case of Kidney Disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills cannot cure."

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson

Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE AINSLEE MAGAZINE COMPANY

"The Randalls are well known, suh," interrupted Moreau, with delicate deference, which went to the point of refilling the other's glass—"the Randall, I presume, suh, who so distinguished himself at the defense of the Alamo?" This was stated as a known fact rather than a chance shot, which in reality it was.

"My brother, suh," gravely replied the planter, tapping his ample breast as if in order to convey the sentiment that the same noble spark of heroism smoldered therein, awaiting but a fitting opportunity of burning its owner's name on the immutable pages of history. "Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war," he added oracularly, instinctively reaching for his glass, "and it was my fortune to stay at home and look after the plantation while my brother had it out with the Mexicans. If the Randalls are well known, suh, it is not through me. My yearly trip to New Orleans is the extent of my traveling, and my children, suh, have the felicity to regard me as the most guileless creation that the Almighty ever turned out. Bless their innocent hearts! They never suspect what a thoroughpaced man of the world I am. Why, suh, the advice they give me when I start out on these trips would cover the late Lord Chesterfield with confusion, suh. They warn me especially against gambling. My son Tom, you know, is just at that age when he thinks his father an amateur in sin, suh, and, according to him, the river is a paradise foh pirates"—

"Well, I don't think he is far wrong," interrupted Moreau, idly shuffling the cards. "Naturally, this is the greatest waterway in the world. Did yoh ever think of the wealth that passes down here from St. Louis to New Orleans, the fortunes that are lost and won?"

"Every one gambles on the Mississippi, suh, foh here the ladies—my compliments to them—must temporarily yield dominion. And of co'se, as a thoroughpaced man of the world, suh, and one who has lived on the river foh over fifty years, I recognize that yoh professional gamblers are an institution; but, bless me, I don't take my son Tom's view of them. They gamble foh a living, yes, but I believe they do so honestly, as yoh or I. We are a gambling nation, suh, foh we are young, red blooded and prosperous, but our country is incapable of giving birth to a man who deals off the bottom of the pack, who is afraid to meet fortune eye to eye. Yoh agree with me, suh?"

"As a fellow patriot, yes—as a sane man, no," replied the other, the satiric gleam again smoldering in the dead slag of his eyes. "Yoh have yet to be picked by a brace of these river vultures—they generally travel in pairs—but as a man of the world, of co'se, yoh would instantly recognize them."

"Of co'se, suh," heartily agreed the other. "Aside from all else, yoh professional gambler may be remarked foh his lavish display of diamonds."

"Yoh pardon, suh, but not always. I calculate that as a man of the world yoh have heard of Cameo Kirby?" smiled Moreau, again paying attention to his companion's glass.

"Kirby? That's an old and honored name in Plaquemine, suh," replied Mr. Randall, opening his coat and fanning inflamed cheeks with his huge slouch hat. "Kirby was my neighbor, suh, and I knew his folks well. I had the honor to be of some slight assistance when he went under during the panic years. Crops failed, banks went to smash, but yoh remember, I reckon. Well, suh, Mr. Kirby's son, Eugene, came home from school to find his poh father dead and a bankrupt—everything swept away. That was a hard homecoming, suh. Very sad case. I have often wondered what became of the boy, foh he had all his father's pride and refused to let me exert my privilege of an old neighbor and friend. That was twenty years ago, and since then I have heard in a roundabout way that he had become wild, drifted in with bad companions and taken to the river for a livelihood. In fact, become a common gambler. But of co'se I don't believe it, for no Kirby could ever do that, suh—fall so low. Yet the name is uncommon. Have you ever met this gentleman of whom you spoke?"

"Not socially, suh," replied the other dryly. "I calculate he is no relative of the folks you mentioned, foh his reputation, suh, is the worst on the river; known from New Orleans to St. Louis and back again. He and his side partner, suh—a dam carpetbagging Yankee by the name of Bunce—are the most reckless characters on the river. It is scum like them, suh, who give our fair Mississippi her evil name. Yoh speak of no man dealing off the bottom of the pack. Why, suh, I assure yoh on my honor they're so crooked they have to sleep in a roundhouse. I merely mentioned Kirby's name because of the fact that, man of the world as you are, suh, you would never pick him foh a professional gambler. Never wore a diamond in his life. The cameo is his favorite stone, foh they say it once saved his worthless life, and from it he gets his name, suh. But shall we continue the game? I am still five hundred yoh master, and we have foh hours to kill befoh we make yoh landing."

Cured His Rheumatism In Three Weeks.

James LeB. Johnstone, a prominent member of the Citizen's Band, of Chatham, writes:

"I contracted Rheumatism by exposure, five years ago, and was ailing for two months and in great pain all the time. I got Father Morriscy's No. 7 Tablets and took them for about three weeks, when the Rheumatism all left me and I have had no return of the pains since."

Father Morriscy's "No. 7" Tablets have cured thousands of this terribly painful disease.

Rheumatism is generally brought on by exposure, but is really caused by Uric Acid in the blood. This Uric Acid is an irritating poison, formed from the waste matter of the body. The kidneys should remove it, but when they fail it poisons the blood, and, settling in the joints, causes Rheumatism.

"No. 7" Tablets clear out the clogged-up Kidneys and stimulate them to perform their task of filtering the Uric Acid out of the blood. When this is done the Rheumatism simply and naturally vanishes.

"No 7" Tablets cost 50c. At your dealer's. 28

Memory Resents Distrust.

I remember telling the bishop of Ripon that I envied him his splendid memory. "I seem to remember a thing quite well," I told him, "then I get frightened."

The bishop said: "That's the worst thing you can do. Memory is a very delicate organ and resents distrust."—Ellen Terry in McClure's Magazine.

Not Our Words

Dr A. P. Grinnell, dean of the Medical Department of the University of Vermont, put on paper what he had said shortly before in a public address:—

"I wanted to say that 80 per cent of all men living at age 45 were prosperous, contented and more or less successful in business, well established in whatever pursuit they were following, and were receiving an income in excess of their expenditures, and therefore, were laying up money and were independent.

Now it is a well established fact that 50 per cent all men living at age 45 live to be 65, and at this time I find only 3 per cent of these persons are independent or self-sustaining. In other words, about 97 out of every hundred at age 65 are dependent upon some relatives, friends, the town, or some charitable institution for a part at least of their daily subsistence.

These figures are exceedingly startling and I am free to admit have very seriously impressed me with the necessity of men, in professional work at least, to take out Life Insurance between the ages of 25 and 50 as a safeguard against possible disaster which may overtake us a little later in life.

I am sure no stronger argument than the above can be made to convince men of my profession, and equally lawyers and clergymen, of the necessity of the preparation for the future which Life Insurance guarantees."

There is no safer, surer, or better way to make provision for your declining years than by securing one of the guaranteed income policies of

BIG LOSS BY MIDNIGHT FIRE AT THE OLD BRIDGE WORKS

Large Part of Structure Entirely Destroyed—Firemen Saved Adjacent Buildings

In what proved to be a most disastrous fire at midnight the greater portion of the premises commonly known as the old bridge works, one carload of canoes, several C. P. R. freight cars, three automobiles, some twenty or more boat houses and in many cases the contents were destroyed and while the actual figures cannot be ascertained at present, the loss will run into many thousands of dollars.

The building in which the fire started was situated along the water front and extended practically from Dalhousie to Sherbrooke street. How the blaze originated is a mystery.

INSURANCE $10,000.

Louis Houedry, who occupied that part of the building entirely destroyed and used it for the carrying on of his pea business, stated to the Review to-day that he had insurance to the extent of $10,000. Another policy for $8000 he allowed to expire, he said, on May 1st, of this year.

LOSS OF $1,000.

The Canadian Canoe Co., which lost the carload of twenty canoes and skiffs, which were to be shipped to the west, will lose about $1,000, there being no insurance.

The owners of the boat houses and the contents are due for considerable sympathy. Their misfortune coming as it does at this particular season of tthe year, makes it all the harder to bear.

Two of the autos destroyed were the property of R. Hicks and F. W. Dean. A machine belonging to Arthur Rogers was saved as was also the car used for a couple of seasons on the Chemong route.

BUILDING DOOMED.

The fire department received the alarm from box 18 and a telephone call shortly after twelve o'clock and on the arrival at the fire the southern part of the building was a mass of flames. It would instantly be seen that the structure was doomed and while giving it some attention the fire chief gave orders to protect the nearby factory of the Canadian Canoe Co. and the warehouse of the Kinnear Co. At the same time too a line of hose was turned on the large quantity of lumber adjacent to the canoe factory.

As a result of this work, which was, however, considerably handicapped by somewhat unusually low pressure, these properties were saved, only some window panes at the rear of the factory being broken. A breeze from the west fanned the scorching hot flames and in a very short time what had been a substantial frame building, was a heap of burning embers.

A large portion of the northern part of the premises had been operated as the George street roller ink, but a fire wall had much to do with the saving of it, only the roof and some of the interior being damaged. Just north of this again was used as a storehouse by the Peterborough Machine Company and contained among other goods a quantity of gasoline.

GOOD WORK.

The general expression of opinion by the large number of spectators was that the fire was handled in an effective manner by the fire chief and his men. Added to this is the statement of Mr. Brownscombe, of the canoe company, that the company is loud in its praise of the work accomplished by the department.

The fire was a brilliant spectacle and attracted a large crowd. That part of the building destroyed was entirely of wood fo a most inflammable character.

It was the proposed site of the Jules Motor Company factory, but it is learned to-day that other locations are being inspected and that some announcement will be made in the near future.

$15 RAISED FOR THE FUND

Arrangements Made to Have the Dragging Work Started

Enough money had been received by 2 o'clock this afternoon for the fund to employ a man to drag the river for the body of little Eddie Taylor. At 2 o'clock yesterday the fund amounted to $6.50. To-day at 2 o'clock it amounted to exactly $15—the amount believed to be necessary. Arrangements were made today to have the work started immediately of dragging the river, and it is hoped that in a day or two it will be recovered, thanks to the generosity of kindly hearted Peterborough citizens.

COUNCIL WILL BE ASKED TO RECONSIDER THEIR ACTION REGARDING THE COMMISSIONER

A Strong Resolution From Meeting of Manufacturers, Retail Merchants and Professional Men

We, the manufacturers, members of the Retail Merchants' Association and members of professions of the city of Peterborough, having taken into consideration the action of the City Council, in respect to the office of the industrial commissioner, and after considering the importance of this office, and the services performed during the past year, by the present incumbent deem it advisable that our views concerning these matters be presented to the City Council, and

Therefore be it resolved that we are strongly of the opinion that it is in the best interests of the city of Peterborough that the office of the industrial commissioner be continued, and that the services of the present officer be retained for at least another year, and

Be it further resolved that a committee consisting of the following names: W. H. Denham, Andrew McFarlane, Thomas Barrie, J. J. Turner, jr.; D. O'Connell, Ryerson Ritchie, E. G. Patterson, E. A. Peck, T. F. Matthews, Dr. Greer, Walter Oke, J. H. Connal, G. A. Gillespie, V. Eastwood, G. C. Wainwright, B. F. Ackerman, W. E. Conway, R. G. Kingan, James English, A. W. Cressman, L. A. Turner, James Kendry, William Harthstone, G. Walter Greene, A. E. Coulthard, Mr. Atwood, J. Beyette and James Hamilton, be appointed to interview the members of the City Council for the purpose of discussing the affairs of the industrial commissioner's office generally, and to represent to that body the wishes of this meeting, and to urge upon the members thereof the advisability of retaining the services of the present commissioner in the office for at least another year, and

Be it further resolved that Mr. W. H. Denham be appointed to the position of convener of the committee, and that he be requested to arrange with the City Council a meeting between representatives of that body, the members of the above-named committee, and such other representative citizens as the City Council may think proper, and whereat the views of this meeting may be presented and efforts made to have the present officer retained in office, and harmonious relationship established between the members of the City Council and the office of the industrial commissioner.

The resolution given above was unanimously endorsed at a meeting of some forty representative citizens at the City Council chamber last night. There were prominent manufacturers, retail merchants and professional men present, and the chairman of the evening was Mr. D. O'Connell, he consenting to act in that capacity at the request of the meeting.

The object of the meeting was to give representative citizens the opportunity of expressing their views regarding the office of industrial commissioner, and, if possible, effect some solution of the situation, which was brought about by the recent action of the City Council.

It was Mr. E. A. Peck who suggested the appointment of a committee and this suggestion found immediate favor.

Mr. O'Connell explained the reason of the meeting being called, and during his remarks said that in everything the industrial commissioner had done he had acted under the committee which had appointed him. If a new man was to be put in the office it meant that a large part of the ground work accomplished by Mr. Duggan would be lost.

Later on in the evening Mr. O'Connell explained that the industrial commissioner received $3,000 a year, and that another $1,000 was for office expenses.

EX-ALD. TURNER.

As chairman of the Power Committee of the City Council last year, ex-Alderman Turner asked that he be given the opportunity to make a few remarks. He explained his connection with the power question, and of how he had been in touch with Mr. Duggan. As chairman of the committee, he was much interested in the matter of power for Peterborough, but recognized the fact of the question being a large one, and as such, demanded time and money. In 1909 one power proposition before the council failed to materialize. After Mr. Duggan came he asked for his co-operation, and this was cheerfully given.

"I feel that I am entitled to a share of the responsibility in this matter, as it was I who asked Mr. Duggan to give his efforts towards the power question," said Mr. Turner.

The speaker didn't think that Mr. Duggan had betrayed the confidence of the Council, and he himself had been more than delighted when he read the power report in the press.

He could conscientiously say that the commissioner was a hard-working, painstaking and efficient official of the city, and he thought that he should be given a chance to complete his work. If in three or four years results were not satisfactory, then he could be asked to resign. So far, he believed the money to have been well spent, and that the meeting should express their wish that Mr. Duggan be retained.

W. H. DENHAM.

Mr. W. H. Denham pointed out that Mr. Duggan, when appointed by the committee, had been requested to do three things. The first was to secure industries; the second to take such steps as would tend toward the betterment of the city generally, and the third to look up the power question and secure all the information possible.

"Any ignoring that he has done was done in the discharge of his duty," said Mr. Denham.

There were many good men in the City Council, he held, but the Council had gradually got the idea that they were a self-constituted body to direct the affairs of the city in their own ideas, and were not following out the wishes of the people. They had constituted themselves rulers instead of servants. All requests from responsible bodies of the city for the retention of Mr. Duggan had been ignored by the Council. Several of the aldermen who had made statements when the Council took action were absolutely ignorant of the work done by Mr. Duggan. When they said that he was given $3,000 to look over a few letters they were entirely wrong. Anyone who so desired could have inspected his vast amount of correspondence at the office, and learn of what had been and was being done. Mr. Denham held that the City Council had no right to pass judgment the other night without first getting information, and that they should be asked to reconsider the matter. Even assuming that the commissioner had made a mistake, he should not be dismissed for that. Every man made mistakes.

THOS. BARRIE.

Thos. Barrie, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, said that a large number of merchants had contributed toward the upkeep of the office, and it was felt that the money would be wasted if Mr. Duggan was not retained for another year. The power report had been secured, and the people were given the information. Such might not have been the case had the Council obtained the report. Mr. Barrie felt that the Council should be asked to reconsider their action.

E. G. PATTERSON.

E. G. Patterson said he believed that the money given for the office had been well spent, and the office ought to be continued this year. Even with one industry a year, the money would be well spent. He believed the Council had acted unwisely, and not in the best interests of Peterborough, but hoped they would reconsider the matter and re-employ Mr. Duggan.

RYERSON RITCHIE.

"The whole spirit of the office is the accomplishment of results," said Mr. Ryerson Ritchie. He hoped that nothing would be done which would reflect on the fairmindedness of the city. For such a position as the office of industrial commissioner, a special course of training was necessary. He believed exceedingly good service had been given the city by Mr. Duggan. A man who would give faithful service should be treated in a faithful manner by the city.

E. A. COULTHARD.

Mr. E. A. Coulthard held that it wasn't reasonable to expect very much in one year. The citizens had been given the information in the report from the Hydro-Electric Commission. If Peterborough was to go ahead, the city must have power.

E. A. PECK.

"We all agree on some things," said Mr. E. A. Peck, "and one is that if Peterborough is to progress we must reach out and secure industries. Another is that we cannot expect to get industries unless we spend time and money on this work. It is not possible for a committee of business men to do that work so that it is necessary to get one man." He held that as Mr. Duggan had commenced with the work he was the man for the office.

Mr. Peck pointed out that it was necessary for Mr. Duggan to be in harmonious relationship with the Council in order to carry out any undertaking.

He proposed that a committee be appointed to wait upon the Council and ask for the reconsideration of the question. Then, too, some way should be devised for controlling the duties of the commissioner. The Council or its committee could map out the work for him.

Mr. Peck's solution of the question was endorsed by the speakers who followed, and who were Messrs. G. W. Hatton, Andrew MacFarland, E. L. Goodwill, W. H. Denham, Ryerson Ritchie, S. T. Medd, and W. H. Munro, and after some further discussion the resolution noted above was framed by Mr. O'Connell and signed by everyone present.

While taking the offertory at a Lenten service, at St. Lawrence's church, Ilford, George Mulby, a carman, fell dead in a pew.

AN OUTFIELDER WITH BUT ONE ARM

He is Some Pitcher Too and Can Also Bat

Mercer University at Macon, Ga., has a regular player on its baseball team, probably the only one-armed man playing college ball to-day. He is Bill White, a youngster of twenty years, who hails from Atlanta. He tried for a place as pitcher, and while he can pitch good ball and field his position, three other men have the call, and it is probable that he will not be seen in the box this season except under unusual circumstances.

As an outfielder, however, White has made his place. He catches, throws and bats with his left hand, the only one he has, but that seems to have steel fibres and an uncanny dexterity. He uses a light, short bat, and while he has not had a chance to show his skill in a regular game, extra base hits are not unusual for him in the practice games between the Mercer varsity and scrubs. Only last week he laced out a home run.

White's pose at the bat is not unlike that of those who have two arms. The only appreciable difference is that he stands closer than the others and takes a longer swing. And it is not because of sentiment on the part of the Mercer varsity pitchers or the Mercer coach that he slams the ball to the far corners of the lot.

THE MAT

Aleksander Stephanoff, a giant Bulgarian, weighing 250 and standing six feet three inches in his athletic togs, is a new Richmond in the wrestling field, being decidedly anxious according to his countryman, Pauko Kubadinoff, to take on Zbyszko or any of the mammoths now engaging the attention of the followers of the grappling game.

Kubadinoff asserted that Stephanoff had with him letters of introduction to the well-known linguist and promoter, Johnny Dunn, and marveled because he had been in the country for four days and was unable to locate the wrestling impressario. He added that he would in all likelihood send out a C.Q.D. call for Dunn, whom he says he has slated for the managerial position of his protege.

When Kubadinoff was asked if his man was a wrestler he resented the accusation and answered that he was a Bulgarian. Further questioning developed that Stephanoff was not a Graeco Roman exponent, but always a Bulgarian, as the men of his race fought the Greeks always. He further asserted that the letter to Dunn attested that the latter was well versed in the language of his protege and that no others need apply for the position to look up the mat contests of Stephanoff, who has taken the measure of the best men on the continent at his game.

JAPS FIND IT DIFFICULT TO HIT

Says Captain of Tokio Baseball Team

Chicago, May 10.—Captain Sutikichi Matsuda, of the Waseda University baseball team of Tokio, says all Japan has become enthusiastic over the game.

"The game of baseball is the gift of the United States to Japan," said Matsuda. "Only a few years ago we knew nothing of this honorable game. Now the little ones in the streets of Tokio play it. The excitement which attends a game of baseball with us is so great that for four years now there have been no contests between the team of Waseda and the team of Kelo, her rival in Tokio.

"Four years ago we had planned a series of three games with Kelo. They won the first game. Waseda won the second. As the time for the third contest came near excitement among the students was growing stronger and stronger. Students of Waseda were ready to do battle with students of Kelo. Finally our president decided that the game must not take place, lest the students should become more excited and somebody be killed.

"We find that the most difficult thing to learn in baseball is the batting."

FOOTBALL

THE RING

Every now and then some athlete come forward with a new or novel method of training in his special line of athletic endeavor. The latest unique plan comes from Sammy Trott, the Columbus lightweight, who twice appeared in the ring at Windsor during the season just closed. Sammy's new manner in which to condition himself is horseback riding.

He is perhaps the first fighter who has taken up this method of training and is firm in his belief that it is just as beneficial as road work. Every morning when training for a battle he can be seen on the road leading out of Columbus taking long rides. He returns to his gymnasium greatly refreshed and starts his indoor work.

Y.M.C.A. SPORTS

The draw for the first round of the Y.M.C.A. tennis tournament will take place Monday night, May 15th, when those who intend to take part in this tournament are requested to hand in their names to the secretary, Sandford Hall before that date. The courts are in first class condition and quite a large number of members are now taking advantage of the fine weather, and also to get in a few new strokes.

There was some crowd of boys at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, it being the "Y" boys' afternoon, when baseball and athletics were indulged in. The athletic events will open next Tuesday afternoon, and will continue from May 16th, until June 22nd. The events will be in two classes, juniors, 12 to 14; senior 14 to 17, and will be contested every Tuesday night.

A business boys' baseball team was organized last night, and is open to play games with teams whose average age does not exceed 14 years.

Friday night the intermediate leaders and basketball team will hold their first annual banquet.

CENTRAL JUNIORS TOOK FIRST GAME

Defeated East City Nine by Score of 14-10

The junior series of the Public School Baseball League opened on the oval last evening when the Centrals beat East City 14-10.

The first part of the game was fast and errorless, no one scoring until the third innings. East City was ahead for a time, but a series of errors allowed a number of the Centrals to tally.

The East City team was practically the same as that which played Central's seniors Monday night. They are on an average smaller than the Central juniors and are a plucky bunch though they have suffered a couple of defeats.

The vim with which the kiddies fielded the ball and put it over to first made it a task to get a base on an infield clout. The East City first baseman, though small, was sure to handle anything coming his way.

The batteries were:—Centrals, Cavanagh and Soden; East City, Anderson Phillips and Huycke.

MEETING OF WATER COMMISSIONERS

M.H.O. Reported City Water to be in Pure Condition

At the meeting of the Water Commissioners yesterday at 4.30 p.m. the following were present: T. F. Matthews, chairman; W. H. Hill, W. H. Moore, and the superintendent of waterworks, Mr. W. Henderson.

There were a large number of communications.

E. H. D. Hall, the city solicitor, wrote to inquire whether the commissioners could use part of the current revenue to meet the expenses of some work in connection with the new dam. No action was taken in the matter.

A letter was read from the William Hamilton Company, in which they claimed a balance of $388.41 on account of their contract.

Reports were submitted by the collector of the receipts for the first quarter.

The city clerk wrote the commissioners, asking about the renewal of the contract for a supply of water for public purposes.

W. H. Moore moved that a reply be sent that the commissioners will supply water for all public purposes except hydrants.

GOOD WATER.

The medical health officer reported that his examination of the drinking water for the month showed it to be in a perfectly sanitary and pure condition.

In regard to the installation of new water meters at the Canadian General and the Normal School, Mr. Henderson stated that the meters, having been received, he was having them installed.

A letter was read from the R. B. Rice & Company in regard to the purchasing of the property known as the "Glen Morrison." The secretary was instructed to reply that the commissioners are not interested in the proposition.

A petition was received from residents on Sutherland street, asking for a two-inch main 200 feet west from Rogers street, at a cost of $142. It will be put in.

A four-inch main will also be installed on Victoria avenue, from Reid street to Dixon street.

A request was received from Mrs. T. E. Parker, of Parker's Dye Works, asking for a three-quarter-inch pipe to be put in her shop. The superintendent was instructed to comply with the request.

The water service will be removed from the T. A. Rehill property on Wolfe street as services have been abandoned. A water main will be laid along Cambridge street, leading to the Bonner-Worth factory.

The meter at the old Commercial hotel will be removed, and the water supply to the different consumers will be given at the usual tariff rates.

The Stoney Lake Navigation Company have commenced their trips for the season. On reference to their advertisement it will be seen that they will run Monday, Thursday and Saturday until further notice. 107 2d

THE POOR RAT

It is not often that one hears of one of the rat species starving to death, yet such seems to have been the fate of one rodent, which was locked in a little back room of an office on George street. Tiny pieces of chips strewn on the floor in the vicinity of the exit door testify to the frantic efforts of Mr. Rat to escape by biting his way through the door wood. For a long time previous to the discovery of the dead rodent the employes of the office had been troubled with a terrible stench, which seemed to emanate from the room but not until this morning was the cold body of the little animal found to have been its origin. A funny thing about it was that the rat did not appear in the least shrunken or emaciated, but on the contrary was in prime bodily condition. The office, it is understood, is to undergo thorough fumigation, a much needed operation.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color, and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys, and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. ARGUMENTS ON IMMIGRATION

Brought Out in Debate at St. James' Epworth League

Below will be found some of the arguments advanced by these taking part in the debate, "Resolved that the government should not encourage immigration," which was given at the meeting Monday night of the Epworth League of St. James' Methodist church. The judges were Miss Leader and Messrs. Moss and Bedworth. The negative won by one point.

The affirmative held that as we in Canada were a building nation, we should build in righteousness, discarding all elements that tended to the lowering of our national life, for the sake of obtaining a population, to properly develop the resources of our vast Dominion. We should not open all our gates to all who came, yet at the same time those who were willing to work to uphold the honor of our country should be welcomed. Immigration was a heavy burden on all charitable institutions. The immigrants underbid the labor market, increase the cost of government, raise important and vexatious municipal questions and strain charitable institutions to the uttermost. We could not have too much immigration of the proper kind, but should not have any of the wrong kind.

The negative contended that with the undeveloped resources the country required the active efforts of the government to bring in the needed assistance, in labor and capital. Moreover the nations of the world were coming to Canada and could not be kept out. Canada was God's country first of all.

BEAUTIFUL EYES

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes, and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost if the eye brows are thin and scanty; and the lashes are short and lifeless. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. A two weeks' treatment will bring beauty to your eyes that you have never before possessed. By mail, prepaid, in opal boxes, on receipt of price, fifty cents. B. V. GREATEST SHOW IN THE WORLD

Mr. Frank Lacelles Tells of the Organization of the Grand Pageant at Crystal Palace.

A colossal task is nearing completion at the Crystal Palace, London. Within a space of 250 acres the whole of the British Empire is being represented by hundreds of buildings, scenery, and exhibits. The Festival of Empire, as the great exhibition which will be opened from May to October, has been called, is the most ambitious effort which has ever been made to demonstrate to us the vastness and possibilities of our overseas dominions. In addition there will be a great pageant, in which 15,000 performers will take part, illustrating the Empire's history and development from the very earliest down to the present time. Our colonies have subscribed thousands of pounds towards the expenses, and thousands of men have been employed on a patriotic project in every way worthy of the Coronation year of His Majesty King George V.

"The public," said Mr. Frank Lascelles, Master of the Festival—who is famed all the world over for the magnificence of the pageants he has organized—to Tit-Bits the other day, "have little idea of the enormous work which has been involved in producing this great Festival of Empire. Our colonies have been ransacked for ideas and for many months past we have been co-operating with the various colonial Governments in order to make the Festival thoroughly representative in every way. And it is really surprising how people in this country have entered into the idea with zest and enthusiasm. Take the 15,000 amateur performers, for instance, who are to take part in the great pageant. Not only are they buying their costumes and paying for their railway fares during the run of the Festival, but they are willingly bearing the expenses entailed by six or seven weeks' rehearsals. It is a splendid illustration, is it not, of the patriotism which has been instilled by this great idea?"

Amazing Figures.

And the gigantic scale and thoroughness with which this pageant is being carried out is strikingly illustrated by the facts and figures which Mr. Lascelles kindly provided. An ampitheatre for 10,000 spectators has been erected, and for considerably over a year hundreds of skilled workmen have been engaged in preparing costumes and properties; and in every case the utmost care has been taken to ensure historical correctness, even to the minutest details. By loan and purchase Mr. Lascelles has secured twenty historical State coaches, including one which belonged to Queen Victoria, and another which was the property of Napoleon III. A thousand horses and cattle, 400 complete suits of armour, nearly 7,000 weapons, and close upon 10,000 helmets and shields—these are a few of the properties which will be used during the great pageant of the Festival of Empire.

"But, of course," said Mr. Lascelles, "whilst the pageant is one of the central features of the Festival it by no means stands alone. In the grounds there will be some 300 buildings, ranging from the $200,000 reproduction of the Parliament Buildings of Ottawa, Canada, to decorative kiosks. All the colonial buildings will be exact reproductions of the Parliament Houses of the respective colonies, and in each case will be two-thirds of the size of the originals. Altogether these various Government buildings cost well over $500,000, and I might mention that Canada alone is spending no less than $350,000 on the various projects for representing that vast colony at the Crystal Palace.

The All-Red Route.

"What is the total cost? Well, it is difficult to say at the present time. The Committee of the Festival of Empire has spent over $1,500,000 already, and this is quite apart from the money expended by the various colonies themselves."

"In the first place," said Mr. Lascelles, "we are paying close upon 6,000 workpeople engaged on the preparations for the Festival. Then there is some $150,000 worth of machinery, and $300,000 expended on the erection of a mile and a half of electric railway, which we have termed the All-Red Route, and which will run through the various scenes of the Empire, as depicted in the grounds of the Crystal Palace. A two-minute service will be maintained throughout the day by ten cars, and on each train guides will explain details and objects of interest en route as the train takes the visitors on a tour embracing Newfoundland, Canada, Jamaica, Malay States, India, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa.

Diamonds Galore.

"Perhaps one of the most interesting facts regarding the realistic representation of South Africa on the All-Red Route is that, at a cost of many thousands of pounds, visitors will be able to see gold and diamond mines in full operation. The De Beers Company are spending $10,000 on the representation of a South African diamond mine, and, I might mention, are actually showing $10,000,000 worth of real diamonds."

"And what of the inside of the Palace, Mr. Lascelles?"

"Ah! that will be no less interesting, for we intend to hold an All-British Exhibition. Six hundred stands are being erected, and there will be an unrivalled collection of British arts and industries. By the way, I might mention that one of the largest statues in the world will be erected in the centre of the Crystal Palace terrace—namely, a statue of the King 60ft. high, dominating, as it were, His Majesty's Empire in miniature."

London will be the [illegible] city of the world this year, and it is safe to affirm that millions of visitors will find their way to the Crystal Palace to witness the wonders of this great Festival of Empire.

ARCHBISHOP McAVEY DIES

But Archbishop McEvay seemed destined to follow in the wake of his predecessor in Toronto, for when the then Bishop O'Connor was called from London to the larger diocese in Toronto, Father McEvay was elevated to the Bishopric of London. On the 22nd May, 1908, his further elevation to the Toronto diocese was announced by Bishop Dowling of Hamilton, the ex-senior bishop of the Province of Canada. Archbishop McEvay was the sixth in the episcopal succession to the Toronto see, the first appointment being that of the Right Reverend Michael Power in 1841.

Archbishop McEvay was of a striking and forceful personality. He carried the dignity of his high office well. A profound scholar and clear thinker, he was nevertheless just and firm. Popular with all classes, his advent to Toronto was hailed with much pleasure, and among a wide circle his face will be missed.

Among the different buildings in connection with his parochial work that have been erected at the instrumentality of Archbishop McEvay, are:

Extensions to Our Lady of Lourdes and archbishop's palace, Earl street.

St. Anthony's Church, formerly part of St. Helen's parish.

New church for St. Helen's parish, corner of Lansdowne avenue and Dundas street.

Extension to St. Patrick's Church, McCaul street.

St. Cecilia's Church, West Toronto, (new).

Theological seminary, erected [illegible] munificence of Eugene O'Keefe, at Blantyre Park, Kingston road.

St. Anne's parish, created out of St. Joseph's parish.

The King stood sponsor in person for the infant son of Lord and Lady Crewe, who was recently christened in the Chapel Royal, St. James' Palace.

A silver penny of the Saxon King Offa, bearing the inscription "Offa Rex," was recently found near Hitchin by Mr. G. J. Buller, a local anthropologist.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES EXPLAINED BY DR. SAMSON

How Provision for Old Age May be Made.

Although only a few were present at the lecture on Canadian Government Annuities, by Dr. Sampson, lecturer in chief for the Canadian Government in the Collegiate assembly hall last night, still the meeting was a success. Those who were present showed a deep interest in the words of the speaker, and after Dr. Sampson had explained the annuity plan he launched out into a real elevating discourse on ambition and kindred topics which was a treat in itself. The doctor is a forceful speaker, and his extensive travels and wide experience eminently fit him to be in the philanthrophic occupation at which he is at present engaged.

Dr. Sampson directed the attention of the audience last evening to the Government Annuities Act of 1908, under which provision may be made by every man, woman and child domiciled in Canada against want or poverty, and for that happiness which comes with the removal of the haunting fear of destitution in old age.

All that is necessary to do in order to make this provision is to deposit from time to time in the nearest Postoffice savings bank, or if it is preferred to remit directly to the department at Ottawa, any amounts that you may set aside for the purpose, which amounts will be placed to your credit with compound interest at 4 per cent per annum and such an annuity as these amounts will purchase at the date fixed for the annuity to begin will be paid to you so long as you live.

There are two plans under which annuities may be contracted, called Plans A. and B. Under plan A in the event of death before the first payment of the annuity falls due the total amount which the annuitant has paid in with 3 per cent compound interest will be refunded to his or her legal representatives.

Under Plan B., where the same annuity is obtainable for small payments there will be no return in the event of death before the annuity becomes due.

Dr. Sampson in commencing his lecture said that he considered he was speaking on a subject of the most intense interest to every person. One of the most important questions with every person was where will I go when I am dead, and the other was what will I do when I am old. Ninety five out of every hundred men he remarked, would, when they were 60 years of age be toiling for their daily bread. Ninety-two men out of every hundred have lost all they had and had to begin life all over again. Thousands of Canadians went to the poorhouse yearly in a land where there should never be a poorhouse.

Dr. Sampson described the conditions of the English pension fund and compared it with the advantages of the annuity system. Seven hundred and twenty-eight thousand old men and women in England asked for a pension the first year the pension system was introduced.

If a Canadian boy 16 years of age would save the price of a cigar a day for a year, and put it into the annuity fund with the Government, and never touch it again, he would, when he became seventy years of age, come into an annuity of $183 a year for the balance of his natural life.

No medical examination was required. Passbooks for the convenience of depositors of small amounts on the weekly plan would be supplied by the postmaster or any money order office.

The Canadian Government has issued a little booklet entitled "Comfort and Happiness in Old Age," one passage of which reads, "If Canada is not ultimately to face the same conditions as exist in England and as many other European countries, the people of small income must make definite provision for old age. Let every man, woman and child remember that a few cents a week will provide with absolute certainty for an eventide of comfort and happiness.

At the conclusion of the lecture Mr. J. C Shook moved a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was seconded by H. R. H. Kenner.

LOCAL MEMBERS GO STAR GAZING

Paid a Pleasant Visit to Home of Dr. Marsh Last Night

Last evening a party of the members of the local branch of the Astronomical Society, paid a visit to the secretary, Dr Marsh at Springville, making the trip in the Rutherford-Grimes auto carryall, which took the many hills sturdily, and proved in every way, with Mr. Grimes at the wheel, a capable conveyance.

The evening was spent in viewing the moon, planets and stars, accompanied by explanations from Dr. Marsh, who never tires of giving information and assistance.

Before coming away, the party were entertained at lunch, Mrs. Marsh, and Miss Mary Marsh taking care of the visitors.

While the state of the sky was not of the best for observations, a fairly good look was had at our old friend the moon. Same old moon that looked down on Noah, floating around in the ark, and on Christopher Columbus discovering America. Still doing business at the old stand, an example of fidelity and probity. It seemed to the Review man, from what he said, that the moon needs improving. There are a lot of things lying around loose. The people seem to have done a heap of work but need to have time to tidy up a bit. There was plenty of saucer like spots which Dr. Marsh said were the craters of extinct volcanoes. If so, the streets and bridges committee need to get busy and level things up a bit. The places noted looked exactly like a custard pie after the cat has stepped in it. Those who seemed to be up in astronomy talked about the moon being "half-full and "nearly full" as if the orb of the sky had bibulous tendencies, and it sounded disrespectful to say the least.

Jupiter with four of his moons was a beautiful object, and those squinting through the scope had a look at Venus, doing her best to shed a light on the township of Emily. Venus was rather not up to the mark, due, Dr. Marsh explained, to refraction or, some other bothersome condition. Dr. Marsh's apologies were accepted.

Coming home the party were treated to a view of the bridge works fire, from the hills outside the city, and it made a striking and appalling glare, appearing as if all of the city were being destroyed.

Are They Comfortable ?

Many persons have difficulty in keeping their Spectacles from slipping down upon the nose and hurting the ears. We are fitting beautiful Spectacles of new form, that are the acme of comfort, and owing to the formation of the inconspicuous solid Gold Pads at the side of the nose, there is no marking of the nose crest or cutting behind the ears, and then too, they will not slip down. Optical Institute patrons who use them remark "That is the very kind of spectacles I have been looking for." A lady remarked "I would not do without those spectacles for $100.

PARLIAMENT WILL ADJOURN ON MAY 23 FOR TWO MONTHS

Sir Wilfrid Makes Announcement in the House—Supply to be voted Until Sept. 1—Bank Affairs.

Ottawa, May 11.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier announced in the Commons yesterday that Parliament would adjourn from May 23 to July 18. The fact that he had decided upon these dates after consultation with the leader of the Oppostion was stated last week.

The Premier said that ten days ago the leader of the Opposition had drawn the attention of the House to the approaching Imperial Conference and the coronation of the King, and had alluded to certain rumors that he (the Premier) might not go to England for these events. Accordingly Mr. Borden had made three suggestions regarding the course which might be pursued in order to make possible the attendance of the Premier. The first of these was that the House should continue sitting, second, that Parliament should prorogue after completing its business, and third, that there should be an adjournment, the House previously voting sufficient supply to carry over the period of adjournment.

With regard to the second suggestion the Premier said it would be convenient to have the House prorogue with no part of the work undone; however, there still remained work to do.

As to the first suggestion there were two or three precedents. In 1894 Sir John Thompson, while Premier, went to Paris to take part in the negotiations regarding pleagic sealing; in 1897 Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself had gone to England to attend the celebration of the jubilee of Queen Victoria; and again in 1897 he had left the House in session to attend the Imperial Conference.

In each of these cases, said Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the business of the House was practically at an end. This year he had felt somewhat uneasy to leave such a heavy burden on his colleagues; however they had undertaken to take care of the work, and he had, therefore, consented to absent himself, leaving the work to be done in their hands.

With regard to Mr. Borden's third suggestion he agreed that there should be an adjournment in order to allow members to attend the coronation.

The question then arose at what time the House might adjourn. He had thought it might sit until the end of May, but it had been represented to him that there were two holidays during the last week of May, Victoria Day and Ascension Day, so on the whole he considered that it would be well to adjourn on May 23, and meet again on July 18. Meanwhile the House would go on with the session, and try to advance legislation as far as possible until May 23.

There remained the question of supply, said the Premier. After consultation with members on the other side of the House, it had been agreed that money should be voted to carry on until Sept. 1. Some supplies would have to be voted entire, such as the expenses of the coronation contingent, the festival of the Empire, and the annuities to Indians, which are under treaty obligation.

There was an animated discussion over Mr. Paterson's bill providing that clerks three years in the outside customs service could be transferred to the inside service. The Opposition thought that this provision would discriminate against men long in the service, especially if their politics did not suit the Government. There was also a discussion of the salaries of collectors of customs in large cities. Mr. Paterson said the Montreal collectors got $4,500 a year, and that Toronto would soon be advanced to that figure.

RESCUED ON WATER'S BRINK

Insane Woman Saved at Falls, But is Dying.

Was Within a Few Feet of Cataract When Hauled Back.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., May 11.—Mrs. Elizabeth Hartley, an inmate of the Buffalo State Hospital for Insane, is dying at the Memorial Hospital from shock as the result of being rescued from death over the falls late yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Hartley, who was not considered a dangerous patient at the Buffalo Asylum and was allowed entire freedom, came to this city to seek employment. She wandered through the reservation viewing the falls. After thinking the matter over she thought it would be "nice to die in that beautiful water," she said, and waded into the rapids a short distance above the cataract.

Park Policeman Harrington was nearby when the woman entered the water, rushed to the river bank, where pike poles are always in readiness for just such emergencies. Out into the rapids the woman waded until she lost her footing. Then she was swept down stream. She was within fifteen feet of the cataract when Harrington fastened the pike pole into her clothing and hauled her ashore. The woman was then in a semi-conscious condition, and she was rushed to the hospital.

This is only the second time in the history of the falls that a brink rescue has been recorded. The former one was the rescue of Amos Schweitzer of Toronto, who was saved after nearly an hour's fighting.

COMING FROM FRANCE

New York, May 11.—Representatives of the French and Swiss governments who will attend the International Property Conference to be held this month in Washington, D.C., arrived here on board the Provence, of the French line.

Leading the French delegation of three was Mons. Michel Pelleter, Mayor of Trouville. His associates were Mons. George Breton and Mons. George Millard.

The delegates from Switzerland were Mons. Edouard Waelti, Mons. Leon Poinsard, Mons. Freygodet and Mons. A. A. de Elois.

The purpose of the Property Conference is to formulate recommendations whereby patent laws of the different countries may be made uniform.

"I believe that the conference will be productive of practical results," Mons. Pelletier said. "The need of uniform patent laws is manifest, for they would foster commercial relations between the various nations."

MAY MOVE TO LONDON

Bishop O'Connor Mentioned for Possible Promotion

It is announced in Toronto that the successor of the late Archbishop McEvay will be Bishop Fallon, of London, one of the most popular of the prelates of the church in Ontario, and that Bishop O'Connor, of Peterborough, may be removed to the London Bishopric as a distinct promotion. Of course these are speculations at the present date, and it may be some time before the changes are made. The appointment of Bishop O'Connor as successor to Bishop Fallon would be very popular among the people of this diocese, although the loss ehre would be regretted.

U.S. SENATORS ARE MAKING BITTER ATTACKS ON THE PACT

Newspaper Trust at the Bottom of it—Farmers and Manufacturers Unite to Oppose It.

Washington, May 11.—Vicious assaults on the Canadian reciprocity bill marked yesterday's hearing on that measure by the Senate finance committee. Farmers from the border states, fishermen from Gloucester, Mass., manufacturers of wire cloth for papermaking, and manufacturers of book, wrapping and news print paper all poured forth hottest against the bill.

Probably the greatest outburst occurred when former Governor John Strange of Wisconsin introduced, as representing wrapping paper manufacturers and the Boards of Trade of Neenah and Menasha, Wis., addressed the committee. He swerved from criticism of the bill to attack the American Publishers' Association and its related organization, the Associated Press, until finally Senator Penrose asked him to limit his remarks to his specific objection to the bill.

Mr. Strange characterized the bill as a "cowardly" measure and as lacking love of country, and brought forth at the demand of "the greatest trust in the world."

He said that Congress would not be in session yesterday considering the bill "if it had not been for this combination in restraint of trade."

"When a man who occupies an exalted position listened to such demands for fear of failure of re-election, rather than to the welfare of his nation, it is time to stop," he exclaimed. "Why should the Secretary of State be influenced to become an auxiliary to the purchasing department of the newspaper trust of the country?" he asked.

"To what trust do you refer?" enquired Senator Stone.

"The newspaper trust, the most vicious in the world," responded the witness.

"Well, you manufacturers have an association?" suggested Mr. Stone.

"It is only social, like the lawyers," responded Mr. Strange. "It is not to control prices, but is for the purpose of defence."

The witness contended that the "purpose of the alleged newspaper trust was to monopolize news through the incorporated Associated Press."

Judge Charles P. Moore of New York, for the book manufacturers, characterized the measure as "a sterilized variety of reciprocity that really does not reciprocate."

J. T. Carey, president of the International Brotherhood of Paper Workers, and Barnard Bensen of Kalamazoo, Mich., opposed the bill on behalf of paper mill workers.

Guy Cunningham and Thomas J. Carroll of Gloucester, Mass., filed a brief in opposition to the bill on behalf of the fish industry.

Frank W. Cabel of New York, on behalf of the wire cloth manufacturers, told the committee that they would be seriously injured by their patrons, the American paper manufacturers, losing trade.

JUAREZ IS CAPTURED BY THE REBELS; NAVARRO A PRISONER

Fighting is Severe—Madero Says He is Still Willing to Make Peace.

Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, May 11.—This little bullet-riddled city to-day is the provisional capital of Mexico, and Francisco I. Madero, jr., provisional president, and his staff have taken possession after winning the bloodiest battle of the Mexican revolution.

In a corner room of the barracks in which for two days he held out against the fire of the rebels, Gen. Juan Navarro, the federal commander, is a captive, having surrendered yesterday with almost his entire garrison of several hundred men. His face is sunken, his head is bowed, and he does not talk, for the bitter sting of defeat has disheartened him.

In contrast, in another part of the town, is Francisco I. Madero, jr., the conqueror, surrounded by members of his family and his staff, joyous, exultant and flushed with victory; yet ready, he says, to make peace with the Mexican Government if it is disposed to deal frankly and sincerely with the revolutionists, and without such vague promises as "President Diaz's manifesto contains."

All the dead are being buried today. A conservative estimate of physicians as well as of insurrecto leaders who surveyed the fighting puts the federal dead at nearly fifty and the rebel loss at about fifteen, with a total of nearly 250 wounded on both sides.

Gen. Madero, who arrived yesterday afternoon at the corrall where the Federal prisoners are quartered, made an address full of sympathy and encouragement.

"You fought for Gen. Diaz," he said at the conclusion of his speech, "because you had to, because you were a part of that system which we are trying to dissolve. In a few days perhaps peace will be restored. You soon will be free. If the war is to be continued you can have your choice of being paroled or joining the army of liberation. In the meantime we shall treat you as brothers, not as foes."

Orders were being issued by Gen. Pasqual Oriszco all afternoon to guard streets and houses to prevent looting. Gen. Oriszco is said to have shot two men he caught trying to steal.

Gen. Navarro tried about noon yesterday to arrange an armistice, but the rebels would accept nothing except immediate surrender.

The grey-haired general stood in the doorway of the barracks and received Col. Garibaldi. Raoul Madero, a brother of the rebel leader, dashed forward with his gun pointed at Navarro ready to shoot if Garibaldi was hit. Federals and insurrectos alike, however, withheld their fire while the surrender was being arranged.

The federals in their humiliation tore off their visor caps and uniforms and under guard of the rebels walked dejectedly in their underclothing down the street to the corral. They numbered about five hundred. Last night it was reported that 150 of them had taken the oath of allegiance to Gen. Madero and will join his forces.

The amount of ammunition in Jaurez is beyond the expectations of Madero. While he still wants peace, the condition will have to be broader, as he will now be in a position to recruit thousands.

The insurrectos now have two mortars, three machine guns and two field pieces.

A New Newspaper.

Montreal, May 11.—With a weekly newspaper, whose policy it will be to fight for civic and provincial reform and particularly for the autonomy of the city of Montreal, Ald. Geo. Marcil will enter the field of civic journalism on Saturday.

The new member of the fourth estate will be known as "Le Peuple," and will be edited by Mr. F. Segue, of Le Canada.

HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP O'CONNOR, who, it is rumored, may become Bishop of London, in the shift caused by Archbishop McEvay's death.

LEVEE CLINGS TO CHAIRMANSHIP

Will Not Resign From Board Unless Forced

Toronto, May 11.—Although sharply criticized in Judge Winchester's report, Chairman Levee of the Board of Education refuses to resign.

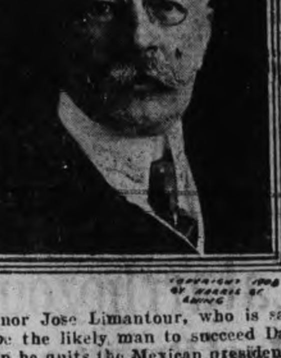
The report, which was read at a special meeting yesterday, was couched in direct language. It stated that in the opinion of his honor, the charges made by Saturday Night had been sustained by the evidence, and, moreover, that promises made by Mr. Levee as to generous melon-cutting operations for the benefit of fortunate holders of Slocum shares were, to say the least, rather more optimistic than past earning records justified. The merits of the medicine itself were not entered into.

After hearing Secretary W. C. Wilkinson read the voluminous report, Trustee Fairbairn was seized with a bright idea. Mr. Levee should resign—very simple solution. Trustee Dr. Noble thought so too, and seconded the motion, which went so far as to propose the instant appointment of a successor. It looked like a landslide for a minute, but the chairman resolutely declined to offer himself for the obsequies. Could he be forced to do so? Nobody knew, save Mr. Levee himself, and he was quite positive that he could not be.

An opinion from the board's solicitor will be asked.

Preparing Hydro Report.

Kingston, May 11.—P. B. Yates, assistant engineer of the Hydro-Electric Commission, is here at the request of Ald. Elliott, chairman of the light, heat and power committee, to make a report on the cost of transfer, etc., in the case if Kingston did business with the commission. Yates is looking over the plant and city generally.



Senor Jose Limantour, who is said to be the likely man to succeed Daiz when he quits the Mexican presidency.

WORKMAN GIVES HIS VIEWS ON IT

Montreal Theologian Says Views Are Orthodox.

Montreal, May 11.—Yesterday afternoon's session in the case of libel brought by Prof. Workman against the Wesleyan Theological College was converted into a series of disquisitions on the Methodist belief. Dr. Workman was at first reluctant to state his views, but on Mr. Justice Weir pointing out that it was essential that he should declare himself on the various subjects touched upon in the allegations brought against him, he consented to reply to the questioning. No admission, however, could be secured from him that the views were at variance with the standards of Methodism.

Cross-questioned as to his creed, he maintained that the virgin birth was not a cardinal doctrine of Methodism and that he could not express an opinion on the matter. It is a question yet to be settled, he said.

He said on the doctrine of the atonement that the sacrifice of Calvary was not a propitiation or expiatory act.

He also said that he was not inclined to regard the portion of Scripture telling of Christ partaking of bread and fish after the resurrection as an allegory.

On the subject of original sin witness declared that children were born in innocence.

Asked whether the standards of Methodism permitted one to doubt whether Christ was God or not, Dr. Workman gave an affirmative answer.

W.F.M.S. In Session.

Chatham, May 11.—The ladies of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of Western Canada for the Presbyterian Church in conference here, have decided to reject the basis of union proposed by the foreign missionary committee of the church for the home and foreign missionary societies. Objection is made to the union on three points, first, in reference to the proposed new name for the amalgamated society, second, the manner in which the estimates are proposed to be made for the different branches of missionary work, and third, the proposed manner in which the field will be covered by the united association.

The ladies of the foreign society prefer their estimates shall be made up by the missionaries and officers of their society in the mission field, instead of by the church at home, and they also think that the work among the heathen of foreign lands should be kept entirely separate from the schemes of the church, just as it is at present.

EGYPT CANNOT GOVERN ITSELF DECLARES SIR ELDON GORST

Efforts to Develop Self-Government are a Failure.

London, May 11.—Sir Eldon Gorst, the British agent and consul-general in Egypt, in his report on Egyptian affairs, which has been issued as a Parliamentary paper, frankly asknowledges that the efforts made to develop self-government have been disappointing. The legislative council and the general assembly, he says, have become mere instruments of Nationalist agitation against the occupation." They seek to render the business of the Government impossible.

"The conclusion to be drawn," says Sir Eldon, "is that the policy of ruling this country in co-operation with native Ministers at the present time is incompatible with that of encouraging so-called representative institutions."

The British agent adds:

"We have to make the Egyptians understand that the Governments do not intend to allow themselves to be hustled into going further or faster in the direction of self-government than they consider to be in the interests of the Egyptian people as a whole. Until this elementary lesson has been thoroughly learned, no proposals looking to the further development of the legislative council can be usefully entertained."

LANSDOWNE ALL IN

Ex-stormonter's Gift.

Cornwall, May 11.—L. A. Ault of the Ault-Wiborg Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Toronto, and president of the park commissioners of Cincinnati, has presented that city with 134 acres of land, valued at $80,000, to be used for park purposes. The property is located near the Linwood water tower, overlooking the Little Miami River, and affords an unobstructed view of the Ohio River and Ohio Valley. The only condition attached to the gift was that the city improve Principio street, as an approach to the park. Mr. Ault has been named the Ault Park. Mr. Ault has notified Park Expert Kesler to let him know of other properties adapted for park purposes, as he plans to give these to the city.

Coughs, Colds Bronchitis

If there is an ailment in the throat or chest, it is surely essential that the remedy be conveyed direct to the affected part. It's because the healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed into the sore, irritated throat and bronchial tubes, because its balsamic fumes kill the germs and destroy the cause of the trouble. These are the reasons why Catarrhozone never yet failed to cure a genuine case of Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, or Throat Trouble.

The wonderfully soothing vapor of Catarrhozone instantly reaches the furthest recesses of the lungs, produces a healing, curative effect that is impossible with a tablet or liquid, which goes merely to the stomach, and fails entirely to help the throat or lungs.

To permanently cure your winter ills, your coughs, sneezing, and Catarrh, by all means use a tried and proven remedy like Catarrhozone. But beware of the substitutor and imitator. Look for Catarrhozone only. 50c and $1, at all dealers. 10

MR. BECK ON POWER

The address on power by Hon. Adam Beck last night was a most interesting one, especially to those who were not aware of the power conditions in the various cities and towns in the province, and who were, therefore, glad of an opportunity to be enlightened. The hearty reception given to the minister of power, the representative character of the audience, indicate a deep and absorbing interest among Peterborough citizens in the procuring of cheaper power for the city, and the deriving of the greatest benefit for the people from the development of the water powers of the district.

Mr. Beck did not hesitate to say that he thought that the power prices being charged in Peterborough to-day were too high. They amounted to 7 cents a kilowatt hour for lighting, after the discount had been allowed. He did not prophesy to what extent prices could be reduced, but left the inference that a venture by the city into the power field would be profitable in securing a lower rate, especially to the small users.

One thing that was made plain by Mr. Beck was that the power report rendered by the Hydro Commission was rendered in response to the request of the City Council.

This is important only so far as it affects the statement that the City Council had done nothing in the power matter, and that the report had resulted from the efforts of outside parties. In this connection Ald. Bradburn made an interesting statement, saying that the Council hoped to see the day soon when it would have the privilege of submitting to the people a power proposition whereby the city would engage in the power business, and he trusted to see it carry with few dissenting votes.

It is the desire of the people of Peterborough that all possible information shall be gathered about the power situation as it relates to this city. If any practicable scheme present itself whereby the city can gain distinct power advantages that it is not enjoying under private ownership, there is little doubt that the people of the city will take it up with enthusiasm, as cheap power is most desirable. Mr. Beck's intimation that the Healey's Falls power, which no one has yet secured, will be made available by the government for the people of Peterborough, is most welcome news, as if the government wins in the law suit, the city will get the benefit. It is to be hoped that if anything is done in the power matter it will be done promptly, because delay in the placing of a proposition that can be intelligently discussed before the people will not serve any good purpose.

IMPERIAL RELATIONS

The imperial conference that is about to be held in London within the next few weeks will be of immense importance to Canada in its relation to the empire. The day is rapidly approaching when Canada cannot be content to merely develop her resources, careless of the international obligations of a nation. She will be called on to assume some of the care and burden of the guidance of the destinies of the empire as a whole, in her relation as chief of the Dominions overseas.

Until the present time the "colonies" have been left free to devote themselves to problems of internal development, and Canada at least has only within the last few years been able to emerge from the struggles that followed confederation, and become a potential factor in the scheme of an imperial council.

There are undoubtedly many great difficulties in the way of an imperial council, especially as it may deal with the foreign policy of the empire. Canada has not so far, as we believe it does not to-day, desired to meddle with the ordinary foreign affairs of Britain as the head of the empire. Canada is a free, independent nation, making her own trade treaties, and bound in only a very few instances to the mother country in limitations of autonomy. She has had nothing to gain and much to lose by seeking to impose her wishes on Britain in the matter of imperial policy, except in so far as they affect Canada's own welfare. But the day is passing, as we have said, when she can assume this lofty, disinterested attitude. The men of the old countries are turning to the young giants across the sea for support and backing. They want to have Britain as merely the centre of a group of nations allied by ties of blood and kinship, loyalty to the ideals of the British constitution and determined that the empire on which the sun never sets shall rise in renewed vigor as the hope of the world's peace.

Among the problems that will be discussed at the imperial conference, involving closer relations between the scattered parts of the empire, are:

Merchant shipping and navigation laws.

Cheaper cable routes.

The all red route.

Imperial Court of Appeal.

State owned Atlantic cable and telegraph lines across Canada.

Imperial representation.

Commercial co-operation for benefit of British manufactures and shipping.

Emigration and labor exchanges.

British and status of Dominion navies.

Naturalization.

The most important of these is, undoubtedly, the question of imperial representation. It has yet to be shown that the people of Canada want to be represented in an imperial parliament, though they would probably welcome most enthusiastically some method of enabling the overseas Dominions to co-operate with the mother country towards the tightening of the empire bonds. The colonies, apparently, have not a great deal of wish to pull the strings at Downing street, though many years ago, before the British statesmen had realized the importance of the colonial possessions, many were the occasions when a strong jerk would have smoothed matters considerably.

At this time of day, when the imperial spirit in the empire is so strong, following on the formation of the commonwealth of South Africa, the development of Australia and New Zealand, and the progress of Canada, it would have been a lasting disgrace for Sir Wilfrid Laurier not to have gone to the conference, because, in the eyes of the Canadian people, the question of Canada's position in, and future relations to, the empire, which she so proudly acclaims, is paramount. Reciprocity with the United States pales into insignificance beside the imperial issue.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A man in Hull jail thinks he is lazy, and whenever he does not work fast enough to suit his ideas, pummells himself as punishment. What an odd ailment. Most men would like to pummell anyone who tried to make them do more than exercise themselves.

Brockville is to have free mail delivery because one George P. Graham, happens to represent it in the House of Commons, being at the same time a Cabinet Minister. If Brockville hasn't got very much push about it, it seems to have some pull.

The Ottawa Journal which has been supporting reciprocity has been turned against the pact by President Taft's declaration that reciprocity is the only hope of the United States of spiking all chance of a furthering of the imperial trade preference. The Journal wants the preference and British connection before it wants reciprocity with the United States. It isn't alone in that idea, which is shared by about three-fourths of the people of the Dominion.

It is said that Hon. Mr. Fielding will resign if the Commons is adjourned for two months. He wants to put the reciprocity pact through. Fielding is the man who in the early days of confederation worked tooth and nail to upset it. To-day he will go to any lengths to put through the reciprocity pact, disregarding the signs of the times that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is more wisely heeding. This very obstinacy makes Mr. Fielding an unsafe man to lead the House in the premier's absence.

The Queen has directed that her ladies-in-waiting shall wear dresses that touch the ground and that they shall wear waists with high necks. The decollete gown, except for most formal occasions, is to be barred at court. There is sense in this, but surely not as regards skirts that touch the ground. For ordinary wear the most comfortable, sanitary, and neatest skirt is one that clears the ground all round, escaping the dirt and dust. The long skirt would not do in Peterborough, in any event, where the streets are oiled (or supposed to be.)

The death of Archbishop McEvay, of Toronto, removes a most able prelate of the Church of Rome, one who was generally recognized as an energetic administrator, profound scholar, and a leader of great worth. The name of Bishop O'Connor, of Peterborough, is mentioned as the probable successor to the London bishopric, succeeding Bishop Fallon, who is mentioned as the most likely successor of the late archbishop. It would be pleasing to see Bishop O'Connor rewarded by the church with a promotion, even though it means his leaving Peterborough.

The Toronto Globe is worrying about how the Conservative leader will be able to make the tour of the west, and come home alive. It's safe betting that if he cannot fare any better than Sir Wilfrid Laurier did at the hands of the western grain-growers, it would be wisdom for him to stay at home. But Mr. Borden has no 1893 platform of free trade with which to be confronted, no record of broken pledges, no stultification of principle and conviction for the sake of office. Mr. Borden may be asked to lay down his fiscal program, if returned to power at the next election. And this he will probably be able to do to the complete satisfaction of the western supporters of the party.

TAFT'S INSULT

Ottawa Journal

The foregoing illustrations illustrate one respect in which President Taft's deliverance calls for attention in Canada. Mr. Borden has dealt well with it. The Journal has suggested a second aspect, on which Mr. Borden has not touched. He could not. He is an official representative of a great part of the Canadian people; and for him to say anything undiplomatic would be a mistake. He could not therefore say or intimate that President Taft's utterance is little better than an insult to the people of Canada. In the Journal's opinion it is that. We under the Union Jack should not hear declared publicly by the ruler of any foreign country that he wants the adoption by his own people of a public policy on the ground that it will block a possible internal policy of the British empire. Particularly when he requires the co-operation of the Canadian people to effect his end. It is an astounding thing that President Taft could do this. Canadians have a right to resent it deeply. If a British prime minister were to declare in advocacy of a trade arrangement with the State of New York—if such were possible— that the arrangement would block the improvement of trade relations between New York and the rest of the United States, the American republic would be in a flame of fury in twenty-four hours. An agreement so advocated would have as much show of progress as a cow under a railway train. Even the most judicial of our American cousins appear to regard Canada as unable to feel warmly on such subjects. They seem to be confident of our having no ideals except dollars—as too thick-skinned to possess any political susceptibilities. Too dense, even to possess ordinary logic except in barter. Otherwise President Taft could not have used that phrase about forces here trying to separate Canada from the United States by "a Chinese wall." The Chinese wall does now exist. The United States put it there long ago. They put it there in the hope that this country would so be starved into begging for entrance to the American union. They kept it there in hope for forty years, despite the frequent prayers of some of us. It failed. They see that now. They are prepared now for a consideration to knock some blocks of the wall; yet even the judicial mind of the President can not propose this without proclaiming the idea that his country is the liberal minded side, and that it is Canadians, or some of them who are hell bent on a Chinese wall against the United States. What does the president take us for? Dolts who can not realise that preferential trade within the British empire has no thought particularly of the United States? Who can not see that preferential trade has no bearing with regard to the United States different from what it has with regard to all the rest of the world? Inter-British preferential trade has no animus against the United States, and the president of the United States should keep an adverse tongue off it.

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson

Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE AINSLEE MAGAZINE COMPANY

Randall accepted the cards with unsteady hands. "I assure you, suh, yoh are betting against a foregone conclusion," he said, "foh there is no stemming the turn in the tide. I'll bet you five hundred on this showdown, and then we'll pull stakes, suh, all square, foh further play would be sheer robbery. You can't beat the Randall luck when once it has turned."

"I never believed in luck," replied Moreau, "foh life has demonstrated to me that there is no such abstract. Foh instance, if a coin falls head ten times out of ten it is still an even bet foh heads or tails on the next toss. That is the law, suh, and all the superstition in the world cannot revoke or change it."

"My dear suh," replied the planter, waving an impatient hand, "that is all nonsense, for I hold that our entire existence is greatly controlled by luck and not law. I believe in a Supreme Being, suh, and I attend church regularly, but I do not believe, suh, that our poh mundane affairs are regulated by a celestial corporation, especially such affairs as card games. Yoh know yohself, colonel, that the best playing in the world can't stand against a run of blind luck, and as a man of the world I've seen moh fortunes lost on high hands—foh barmaids topped by foh kings every trip—just because their holders hadn't sense enough to realize that the tide had set in against them. And I give yoh my word, suh," he finished, thumping the table, "that when I fill a foh card inside straight the Randall luck is sitting into the game right with me, and yoh simply can't win. Oh, yoh may get one or two little pots, but yoh'll finish dead broke. Call it what yoh like—luck or the shuffling of the devil."

"Now, suh, yoh're bucking right against my pet hobby," replied Moreau, leaning across the table and growing as earnest as his companion. "Of co'se I accept yoh word foh past experiences, but it is the old case of the coin. Though yoh may have turned heads a hundred times in succession, as I said, the chance of it being tails is still an even bet. Yoh luck may have changed, but I'm willing to lay ten thousand that I hold the best hands in two out of three. There's a sporting offer, suh, that will test yoh theory."

Randall blinked at his glass. Again he was momentarily sobered.

"No, suh," he said decidedly, plucking at his frilled shirt. "Those are high stakes, colonel, for, as wealth goes nowadays, I am not a very rich man, and I cannot afford to jeopardize the welfare of my children for the sake of proving my point. Again, suh, I consider it would be taking an unfair advantage of yoh"—

"Come. Yoh statements don't agree, Mr. Randall," laughed the other. "What do yoh jeopardize, suh, if yoh consider the advantage entirely with yohself? However," he finished, with some coldness; "this is but a game, suh, and I had no idea that yoh were at all imperiling yoh welfare"—

"The Randalls, suh, never incur an obligation which they cannot meet," hotly interrupted the other, the drink showing in his eyes. "Yoh pardon, suh, if I have touched on personal matters. It is not my custom, I assure yoh, to do so with strangers"—

"Now, now, Mr. Randall, suh," interrupted the other, patting the planter's arm. "Yoh pardon, suh, if I have offended. I am an old soldier," twirling his mustaches, "and perhaps own an exaggerated and touchy sense of honor. When yoh mentioned imperiling yoh welfare it seemed as if we were no longer indulging in a gentlemen's game merely foh the sake of passing the time. I have a very delicate sense of honor, suh, and perhaps I am too ready to back my opinions with sums which I consider mere trifles. I hope this difference of opinion will not impair our but newly formed friendship, Mr. Randall."

"I was too hasty, colonel," replied the other, "foh I reckon my pride is as touchy as yoh own. Come, fill up yoh glass, suh. Yoh're a good fellow, and I'm a good fellow. We're both good fellows, suh. A Randall never yet refused to back his opinion, and ten thousand is as much a picayune affair to me as to yoh. If yoh persist in going broke, I'll take yoh bet, suh. The best two out of three. My cards, I reckon. There's my money, suh." And he thumped a buckskin bag on the table.

"Covered, suh," replied Moreau, carelessly peeling off ten $1,000 bills.

By now the unconcern which Mr. Randall displayed was entirely authentic, for his incessant attention to his glass had lent him a bibulous courage and defiance of the future, in which lurked no wholesome leaven of caution. Moreover, his pride had been delicately touched to the quick, and rather than appear a "piker" before this magnificent acquaintance he would readily have hazarded his entire estate. Pride of family was his fetich, and a Randall, he considered, was an Admirable Crichton, who could be beaten at nothing. All this was quite aside from his desire to uphold his self bestowed reputation of man of the world and the immutable conviction that his luck had turned. There was no doubt that if he had not sold his sugar crop for such an unexpectedly high figure he would not have embarked on his subsequent gentle carouse, nor, although of a jovial nature, so quickly formed a friendship with the magnificent and highly estimable Colonel Moreau, owner of the very delicate sense of honor. Although in that period, a decade or so before the war which severed the country, but to ultimately knit it the more firmly together, the punch bowl was an institution in every southern household, Mr. Randall was not what is termed a drinking man, and it was solely on his yearly business trips to the Crescent City that he permitted himself any latitude in that direction.

Meanwhile Mr. Randall had shuffled, dealt and lost the first showdown. The next, however, he won, only to lose the third and last.

"I calculate," observed Moreau, carelessly sweeping toward him the buckskin bag, "that I have proved my theory, suh. Yoh tide has not turned, except foh the worse. An even bet that yoh lose the best out of the next six hands. We'll make it that number in order to give yoh Randall luck a chance to come in, foh it really seems as if it was very bashful, suh. Do yoh take me? Of co'se yoh are the doctor, suh, as I am the winner."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Puzzled the Englishman.

A Philadelphian who had been entertaining a friend from London for several days noticed that his guest appeared to be in deep thought at dinner the other evening. "What's the matter?" he asked, fearing that the Englishman was ill or worried or homesick. "I'm rawther puzzled, old chap," replied the Londoner. "I really cawn't make out what the blawsted bounder meant. I was lost in your city the other day, and I dropped into an apartment house to ask my way. A fellow was loading freight on a bally lift. I awsked him, 'Me good man, can you tell me how far down is Spruce street?' And that fellow said, 'I don't know, old top; my elevator only runs to the basement.' Now, what the dickens did that bloke mean?"—Philadelphia Record.

Largest Ice River.

The great antarctic river discovered by Lieutenant Shackleton is the largest ice river known and represents the only visible outflow from the vast ice sheet of the southern continent. This the Beardmore glacier descends 6,000 feet between sandstone hills and is 100 miles long by 50 wide. The Malaspina glacier in Alaska covers nearly 600 square miles, Himalayan glaciers reach a length of twenty miles, and the longest Alpine glacier is sixteen miles.

PARLIAMENT WILL ADJOURN

Mr. Crosby complained that the Halifax collector got but $1,500 a year, the same figure that was paid at Confederation.

The steamship subsidies were also discussed. The Opposition criticized the vote for the Australian and New Zealand subsidy, on the ground that there was more business from those points to Canada than from Canada there. Sir Wilfrid said he defended the subsidy on patriotic and imperial grounds.

Mr. Lewis introduced a bill to amend the criminal code by the insertion of various provisions designed to impose various penalties for certain offences, which, in the opinion of the member, ought to be brought within the scope of the criminal laws of the Dominion.

They were: That a bank director is guilty of an offence, who makes a false statement as to a bank's affairs, whether he knows it to be false or not; that a bank official is guilty of an offence who accepts a loan from a bank or a bank director; that a director of a bank or other corporation is guilty of an offence if he assists in what is commonly described as a stock-watering question; that a director who makes a loan on the stock of a mining company not listed, is guilty of an offence, punishable by imprisonment for a period not exceeding five years; that in future it will be an offence against the laws for banks to compel clerks to work more than eight hours a day with one hour for luncheon, except in the case of tellers, on the day when the monthly returns are made up.

In commenting on his last proposal Mr. Lewis said that as the banks grew more prosperous they became more miserly, and that there were hundreds of young men being worked to death through the Dominion, for salaries ranging from $300 to $500 per annum.

GETTING TIRED.

Fatigue That Follows Monotony of Work or Exercise.

It is said that for horses the hardest road out of London is the most level one. There are no hills to climb and descend, and the tired horse has no chance to rest one set of muscles while another works. Monotony produces fatigue, and because this particular road is one dead, monotonous level more horses die on it than on any other leading out of London.

We can even take a charitable view of the time taken daily by the typewriter girl for the arrangement of her hair. Her fingers are congested by the work of writing and tired by contact with the hard keys of her machine, and the different feeling of her hair and the little plays and movements of her fingers in adjusting it are a distinct stimulation and relief.

Fatigue following long continued exercise is really a mild form of illness which arises from overexerting some one part of the body. In writing, for instance, the fingers move up and down hardly more than a quarter of an inch as they travel across the page. Yet this is hard work for their little muscles and burns up tissue in the fingers very fast. If rest intervals are too short and infrequent, there is not time for the removal of the waste products of this destruction through the normal channels of the body and congestion results. The feeling of fatigue or pain that follows long continued use of any of the muscles is due to the influence of such poisonous material, as well as to the stretching of the tissues caused by the pressure of the blood which settles there.—Paul W. Goldsbury in Atlantic.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Canadian Northern Railway has purchased the Jesuit College property on Bleury street, Montreal, for a terminal.

Mr. J. J. Warren was acquitted by Judge Denton of a charge arising out of the suspension of the Farmers' Bank of Canada.

Mr. Leslie McMann, a leading Conservative of Thorold, who is a strong supporter of reciprocity, offers to run against Mr. W. M. German in Welland on that issue.

The late R. Vashon Rodgers of Kingston made provisions in his will that his handsome residence on Barrie street should be given to Queen's University as a home for professors.

Eight bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the Empire Music Hall, Edinburgh, which was burned Tuesday night. Among the bodies is that of "Lafayette the Great," the famous illusionist.

Alonzo Player of Mount Bridges, an employe of the C.P.R., was struck by a freight train while walking along the tracks in London yesterday. His skull was fractured and he died of his injuries two hours later.

During the debate on steamship subsidies in the Commons Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the interesting statement that he hoped soon to have the Atlantic fast steamship service from 18 1-2 knots an hour to 21 knots.

The season of heat prostration began in New York yesterday when Jerry Watzell, a tinsmith, was overcome while at work on a steamship and was removed to a hospital. The temperature at 3 p.m. was 83 degrees.

His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons celebrated his ordination to the priesthood and the silver jubilee of his elevation to the cardinalate at Baltimore yesterday. A coat of arms carved in basswood, and set in gold frame, was presented to the cardinal.

Suddenly drawing a revolver and firing, first at Magistrate Sheppard and then at Chief of Police Fisk, a prisoner named Wybrow made a dash for liberty from the Police Court at High River, Alta., yesterday. The shots were ineffective and Wybrow was caught.

Body to Lie In State.

Toronto, May 11—Rev. Father Kidd, administrator of the archdiocese of Toronto and secretary to the late archbishop, announced last night the preliminayr arrangements for the funeral of the deceased prelate. The body will be removed from the palace on Sherbourne stree,t to St. Michael's Cathedral, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, where it will lie in state until late in the evening, guarded by a detachment from the Knights of St. John. Immediately after being placed in position the cathedral will be opened to the public.

At 10 o'clock to-morrow morning Pontificial High Mass will be celebrated by Monsignor Stagni, Papal Ablegate, who will come from Ottawa, especially for the service and the funeral will follow to Mount Hope Cemetery.

HON. ADAM BECK'S INTERESTING ADDRESS; WORK OF HYDRO-ELECTRIC COMMISSION

What Has Been Accomplished in Other Municipalities of Ontario---Healey Falls Available---Commission Will Help Peterborough in Power Projects---The Power Report.

An audience of one hundred and fifty, in which were included several ladies, greeted Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro Electric Commission at the auditorium of the Collegiate Institute last night, and his address on power questions proved to be one of great interest.

His Worship Mayor Morrow was the chairman, and with him on the platform were the members of the City Council, Judge Huycke, T. E. Bradburn, M.P.; G. A. Gillespie, president of the Board of Trade, and James Kendry.

HON. ADAM BECK.

Hon. Mr. Beck in his acknowledgement expressed his appreciation, his appreciation, his thanks and deep gratitude for the kindness shown to him his visit to the city, which had such a splendid waterway, canal and lift lock, and all that went to make Peterborough and the Trent district the envy of the municipalities in the inland part of Ontario, not so fortunate.

He was not present on any political mission he said. The work he was identified with was a pleasure to him. In its work, the Commission had had the support and opposition probably, of both parties, but so far as the mayors and city councils of the different municipalities were concerned, they had given the Commission, which was brought about by the unanimous wish of the people of the province, their hearty support and co-operation. None of the revenue went to the Government. All benefits went to the municipalities, and in turn the consumers of electric power.

It was realized that the country was wealthy in natural resources. Legislation had been enacted for the conservation of pulpwood and timber and other products for Ontario and for the people. The same policy had been adopted in conserving the waterpowers and creating storage basins. The appeal of the people in the Niagara district was heeded by the government and legislation was enacted that pleased all the municipalities, and not one line in the Act had been changed. The people had no regrets. There was nothing of the "gold brick" about it.

The legislation was made to do something. It presented a practical, feasible and beneficial scheme. It did not benefit any one part of the province. Every municipality was helped. The Commission commenced their undertaking with contracts with twelve municipalities in the Niagara district. Now the number was twenty-four, and many more municipalities would be supplied within a month or two. In a year or two the Commission hoped to be supplying over one hundred municipalities. The scheme of the Commission had been taken up somewhat hurriedly, but not before it had given careful consideration, entailing as it did an enormous expenditure of money. But all were confident of success, and the people had confidence in the Commission.

CONFIDENCE NEEDED.

It was necessary, he said, that public men have the confidence of the people. Very little could be accomplished otherwise, and if Canada was to get the best, the people must have confidence in the public men, in themselves and in the country. As for Ontario, she was the premier province, great industrially, and in many other ways, but she needed the power to operate her industries, etc., and meet the demands of the people.

The Commission was endeavoring to to give this power. It had power to expropriate lands and had power to expropriate even the products of power plants. Such as that might be considered drastic legislation but no unfair action had been taken by the Commission.

The Niagara district had asked for tenders for the supply of power, and that of the Hydro Electric, the lowest was $9 per h.p. and the power had to be transmitted 250 to 300 miles from the source of supply. "You in the Trent district are much more favored," said Mr. Beck. "Your power possibilities to get power right at your own door have not passed away. I regret exceedingly that this district is one of the last to take up the question."

No one had thought of power at Hamilton or in the Niagara district, because it was the home of electricity. They looked for the power development at Niagara Falls by large undertakings. They had the idea that power was not going to be transmitted from 250 to 300 miles when it could be sold close by. So to get this power, it was only possible making the scheme a public undertaking.

At Hamilton the Cataract Power Company secured the waterpower rights at Decew Falls, and all it paid was 50 cents per h.p. This undertaking of a few millions of dollars was capitalized at $30,000,000. Then the Commission came in with their proposition, and the question was asked at Hamilton, "Are we going to support a project to build up Toronto, and which will be a detriment to the city of Hamilton? The speaker said that this idea of the results of the Hydro Electric was a wrong one, inasmuch that no one municipality was benefitted. He pointed out that power in some one portion of the province could not be developed without helping some other municipality. In doing such work, a spirit of rivalry had been created, as well as a thrift never known before.

He held that if Peterborough had bought franchises, instead of giving additional ones, the present position would not have been brought about. He was against a dual system. In Canada with two telegraph systems the cost to the public was just twice that of the cost in England, where one system operated. So was it with electric power where companies were doing business. On the other hand, the Hydro Electric was a public project—one for the people.

CHANGES IN PRICE

It had been said the Commission was not interested in the eastern part of the province, but the speaker showed how Ottawa had been helped to such an extent that the power for general purposes only cost the people 3 cents per kil. hour. Last year not one house built had gas connections. They were at one time paying 15 cents. The people became indignant and decided to buy out the Consumers' Electric Power Company at $250,000. The Ottawa Electric Power Company then turned around and said, you can distribute power, but you cannot purchase it. Then Ottawa asked the Commission for power. Last year the system operated by Ottawa had a surplus of of $39,000.

In Peterborough 10 cents per kil. hour was paid with a 30 per cent. discount, thus making the net cost 7 cents. He looked forward to Ottawa becoming a smokeless city on account of her electric power. "Why shouldn't Peterborough become smokeless, too?" he asked. "I feel justified in making the statement, that $250,000 per annum is being saved the users of light and power in Ottawa," he continued.

At Hamilton, they got a tender from the Cataract Power Compnay for street lighting for ten years for $80 and $85. The tender of the Commission was $42.50. That gave them an up to date lamp, ideal current, etc.

In London the rate had been fixed at 4 1-2 c per kil. hour through the Hydro Electric coming into that city. If London having to have this power transmitted 120 miles, ha da rate of 4 1-2c why should Peterboro pay 7c, with th epower right at home.

Mr. Beck stated that he had been asked by Mr. Bradburn, M.P.P. to ascertain the cost of the development of power if undertaken by the city He pointed out that the commission appealed to the companies to sell power for the purpose of transmission but the answer was unsatisfactory. They were looking out for themselves. The usefulness of the Commission was that it secured all the information, in regard to development of power for municipalities free of cost. The engineers engaged in doing this work, were wholly reliable Much of the apparatus used in the development of power by the Commission came from Peterboro, and he was glad that the city was so situated. It was away ahead in many ways as to the transmission and distribution of power.

THE POWER REPORT.

Speaking of power report for Peterboro, Mr. Beck said it had been made at the request of the Council, and was not as complete as it might have been. The procedure in connection with these reports after being handed to him for inspection, they were then sent on to the clerks of the municipalities. But, in this particular case, the Industrial Commissioner of the city had visited the offices of the Commission. He had access as any official had. There was nothing to hide. He asked if he (Mr. Beck) could not come down to Peterboro. The speaker said that he replied that he could not make the trip that day. Then the chief engineer explained that he could leave on the five o'clock train and be back by ten the following morning. With twelve minutes to get to the train, he went to the station and came to Peterboro, where he met a body of citizens, representative ones as he took them to be, gave an address and the report.

If such had caused any friction his was the blame, as he had been out of order in not sending the report direct to the clerk, as was the custom.

HEALEY FALLS AVAILABLE

Of the available water powers about Peterboro, Healey Falls he said was possible, as was also some points between here and Lakefield. The Otonabee Power Co. was also he believed available. In regard to Healey Falls Mr. Bradburn had made application to the Government for it. There were two applications from companies to operate there. The commission would build transmission lines from the Falls to Peterboro and Lakefield and other points. The acquiring of the Otonabee Power Co., the speaker held did away with one franchise, although the proposition might not be the cheapest. But Peterboro needed power and in conclusion Mr. Beck gave his assurance that the Commission would do all in its power to assist the city along this line.

Ald. Bradburn moved, seconded by Ald Buller, a hearty vote of thanks to Hon. Mr. Beck, and it was tendered to him by Mayor Morrow, amidst hearty applause. Hon. Mr. Beck made a brief acknowledgment and the meeting closed with cheers for the King and the visitor.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this afternoon at the residence of Major Martin, Russell street, when Miss Ellen Agnes Martin, youngest daughter, was united in marriage to Mr. E. Weldon, Oakwood. The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in white embroidered net over silk and carried a bouquet of white roses. Her travelling suit was of navy blue serge with hat to match. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Canon Marsh, in the presence of a large number of friends. Among those present were Mrs. W. Godfrey, sr., and Mrs. W. Godfrey, jr., of Peterboro, and Miss O. Bennett, of Toronto.

ROBINSON—BURKE.

Belleville Ontario of yesterday says:—A very pretty wedding of much interest took place this morning at Victoria avenue church at 10.30 o'clock by Rev. Charles J. Smith, when he united in marriage Miss Ida Franklyn, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Burke, International Hotel, to Mr. Charles Ferderick Robinson, formerly of Belleville, but now the popular proprietor of the Union Hotel, Trenton.

The bride was gowned in a kimona costume of coronation blue corded satin, with chiffon trimming, and black picture hat, and was attended by Miss Beatrice Fletcher, wearing cream taffeta, while Mr. Robert Robinson, brother of the groom did honors as best man.

The church was beautifully decorated with ferns and foilage the work of the choir. As the bride entered the church Mrs. Deeton, organist of the church, played the wedding march.

The popularity of the bride was shown by the beautiful and costly presents received, among them being a large number from the church, in which the bride is a faithful worker.

After the reception of which a large number of guests partook, at the home of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson left for their future home amid showers of rice.

ON REMAND

Man Held in County Jail May be Sent to Asylum

A man named Edward Robbins is confined in the Court House jail at present, awaiting the decree of Magistrate Edmison as to what will be done with him. He was arrested by High Constable Cochrane on April 27th, and appeared before the Magistrate on the 29th. Since then he has been remanded from time to time, as he is apparently demented and under some delusions. It is probable that he will be sent to the asylum at Toronto.

Robbins is charged with assaulting his father and sister out in Smith, while temporarily insane. He is a man about 35, and his father is in fair circumstances. The son himself is very intelligent, but sometimes he imagines he sees spirits floating in the air and he says they tell him strange things. He has lived out in Smith most of his life, and it is feared that if he is given his liberty again, as his family are desirous he should be, that he will again commit some serious offence.

He appears before the Magistrate to-morrow.

TO ATTEND FUNERAL OF THE ARCHBISHOP

There will be no memorial service conducted at St. Peter's Cathedral for the late Archbishop McEvay, whose funeral will be held in Toronto to-morrow, and who was connected with St. Peter's here some years ago. His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, however, accompanied by Father McColl and Rev. Dr. O'Brien, went to Toronto on the 4.38 this afternoon, and will attend the funeral. It is likely Father McColl stated, that several priests of parishes in the vicinity of the city, will also be present at the funeral.

A Minstrel Event

Keep in mind the Saturday performances (matinee at 2.30 and evening at 8, in Grand Opera House) of the Toronto Rowing Club Minstrels. Big aggregation of a company of 50. Ten end men. Vic Lews interlocutor, late of Al. Field's Minstrels. Laflamme, Linton and Caldwell, well-known vaudeville specialists. Lews gives character impersonations in the second part that are a peach. The first part includes five end songs, solos and ballads; buck and wing dancing by Joe Hall, the best in Canada. Real old Southern melodies and ballads. The Rowing Club Minstrels played at the Royal Alexandra, Toronto, to packed houses, and the performance merited it. The chorus is the best on the road to-day. Don't forget, Saturday at 2.30 and 8 o'clock. The Grand. Big parade with band at 12 o'clock noon.

A CLOSE SHAVE

Small Blaze Started in Heart of Business Section

While the wind was blowing at a terrific rate this afternoon a blaze originated in the rear of the King George hotel, on Simcoe street, and had not swift action been taken another disastrous conflagration might have wrought havoc right in the business section of the city. The spot was just ripe for a fire, as baled hay, straw, dry wood, shingles and papers were scattered around the yard. Some one had been burning waste paper there, it was said, and the fierce wind spread the flames, and for a minute or two things looked very threatening. The brigade responded to an alarm with creditable speed, and a line of hose was soon at work extinguishing the blaze, but not a moment too soon.

A large crowd rapidly assembled at the spot, and numerous expressions were heard as to what a disastrous fire might have occurred had it not, fortunately, been nipped in the bud.

OBITUARY

The Late Rev. Wm. Bennet

After a long and eminently useful career, the greater portion of which was spent in the ministry of the Gospel, Rev. William Bennet answered death's summons, Wednesday at 11 a.m. at the residence of his son, W. J. Bennet, 558 Gilmour Street.

The late reverend gentleman was in his 84th year and from 1885 until 1898 when he retired from the active ministry, his life had been continuously devoted to the furtherance and promulgation of the Gospel. Born in Lisbane county, Ireland, Mr. Bennet was educated at Belfast and Edinburgh and ordained in 1855 by the Presbyterian Church of Ireland to engage in mission work in New Brunswick. Since then he had been settled at Windsor, Winchester, Kemptville, and Springville. He was appointed Moderator of the Synod of New Brunswick in 1857 and of Toronto and Kingston in 1886. For 27 years he ably fulfilled the duties of clerk of the Presbytery of Peterboro, and in 1898 retired from the active duties of the ministry, and took up residence in Peterboro with his son, W. J. Bennet, barrister, at which place death occurred. He also was present at the jubilee, celebrated by the Presbytery of Peterboro in 1905.

The late Rev. Mr. Bennet's devotion to the cause of God and his faithful and fruitful labors in the Master's vineyard, endeared him to all with whom he was associated in public and religious life, and he leaves behind him an honored and useful sojourn on earth.

The funeral will be quiet, on Friday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

A number of arrivals from the old country invaded the office of the immigration officer yesterday, and all were given positions without any trouble. One young fellow who applied, said he had been a law clerk for twelve years, but his health having given out under the confinement, he decided to come to Canada to learn farming. He was placed with Mr. Hugh Ross, near Campbellford, who stated that he would give him every opportunity possible to recover his health and learn the agriculture business. The young fellow told Mr. Howson that while his parents were of moderate means, still he is determined never to ask them for money, but means to carry out his own career in Canada.

COLDSPRINGS WON MOONLIGHT GAME

Defeated Y.M.C.A. Team at Brinton Meadows 1-0

The Y.M.C.A. footballers journeyed to the Brinton Meadows last night and were defeated by the Coldsprings huskies in a moonlight game by the score of 1—0. The Coldsprings management has strengthened its team considerably, and the "Y" bunch seem indifferent about turning out. A couple of men had to be picked from the spectators to fill up.

The first half was played with ten men on each side, and as there was still a little daylight left the play was pretty fair, neither team having much advantage. The half-time interval was called before any scoring had been done.

By mutual consent the number of players on each side was increased to eleven, but it was so dark the referee could not discern the new men, and it is claimed Coldsprings added two to their number, making twelve men on their lineup. The mistake was not discovered until after Coldsprings had scored the only goal of the night. There was considerable difficulty in ferreting out the mystery of the twelfth man, but the referee allowed the goal and the play continued, Coldsprings dropping one player.

The players on both teams wore the same colors, and in the dark the referee could not distinguish who was who.

For the Y.M.C.A. Miller scored on a nice lone rush, but for some reason it was not allowed.

Last Wednesday St. John's trimmed Coldsprings 4—1, while on Saturday St. James' defeated St. John's 9—1.

Y.M.C.A. plays St. John's on Saturday. The team will be stronger, however, as there were five of the regulars missing last night.

A week ago the Y. M. C. A. team looked good for the championship, but their stock has since taken a drop.

SOUTH CENTRALS WERE WINNERS

Defeat King Edward Nine by Big Score

The second game in the senior series of the Public School Baseball League was played yesterday on the King Edward grounds between South Centrals and King Edward nines, the former winning 23—1.

The game was a rather poor exhibition as the South Centrals had it over the southern bunch in nearly every department.

Eakins, for the King Edwards, was hit freely by the heavier South Central boys, while there were many bobbles in his support. Parker, twirling for Centrals, was steady throughout, only letting in one run.

With Parker, Smith, Haskill and Co. of last year's line, and some promising ones to take the place of the graduates, it looks like a battle between Centrals and South Centrals for the championship.

The batteries last night were:—
South Central—Parker and Haskill.
King Edward—Eakins and Frost.
Umpire—F. D. Craig.

TO THE BALL GAME

Breathes there a man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said: "I'll go and see the game to-day?" If such there be, go mark him well, and call him down, and make him yell, and hit him with a bale of hay. The man who doesn't take the dames and little kids to see the games, is fit for stratagems and spoils. He skips the best there is in life, the solace of this world of strife, the thing that comforts man who toils. He lives no better than a cow, he robs his children and his frau of gladness which is rightly theirs; he sets a bad example, too, and makes his fellow men feel blue by husbanding his business cares. O let your blooming business slide! Get on the cars and take a ride, out where the boys are playing ball! Forget a while your measly stocks, and join the rooters, throwing rocks, and shrieking of the umpire's gall! I like those large, fat, buoyant men who seem to grow quite young again, when looking at some rattling game. When life is shorn of all its fun, what profits boodle by the ton, what good is there in pomp and fame?— Walt Mason.

BOWMANVILLE HAS OTHER PLANS

Ball Team is to Play Port Hope on May 24

At Bowmanville the evident intention of the Midland League ball team is to play Port Hope on May 24. A committee recently met and decided to have a big celebration on that holiday. A Bowmanville exchange says—"As Bowmanville has entered the Midland Baseball League a good game of ball is expected between Port Hope and Bowmanville."

According to the schedule, Bowmanville is due to meet the locals on May 24, here.

TORONTO MADE IT THREE STRAIGHTS

Tereau Held Greys at His Mercy for Six Innings

Toronto, May 11.—The Leafs made it three straight from Providence yesterday by a 6 to 4 victory. The game looked Toronto all the way, up till the commencement of the seventh innings, when a batting rally by the Clamdiggers made the fans look worried.

Manager Kelley used Tesreau, the big Texan twirler, whom Toronto secured from New York, in the box, while opposed to him was Maroney, a left-hander.

Tesreau started like a whirlwind, striking out the first two batters who faced him, and by the end of the fourth innings had struck out no less than six. He walked one man in the first innings, and up till the commencement of the seventh only nineteen batsmen had faced him. In the eighth he was touched up for four hits, including a triple and a duoble, four runs resulting.

Maroney lasted only three innings, and was in trouble all the time. Delahanty hit the first ball pitched to him to deep centre for a home run. In the third the Leafs went right after Marnoey. A base on balls, a sacrifice and three singles netted four runs, and that was the last of the side-wheeler. Dale, who replaced him, did much better, retiring the Leafs in order in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh, but in the eighth a couple of singles and a sacrifice scored a run on him.

BASEBALL

Detroit has such an alarming lead in the American league that notwithstanding there are still about 130 games they have to play between now and October, critics are already conceding them the pennant. Their early season winning streak is a big league record. The most interesting race is in the National where the four leading clubs appear to have it all over the second division teams, and the struggle for the rag promises to be keen as mustard. All teams are clouting the pennant hard.

SPORT TALK

That "Marathoning" is now practically a dead sport in Montreal was amply evidenced Saturday afternoon, when scarcely two hundred people turned out to the National grounds to see a twenty mile race between Henri St. Ives, Jim Crowley, Pierre Larque and Svanberg, the Swede. Svanberg failed to appear, and the others quit after running about half the distance, saying that they would run no more for such a small and unappreciative crowd.

THE TURF

After many years of hard sledding, James Todhunter Sloan has struck oil. The diminutive jockey, once the greatest in the world, is in exclusive control of a big racing stable in Brussels owned by Theodore Meyers, consisting of more than thirty horses, and if good luck remains with him he says he will make a fortune. Sloan doesn't weigh more than 108 pounds and frequently climbs into the saddle for early morning gallops, but he cannot ride in colors, for the old reason that the English Jockey Club has steadfastly refused to reinstate him.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, May 10.—Wheat opened easy, ½d to ¾d lower, with the principal weakness in near months; sympathy with decline in America and weakness in Winnipeg, together with the decline in Buenos Ayres yesterday. Following the opening, shorts covered freely, together with speculative support in July and the market became firm, with offers light. Support in the distant months was attributed to sympathy, and on rumors of continued dry weather in Southwestern Europe, and a revival of continental demand.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Hot winds in Oklahoma and Kansas helped to send wheat up to-day. Dryness thruout Southern Russia had a similar effect, and so did the notion that the rainfall in the spring crop belt on this side of the Canadian line was inadequate. Firmness prevailed at the close, which was ⅜c to ½c to ¾c to ⅞c above last night. The day's trading left corn with a net gain of ⅝c to 1c to 1⅛c; oats at ⅝c to ¾c advance, and hog products more expensive by 5c to 45c.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 10.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable was dull, but there continues to be a fair inquiry for oats from foreign buyers, and, as bids were in line in some cases, further sales were made for June-July shipment. The local market was easier for oats, and prices are ¼c per bushel easier. Round lots of No. 2 Canadian western, for May delivery, afloat, were offered at 40½c, but the demand was slow. There was some demand from foreign buyers for winter wheat flour, but the bids were 9d per sack out of line. The local and country trade in spring wheat flour is fair, and prices show no change. Demand for bran and shorts is good.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 42c to 42¼c, car lots, ex-store; extra No. 1 feed, 41½c to 41¾c; No. 3 C.W., 41c to 41¼c; No. 2 local white, 40c to 40¼c; No. 3 local white, 39½c, to 39¾c; No. 4 local white, 38½c to 38¾c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 10.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning the offerings of live stock were 400 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 850 hogs and 1400 calves. There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being steady at the decline noted in the early part of the week. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and, as they all seemed to want some beef to carry them over for the balance of the week, the demand was better than expected, and a fairly active trade was done.

Choice steers sold at 6¼c; good at 5¾c to 6c; fairly good at 5¼c to 5½c; fair at 4¾c to 5c, and common at 4½c to 4¾c per pound. There were a few good cows and bulls offered, which brought 5¼c, and the lower grades sold at from that down to 3½c per pound.

A much stronger feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices advanced 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, which was due to the limited supply and the good demand from butchers and packers for the same, but the impression is that this advance will not be maintained, as prices in the western markets are lower. However, sales of selected lots were made here to-day at $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars, and in one or two odd cases as high as $7.50 was paid for extra choice lots.

The tone of the market for sheep and lambs was easier, and sales of the former were made at $4 to $5, and the latter at $4 to $7 each, as to size and quality. An active trade was done in calves, and prices ruled low, as supplies continue to come forward freely, and sales were made at from $2 to $5 each.

MILITARY PUNISHMENTS.

Times When Rebellious Soldiers Gambled For Their Lives.

In times past the military code in England was no less stern and uncompromising than the civil. Sentence of death was readily decreed and as promptly executed. Where offenses multiplied and wholesale executions would have weakened the army numerically decimation—the slaughter of every tenth man—was the rule, or the troops gambled for their lives by casting dice upon a drumhead or drawing lots under the gallows tree.

Lesser penalties—not capital, but physical, and causing pain with permanent degradation—were maiming, branding the cheek or forehead, boring the tongue or cutting the nose and ears. These last named were retained upon the military statute book until the reign of Queen Anne. The "trappado" was a fiendish device by which a delinquent was hoisted on high by a rope fastened to his arms and then dropped down by a sudden jerk that often dislocated his shoulders. Hanging by the thumbs, sometimes called "picketing," was also practiced, while the body was raised to such a height that its whole weight rested on one toe, and that again on a sharp pointed spike.

To "ride the wooden horse" was to be mounted on a razor edge, with weights fastened to the extremities.

Running the gantlet, or "gantelope," was as old as the Cromwellian army, and it is thus described in an army order about 1649: The culprits (who had been guilty of blasphemy as well as deer stealing) were to be "stripped naked from the waist upward and a lane made by half the lord general's regiment of foot and half Colonel Pride's, with every man a cudgel in his hand. They were to be run through in this posture so that every soldier might have a stroke at their naked backs, breasts or arms wherever it might alight."—Pearson's.

Harking Back.

"You were telling Miss Gaussip this morning that you were going to be married again, weren't you?" said the shrewd man.

"Why, yes," the widower gasped in surprise. "How did you know?"

"After you left her she began to count on her fingers."—Philadelphia Press.

WHAT I WENT THROUGH

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. NATHAN B. GREATON, 51 N. Main Street, Natick, Mass.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

TO TAKE PHOTOS

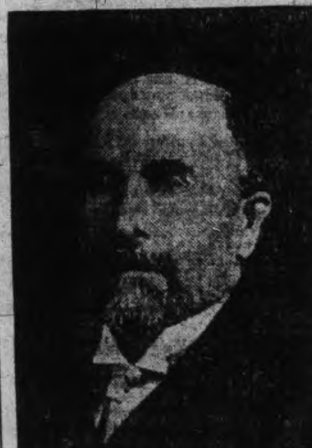
Sir Benjamin Stone Appointed to Photograph Coronation Events—His Remarkable Record

Sir Benjamin Stone, who has been appointed by King George official photographer at the Coronation ceremony, is said to have taken more photographs than any other man alive. Over a thousand of them have been taken on the Terrace of the House of Commons alone. It was there he inveigled Mr. Jesse Collins into a smile, with the encouraging remark, "Now, do look pleasanter! Think of three acres and a cow!"

Few are the countries he has left unvisited in search of prey for his camera. He has tracked down an eclipse of the sun in Brazil, and been mobbed in mid-China.

His great aim is to provide the British Museum with a permanent record of the life of his generation. A policeman, new to the House, had observed him more than once entering with his camera. He stopped him one day, with "Take a lot of photographs?" "A good many," was the answer. "Have a shot at me, then!" Sir Benjamin did. A few days later he showed the result. Robert was critical. "Not very good, is it?" he remarked doubtfully. The photographer looked crestfallen. "Never mind, old man; it'll do. Here's a tanner." The sixpence came back next day through the inspector, and thereafter the embarrassed constable carefully avoided meeting Sir Benjamin's eye.

A CORONATION DELEGATE



J. H. SINCLAIR, M.P. Nova Scotia

A BRILLIANT DANCE

Will be Associated With the Coronation—1,500 Guests

One of the most brilliant functions associated with the Coronation season will be the fancy dress ball in aid of the funds of the Middlesex Hospital. The number of guests is to be limited to 1,500, but there is every inducement to variety in costume because the prize for the best fancy dress worn is to be a magnificent diamond pendant and chain valued at $1,250. Tickets, inclusive of supper, will cost $16.

Dancing is to take place in the new ball-room opened last December. Its floor of narrow polished oak boards rests on 150 steel springs, distributed at regular intervals under the floor area, and giving it a degree of elasticity that renders it an ideal dancing space. A thousand dancers can waltz on its surface in comfort.

THEATRE SEATS

Will Cost Considerable Sum—Some Prices to be Charged

The Coronation will be an expensive time for the King in many ways, although His Majesty will be one of the few who see it for nothing. The gala performance at His Majesty's Theatre alone will cost a very considerable amount, inasmuch as the Royal party will occupy the whole of the dress circle and 250 stalls at a uniform price of ten guineas a seat. The public will pay just double this price for the stalls and the other seats will be from two guineas in the gallery to ten guineas in the upper circle. Every seat has been already applied for many times over. The programme has been arranged so that the chance will be given to as many of our younger actors as possible to appear on the stage if only in "super" parts.

IN AN ENGLISH COLLEGE

Norway's Future King Will Receive His Education

Little Prince Olaf, heir to the Throne of Norway, is now nearly eight years old, and his future training is under consideration. The King and Queen of Norway are desirous of placing him in an English college.

This seems only natural, for Prince Olaf is destined for the Navy, and nowhere in the world could he get as good a training for such a career as he can in England. Then, again, his mother is an English princess—the youngest sister of King George, and the little Prince himself was born in England, at Appleton House, Sandringham. He has also frequently visited this country with his parents.

Several Norwegian Ministers object to their future King being educated abroad, but it is probable that King Haakon's wishes will prevail. The subject is to be discussed when next he and Queen Maud come to England.

PRESIDENT TAFT LOOKS NORTHWARD

Under Reciprocity, He Says, Our Timber and Other Resources Would be Available to America

President Taft of the United States spoke to the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association on Reciprocity and why it should be adopted, in New York on Friday, April 28th. His reasons for wanting Reciprocity with Canada are contained in the following:

"Another and a very conclusive reason for closing the contract," said Mr. Taft, "is the opportunity which it gives us to increase the supply of our natural resources, which, with the wastefulness of children we have wantonly exhausted. The timber resources of Canada, which will open themselves to us inevitably under the operation of this agreement, are now apparently inexhaustible. I say 'apparently' inexhaustible, for if the same procedure were to be adopted in respect to them that we have followed in respect to our own forests, I presume that they too might be exhausted. But fortunately for Canada and for us, we and they have learned much more than we realized two decades ago with respect to the necessity for proper methods of forestry and of lumber cutting. And hence we may be safe in saying that under proper modern methods the timber resources open to us in Canada may be made inexhaustible, and we may derive ample supplies of timber from Canadian sources to the profit of Canada and for our own benefit.

"There are other natural resources, which I need not stop to enumerate, which will become available to us as if our own if we adopt and maintain commercial union with Canada; and this is one of the chief reasons that ought to commend the Canadian agreement to the far-seeing statesmanship of leaders of American public opinion.

"But there are other—even broader—grounds than this that should lead to the adoption of this agreement. Canada's superficial area is greater than that of the United States between the oceans. Of course it has a good deal of waste land in the far north, but it has enormous tracts of unoccupied land, or land settled so sparsely as to be substantially unoccupied, which in the next two or three decades will rapidly acquire a substantial and valuable population. The Government is one entirely controlled by the people, and the bond uniting the Dominion with the mother country is light and almost imperceptible. There are no restrictions upon the trade or economic development of Canada which will interfere in the slightest with her carving out her independent future. The attitude of the people is that of affection toward the mother country and of a sentimental loyalty toward her Royal head. But for practical purposes the control exercised from England by legislation or Parliament is imponderable.

"Canada has now between seven and eight millions of people. They are a hearty, temperate, persistent race; brave, intelligent and enterprising, sharing or inheriting the good qualities of all their ancestors, and with a national pride in their Dominion that grows with the wonderful success and prosperity that have attended them in the last three decades. They are good neighbors; we could not have better neighbors. It is more than a hundred years since a hostile shot was fired across the border, and they are like us because our conditions are similar and because our traditions are similar. They are more restricted in their immigration laws than we, and perhaps they grow less rapidly, but they have before them a wonderful expansion in population, in agriculture and in business, and they offer to any nation with whom they have sympathetic relations and with whom it is profitable for them to deal a constantly increasing market and an ever-increasing trade.

"Why should we not have a closer union with Canada? Think of the absurdity of separating Manitoba and Minneapolis by as great a distance as Manitoba and Liverpool, when certainly Providence intended that their separation, socially and commercially, should only be that of their geographical distance. Canadians have furnished us with a large number of our best citizens. We are giving them a large number of the pick of our young farmers. Let us open the gateway between us. Let us give to both countries the profit of the trade that God intended between us. Let the political Governments remain as they are. Let us abolish arbitrary and artificial obstructions to our association with our friends upon the north and derive the mutual benefit that it will certainly bring."

In conclusion the President said: "I have said that this was a critical time in the solution of the question of reciprocity. It is critical because, unless it is now decided favorably to reciprocity, it is exceedingly probable that no such opportunity will ever again come to the United States. The forces which are at work in England and in Canada to separate her by a Chinese wall from the United States and to make her part of an Imperial commercial band reaching from England around the world to England again, by a system of preferential tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty, and if we would have reciprocity with all the advantages that I have described, and that I earnestly and sincerely believe will follow its adoption, we must take it now or give it up forever."

PURCHASES FROM THE STATES

For the fiscal year ending 31st March, 1910, Canada's purchases from the United States were $223,501,809, their purchases from us $113,150,778. For the past decade the returns in round figures show imports from the United States of $1,600,000,000, exports to the United States of $800,000,000. In other words seven million Canadians purchased twice as much from the United States as ninety million people in the United States purchased from Canada.

St. Lawrence Sugar

Compare the report of the Provincial Government Analyst, with the Analysis of any other sugar. You will find that "ST. LAWRENCE GRANULATED" is the equal of any other sugar, not only in Canada, but throughout the civilized world.

Read Prof. Hersey's Report:

MONTREAL, 22nd February, 1909.

I HEREBY CERTIFY that I have drawn by my own hand ten samples of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co's EXTRA STANDARD GRANULATED SUGAR, indiscriminately taken from four lots of about 150 barrels each and six lots of about 450 bags each. I have analyzed same and find them uniformly to contain 99-99/100 to 100 per cent of pure cane sugar, with no impurities whatever.

Not only compare the analysis, but compare the sugar—and you will see for yourself that ST. LAWRENCE GRANULATED is purer and better than any other sugar.—20 lb. bags—also by the pound and barrel.

INDIAN RIVER

Fall Wheat in the Vicinity is a Failure

Indian River, May 10.—Mr. George Kidd, who has spent several weeks at the home of his mother here, has returned to Minnesota, where he has resided for several years.

Mrs. Read and daughter, Effie, left here for Toronto last week. Effie, who has been home for a short time, had been in Toronto Hospital for several weeks, suffering from an injury to her leg, received a few years ago while coasting.

The saw-mill did not put in its appearance last week owing to the cold water bath it received when the foundation gave way. (Rheumatism.) Regardless of its age its teeth are all good, but it is now feared that it will not come here at all, for it is estimated that that there are not more than 40,000 feet to be cut. It prefers gruel to a mere mouthful like this. We didn't want it anyway, because the whistle might wake us up in the morning.

The lecture on "The Canadian West," held at Bethel last week, was well attended, and Mr. Armstrong's remarks was both interesting and instructive.

While digging for a well in the south of Dummer some time ago a small well of natural gas was discovered. The same thing happened on a farm near Jermyn. Indian River in a straight line between these two places, and it has been reported that a drilling machine is likely to come here and tap the earth in the hopes of striking a vein, as it were, of natural gas. The question arises whether this is natural gas or only the common, everyday hot air.

Mr. Beaver is suffering from blood poison in his left hand.

At the Baptist church, on Monday, May., Rev. C. J. Cameron will deliver an address on "Home Mission Work." Rev. Cameron is assistant superintendent of the Home Mission Society. No admission fee will be charged.

The quarterly service of Bethel and the other churches on the same circuit was held at Keene last Sunday.

Fall wheat is a decided failure in this locality.

Mrs. John Duff, of Tweed, has been visiting Mrs. M. Breckenridge.

William Walker, of Toronto, spent a few days with his parents.

Mrs. Hardie, of Peterborough, was the guest of Mrs. George Patterson last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Kidd, of Warsaw, were here lately, guests of Mrs. Kidd.

The death of Mr. Meade occurred here Sunday last. The funeral took place on Tuesday morning.

It is his intention to visit the chief constable of Toronto and make application to establish an office in this city as headquarters for Peterborough district. All cases of cruelty to animals of any kind would come under the jurisdiction of the office here.

Inspector Fraser carries many testimonials from prominent men in Great Britain, testifying to his ability to fulfill the duties of his office.

MR. JOHN WOOD DIED TO-DAY

One of Peterborough's most respected residents passed away this morning in the person of Mr. W. John Wood at his residence on Belmont avenue.

The late Mr. Wood was born at Churchill, County Fermanagh, Ireland, in 1824. He received his education there and in 1847 came to Canada, making his home in Peterborough.

Shortly after coming here he began teaching in the Public schools and taught in the city and vicinity for thirty-three years, winning the esteem of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

For many years deceased was clerk of the township of North Monaghan and also of the village of Ashburnham before it was merged into the city.

For the past twenty-five years the late Mr. Wood had lived retired. He believed in the Methodist doctrine and was a member of George street Methodist church.

Deceased had only been ill about three weeks and but little hope was held out for his recovery. This morning he became weaker and passed peacefully away shortly before the noon hour.

Those left to mourn his loss are his wife and five sons, Messrs. Geo. E. Wood, of Newport, Rhode Island; E. R. Wood, F. P. Wood and J. W. Wood, Toronto, and R. W. Wood, Fernie, B. C., also two daughters, Miss A. E. Wood and Miss A. L. Wood, both residing at home.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 404 Belmont avenue, at 2.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and proceed to Little Lake cemetery for interment.

THE POWER QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Yesterday Hon. Mr. Beck said at Lakefield that Peterborough would soon be able to get power from Healey Falls. This should not be lost sight of in any plans proposed for the people's acceptance. It is quite evident that the government is going after that power and if it does so, possibly Peterborough will be able to get power at a cheaper rate than by wasting a million or two in local arrangements.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

The factory here has been in the hands of some skilled men of late and they have improved the interior immensly and now the patrons of Lorenz can boast of an improved cheese factory.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Wicks took in the beauty of last Saturday by driving to Peterboro. Business and pleasure combined.

The women who have now finished putting their gardens in are now watching the results of their labors but Mrs. Herr and her family seem to think they are improving theirs by giving it a gentle raking over now and then.

Mr. Bert Lucy has been engaged the past week with the worker at our local cheese factory.

Mr. Fred. Davies, the one time English professional jockey is now working for Messrs. O'Hara anyway he was to be seen mixing cement last Friday. He intends to go back to the old land next fall, he does not care for this country. He might find worse.

Mr. David Jewison and sons are the first farmers in the vicinity to have finished their spring sowing last Friday. Many were close behind them.

Messrs. Geo. and Nor. Jewison were to the popular Saturday resort in Baillieboro. Quite a number of prominent farmers and others are to be seen gather around the men's club or local parliament. They have also some budding speakers and listeners.

We are very sorry to hear of the sickness of Mrs. David Jewison and one and all hope to see her about with her sunny smile before long.

The factory put a new boiler in on Saturday. Things are beginning to look up.

BROKEN-DOWN NERVES

HOPELESS CONDITION CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MILFORD HAVEN, ONT., Aug. 20th, 1910

"I was a complete invalid, three years ago, with Stomach Trouble, Constipation and Broken-down Nerves. I could not sleep at night and my Doctor did me very little good. I was almost helpless untill I began to take "Fruit-a-tives" in small doses. I have taken about three dozen boxes in all and, Thank God, to-day I am well and strong—able to do my own work—and have a baby fifteen months old, and six children in all.

I would not be without "Fruit-a-tives" in the house, and I can highly recommend them to anyone suffering as I did."

MRS. D. GUINEY.

Nervousness is not a disease in itself, but is the result of some of the vital organs becoming diseased. In Mrs. Guiney's case, her nervous condition was caused by a very weak stomach and torpid liver. "Fruit-a-tives" strengthened her stomach—helped digestion—made the liver active—and cured Constipation. Then her nerves became well.

If your nerves are "all unstrung", take "Fruit-a-tives". 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Bell Co. Must Connect.

Toronto, May 11.—After an almost interminable discussion between the independent municipal and Bell Telephone companies over the question of long distance connections, and many hearings before the Board of Railway Commissioners, Chairman Mabee put the matter in a nutshell yesterday afternoon.

In delivering judgment he said that the connections should be made with the independent and Bell switchboards, that a terminal or additional charge of 15 cents be made for each outgoing call from business originating on an independent line, that a record be kept of all such business and a monthly return be made to the board, and at the end of a year the board will determine whether the granting of such facilities at competing points is detrimental to the Bell Co.'s business, and if any compensating charges should be levied.

A Dish of Peacocks.

A Roman dinner at the house of a wealthy man consisted chiefly of three courses. All sorts of stimulants to the appetite were first served up, and eggs were indispensable to the first course. Among the varous dishes we may instance the guinea hen, pheasant, nightinggale and the thrush as birds most in repute. The Roman gormands held peacocks in great estimation, especially their tongues. Macrobius states that they were first eaten by Hortensius, the orator, and acquired such repute that a single peacock was sold for 50 denarii, the denarius being equal to about 8 1-2 pence of English money.—Chambers' Journal.

The Source of Real Beauty.

A sweet, noble disposition is absolutely essential to the highest form of beauty, says Orison Swett Marden in Success. It has transformed many a plain face. A bad temper, ill nature, jealousy, will ruin the most beautiful face ever created. After all, there is no beauty like that produced by a lovely character. Neither cosmetics, massage nor drugs can remove the lines of prejudice, selfishness, envy, anxiety, mental vacillation, that are the results of wrong thought habits.

A Family Trait.

A school teacher had occasion to send one of the pupils home to his father, giving him a note to explain why. The note said:

Dear Mr. Jones—Your boy Johnnie talks a great deal during study hours.

The next morning Johnnie returned to school and handed an answer to his note to the teacher. Johnnie's father had written across it, probably with a pen dipped into the bluing bottle:

Dear Sir—It's no wonder. You ought to hear his mother.

One Way of Stretching a Carpet.

In putting down a carpet it is an excellent plan to slide a pair of rubbers over the shoes. The rubber enables the carpet to be drawn out and stretched by simply walking or pushing the carpet with the feet from the centre to the corners.

Over 2,630 acres belonging to Viscount Clifden in Oxford and Bucks were recently announced "for sale."

KHAKI TO BE REPLACED BY GREY

New Army Service Uniform Adopted by Germany

Germany has set the fashion for a new army service uniform. Khaki has had its innings. It was adopted by the British army and spread to practically all the armies of the world. Then it was discovered that although the khaki color was very suitable as a service dress for soldiers in the dusty plains of Africa and India, it was hardly efficient against the green summer backgrounds and gray white winter coloring of a European terrain.

A German officer wandering on the Indian frontier had his attention drawn to the peculiar slate-colored body clothes affected by the Yaghistan Afridis. He was told that the reason this color was so generally worn was that it disappeared rapidly on a rockbound hillside, even in a blazing sun, and became invisible a few feet distant in the night, and that it was used by the Afridis as an artificial protection in their blood feuds by day and thieving expeditions by night. He returned to Berlin with a report that set the army clothing experts thinking.

As a result of exhaustive tests the German general staff hit upon a blue-green-grey mixture that blended with the summer green and the blue-grey winter shadows of Europeanpscenery. Trials have given entire satisfaction, so much so that bodies of hussars when wearing the new uniform were mistaken for parties of led horses.

France has now decided to adopt a similar color, and the ministry of war has selected a light grey-green for the kit that is to supersede the blue great coat and the red trousers that French soldiers have worn in victory and defeat for half a century. Two battalions taking part in this year's French manoeuvres will be supplied with uniforms made from the new material.

During a recent week there were 2,975 patients in the various fever hospitals in London, including 838 with measles.

C.N.R. BONDS GUARANTEE

Canada Needs a Third Transcontinental Now.

Opposition Criticizes Some of the Terms of Deal.

Ottawa, May 12.—That the Government should guarantee the financing of a third transcontinental railway through practically the same territory east of Port Arthur as the two others is the effect of a resolution and a bill based upon it which were introduced in the House yesterday. The resolution was passed and the bill given a first reading. There is criticism of the proposal, although it is not particularly intolerant. The House has settled down to serious business. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has departed for England, and, with reciprocity hung up, the members are anxious to get to their homes.

The Prime Minister moved the appointment of the following committee of five to try the charges recently made about Hon. Mr. Oliver in connection with the alleged receipt of $70,000: Messrs. Clark (Essex); Carvell and Geoffrion (Liberals), and Meighen and Crothers (Conservatives).

Haughton Lennox made enquiry as to when the Government would introduce the new Bank Act. He presumed it could not be before the adjournment, but expressed the hope that it would be introduced and considered when the House met in July.

Hon. W. S. Fielding said he doubted much if the proposed act would be introduced during the present session of Parliament, but he was willing to keep an open mind on the matter. He gave notice, however, that he would before adjournment introduce a bill having for its object the extension of the bank charters for one year.

In introducing his resolutions providing for a Government guarantee of 3 1-2 per cent. on $35,000 per mile for that section of the Canadian Northern to be constructed between Port Arthur and Montreal, Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways, expressed the opinion that a bargain had been made which would be of the utmost advantage to the entire Dominion.

Mr. Graham said that coming eastward from Port Arthur, except for a few miles, the C.N.R. would serve an absolutely new territory from that now served by the C.P.R. and the G.T.P. Except in one or two instances it would not come nearer than 20 miles to the existing roads. In many cases it would be from 69 to 70 miles from the Grand Trunk and from 20 to 40 miles from the C.P.R.

Explaining the provisions of the route, he said that it was a 3 1-2 per cent. 50 years bond that was guaranteed by the Government. The road would have 80-pound rails, with good modern bridges. The C.N.R. would add its guarantee and would stand between the Government and any possible loss.

Mr. Borden asked the Minister to give his views as to what public necessity would be benefited by the building of this road, and what necessity there was for a subsidy, assuming that the road was not only desirable but necessary.

Mr. Graham replied that with the rapid growth of Canada, and the fact that the company had now 4,000 miles of railway in the west, and were increasing it rapidly and gathering up

WOULD MARRY A COREAN

New York, May 11.—A Seattle dispatch to the Herald says: "I'm not good-looking, and a girl in my fix is not apt to get many chances to marry. I'm not going to become a joke to my friends, so when I chose to marry John Youn, despite his yellow color, it was my own funeral, if you please." This was the reply of Lydia Osterlund, a wealthy Ballard girl, to those who prevented her marriage to Youn, a Corean, by causing the arrest of the couple when they were about to go aboard a steamer for a British Columbia port, at Tacoma to-day.

HON. MR. BECK TELLS KINGSTON PEOPLE TO KEEP THE CONTROL

HON. COL. MATHESON, Provincial Treasurer, who is threatened with an attack of pneumonia at his home in Perth.

Four men perished in a colliery fire at Larksville, Pa.

The Russian Duma has declared the government's action on the Polish Zemitova bill illegal and Premier Stolypin's explanation unsatisfactory.

Electricity Can be Delivered in a Short Time at $25 Per h.p.—Private Companies Should not Get Undivided Market.

Kingston, May 12.—That in five years Kingston would be in a position to supply power to manufacturers at $25 per horsepower was the prediction of Hon. Adam Beck, addressing a meeting of citizens in the City Hall last night, at which Mayor Graham presided. Mr. Beck was listened to attentively for two hours.

The estimate made by Assisting Engineer Yates of the commission, at present in the city, is that the city's requirements to-day are 4,100 horsepower. Mr. Beck made it quite clear that the commission is not a competitor. He said that many in Eastern Ontario were of the opinion that this was the case. His advice to Kingston was to keep control of the market it had in the supply of electrical power, and not to allow a company to come in and divide it. He said he was sorry that the Seymour Co. had commenced business in Central Ontario with the Trent waterpower, and were buying franchises. If the city dealt with a company, it would not receive as favorable terms as if dealing with the commission. One reason would be that it would get advantage of the overlapping in power supply. He pointed out that the question of price was not the whole issue, but it was a case of principle. Reference was made to Port Arthur City, which had refused to deal with a private company.

Continuing, Mr. Beck said that the contract which had just been made wth the New York & Ontario Power Co. was at lower rate than that from Niagara Falls. It was necessary to have a company at Waddington, N.Y., to reduce the power to the necessary voltage, because the Ontario Government could not build apparatus outside the province. The company's figure for a minimum of two thousand horsepower was $13; for 10,000 horsepower, it was $11. The prices for power for Kingston would be lower than those quoted a month ago. For 1,200 horsepower, $38.83; for 1,800 horsepower, $30,31; for 2,400 horsepower, $22.91.

DOUBLE FATALITY AT NORWOOD TO-DAY

Dummer People Killed at the Station Crossing

Double-header Through Freight Crashed into Wagon

Special to the Review.

Norwood, May 12.—A terrible accident occurred at the station crossing here this morning about 10.30 o'clcok, when Mr. and Mrs. Frank McMillan, who reside in Dummer township, were killed by a double-header through freight crashing into their wagon, the horses having crossed the track in safety.

Apparently they did not hear or notice the train, which was running with right of way orders. The wagon was demolished and when picked up some distance away, both Mr. and Mrs. McMillan were dead. The bodies were not cut, there being only small bruises found by Drs. Ford and Sutton who were called.

They were returning to their home, about three miles distant from Norwood, having been shopping at the town. Mr. McMillan was 38 years of age, and his wife 33.

There are two children, one boy nine years of age and a girl of five years.

The bodies were taken to one of the rooms at the station to await the coming of Coroner Dr. Kindred, of Havelook.

Bones In Chimney.

Kingston, May 12.—Workmen engaged in making alterations at the Albion hotel came across a number of what are supposed to be human bones stored away in an old chimney.

In connection with the finding of the bones a strange tale is told. Old residents say that many years ago the building now used as the Albion hotel was the military headquarters and that one day an Indian who had some trouble with the militia suddenly disappeared and was never heard from again. The finding of these bones has led some to believe that the Indian met with foul play and that these are his bones.

Two Camorrists Sick.

Viterbo, May 12.—Oennaro Abbatemaggia is suffering an acute attack of laryngitis and was unable to appear at the trial of the Camorrists yesterday, much to the disappointment of the spectators, who had expected to see him confronted by Enrico Alfano, the alleged actual head of the Camorra.

Maria Stendarano, the woman prisoner, was also reported to be critically ill with pneumonia. The session was occupied with testimony of minor importance.

KNIFE ARTISTS GO TO PRISON

Two Italians at the Soo Get Heavy Sentences.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 12.—At the assizes yesterday morning the Italians Torpetto and Francesco received sentences for the stabbing affair in Little Italy last Easter. Torpetto will serve three years at Kingston, and Francesco six months in the Central Prison. The third Italian, Stonnelli, was allowed to go. Justice Britton charged strongly against the prisoners, believing that the use of offensive weapons amongst the foreign element should be discountenanced.

William Carroll, 65 years of age, is now on trial for the murder of Joseph Talion, in a lumber camp forty miles from Blind River, last November. Evidence given yesterday by those in the camp show that Carroll had no provocation, and Provincial Constable Taylor, who made the arrest, testified that Carroll had told him he had struck the wrong man with the axe. Dr. Bruce Smith said he believed Carroll to be sane, although of an excitable nature. In Dr. Smith's opinion Carroll was fully responsible at the time he struck the blow, although, having been confined in the London Asylum in 1902, was suffering from acute melancholia. The defence is endeavoring to prove insanity.

BOY IS KILLED

Jumped Onto Back of Engine at Toronto.

Toronto, May 12.—Seven-year-old Albert Hutchins, 35 Delaney crescent, was jolted from the footboard of a G.T.R. engine, at the foot of St. Clarens avenue, at 11.20 yesterday morning. The lad had been picking up coal along the track.

The engine steamed into a siding with its train to allow another train to pass and the lad jumped on the back of the engine. When the other train had passed 1651 started backing out of the siding and the lad was jolted off. He fell on his head, clear of the tracks and was carried home dead. The mother says that a brakeman saw him jump on the engine and warned him off, but before he could reach him the lad had been jolted off.

An older brother of the dead boy lost both legs in jumping from a moving train at Brock avenue, three years ago.

Special To The Review.

El Paso, Texas, May 12 — Colonel Guseppi Garibaldi has been selected by General Madero, to lead the insurrectos in the advance, against Mexico City with his American Legion. Garibaldi is the grandson of the Italian patriot. A report from Mexico says that General Navarro will be court martialed for surrendering Juarez.

SUMMER SNOW STORM IN WEST

Winnipeg Traffic Tied up all Night—Cars Are Still.

Storm Will do the Crops Some Good.

Winnipeg, May 12.—Winnipeg was the centre Wednesday night of a violent electric storm that in the space of a couple of hours tied up almost every modern convenience driven or operated by electrical enegy. It was a wild night, with a conglomeration of weather suitable to every season of the year, and vivid lightning flashes lit up the heavens even while hail and snow descended. At one stroke the lights of the city were snuffed out and the power transmission station of the Winnipeg Electric Railway was put out of business. Not a street car was running at 10.30. Officials of the company state that one of the transmission cables from Lac Du Bonnet was struck by lightning fourteen miles from the city, which resulted in the cutting off of the current.

The telephone lines were temporarily affected and the telegraph wires running into the city were damaged to such an extent that Winnipeg was all but cut off from the outside world. Over the few wires that were operated, however, came the gladsome news that the precipitation extended all over the province, and that on a million fields the moisture was sinking to the ground to generate life in the young wheat.

The rain started to come down late Wednesday afternoon and since that time there has been a continuous downfall of hail, snow and sleet. The electrical storm broke about 2 o'clock and the reverbrations of the thunder over the city were so loud as to waken the majority of the citizens. The hail that ascended at the time came in such volumes as to test the strength of window glass. Yesterday morning the unique sight of the trees all in leaf and the ground covered with snow was seen.

St. John's Observatory recorded 2.4 inches of rain Wednesday night, which is almost unprecedented here. Power was turned on again yesterday afternoon.

A Seven-Year Term.

Toronto, May 12.—Fred Watson, alias Casey, a well-dressed, well-educated Englishmen, was given seven years in the Police Court by Magistrate Kingsford yesterday upon the uncorroborated testimony of a seventeen-year-old boy for the committing of an unnatural offence. The man has previous convictions in England, Canada, and the United States. In addition there were convictions on two charges of theft of jewelry from houses in which he had lodged. On these the terms were three years each, to run concurrently with the other term.

Get Leave to Appeal.

Ottawa, May 12.—The Supreme Court yesterday morning rendered judgment in the case of Shantz vs. Good, granting special leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, upon payment of the costs already taxed in the court below. The suit was over the transfer of a number of shares in a company.

MADERO HAS CABINET NOW

Makes His Capital Juarez, and Starts in.

Will Have a Provisional Government—Fighting Stops.

Juarez, Mexico, May 12.—Mexico's Provisional Government, composed of insurrectionists, became an established fact yesterday with the naming of a Cabinet by Francisco I. Madero, jr., Provisional President, and with the establishment of the capital city of Juarez, where Gen. Navarro and his federal troops are held prisoners.

Secretary of War Carranza will have charge of railways and telegraphs. His first act was to grant permission for the repair of the Mexican Northwestern Railroad. Men immediately began repairing the roadbed south of Juarez.

Gonzales Carza will have charge of the mail service and Secretary of the Treasury Madero will direct the affairs of the customs house.

That the insurrecto army is more than an armed mob, was shown yesterday in the absence of general looting and intoxication and the quickness with which the shattered city was cleared of its dead and wounded. The embargo against visitors was removed during the day and sightseers in thousands poured across the bridges from El Paso.

Only occasional cases of looting were reported, and these not by the insurrectos themselves, but by insatiable curio hunters, one of whom triumphantly displayed in El Paso two silver candlesticks, taken from the big church in which the federals made a desperate stand.

The insurrectos are not overlooking the possibility of attack from Col. Rabago, reported approaching from Chihuahua with a relief force.

MINISTERS OFF TO CORONATION

Canada's Representatives Sail To-day for Old Land.

Ottawa, May 12.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Frederick Borden and Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Canada's representatives at the Imperial Conference, left Ottawa yesterday afternoon to sail on the Virginian for Liverpool to-day. Accompanying the Ministerial party were Lady Borden and Miss Borden, Madame Brodeur; Mr. J. G. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of Naval Affairs; Sir Wilfrid's nephew, Robert Laurier, and the Ministers' secretaries.

Sir Wilfrid goes through by train to Quebec, where he will board the Virginian this afternoon. The other members of the party take the steamer at Montreal.

Officers Resign.

St. Catharines, May 12.—In consequence of objections made some time ago liquors have been entirely banished by the Nineteenth Regiment from the Officers' Mess, Sergeants' Mess and every other part of the armories. As the Thirteenth Regiment is coming here on Victoria Day it was proposed that prohibition should be suspended for that day. Two of the officers, understanding that such were the orders, asked to be relieved of their commands and placed on the corps of reserves. One of these was yesterday morning asked to resign the command of his company.

Hopewell Will Not Go.

Ottawa, May 12.—Mayor Hopewell of Ottawa announced yesterday that under existing prospects he will not attend the coronation either in an official or private capacity. When told that Mayor Geary of Toronto had stated that he would attend in any event, Mayor Hopewell said:

"No, I am not going over to take a chance on getting a seat on the 'fence' to see the procession. I had a talk with Toronto's mayor over failure to provide accommodation for visiting civic officials from the Dominions, but he and I do not hold the same views."

Meanwhile, Ottawa's loyal address to the King is being prepared, but the mayor does not know who will present it.

TAFT'S STATEMENT

President Taft has succeeded in giving to Canadians the very strongest, most concisely put reasons why they should refuse the reciprocity pact. Of course President Taft was trying to reconcile Americans who have their innate prejudices against any demolition of the "Chinese" wall—forgetting that in Canada there are eight million who are keenly alive to the importance of the fiscal revolution proposed. In order to convince these doubting Americans President Taft has had to speak plainly as to why the United States wants reciprocity with Canada. He had to drop his usual diplomatic caution in order to make himself positive in his assertions. And Canadians now are given the opportunity of studying the real inwardness of the movement, at least from the mouth of the chief executive of a nation of 90,000,000 people. In his New York address, President Taft said:

Another, and a very conclusive reason for closing the contract is the opportunity which it gives us to increase the supply of our natural resources, which, with the wastefulness of children, we have wantonly exhausted. The timber resources of Canada, which will open themselves to us inevitably under the operation of this agreement, are now apparently inexhaustible . . . There are other natural resources which I need not stop to enumerate, which will become available to us as if our own if we adopt and maintain commercial union with Canada; and this is one of the chief reasons that ought to commend the Canadian agreement to the farseeing statesmanship of leaders of American public opinion.

And he made more remarkable statements in his peroration. He stated that reciprocity would kill all chance of preferential tariffs within the empire, and kill the imperial commercial hand reaching around the world from England, back again to England. There is a "Chinese" wall between the United States and Canada now, one constructed by the United States to force Canada into the union. The "forces seeking to create" a Chinese wall have already been at work with remarkable success, and to this Canada to-day owes her proud position as probably the most prosperous nation of 8,000,000 on the earth.

President Taft's declaration that cannot be explained away by assertions that he didn't know what he was talking about, or that he was "joking"—or that he is an irresponsible backbencher, rings forcibly in the ears of Canada. He says:

I have said that this was a critical time in the solution of the question of reciprocity. It is critical because unless it is now decided favorably to reciprocity it is exceedingly probable that no such opportunity will ever again come to the United States. The forces which are at work in England and in Canada to separate her by a Chinese wall from the United States and to make her part of an imperial commercial band, reaching from England around the world to England again, by a system of preferential tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty, and if we would have reciprocity, with all the advantages that I have described and that I earnestly and sincerely believe will follow its adoption, we must take it now or give it up forever.

A POWER PLEBISCITE

What is the use of Peterborough city council and citizens talking and speculating on the power question, holding public meetings and otherwise dabbling with the power matter, unless they mean business? Suppose that some proposition that looks practicable and feasible, at a reasonable cost to the city, is worked out. When it came down to the fine point, would the members of the city council feel like undertaking action on it without a direct mandate from the people, involving, as it would, the increasing of the city's indebtedness anywhere from 25 to 60 per cent.?

It seems to the Review that in taking up the power question seriously—and it is getting to a stage where the matter must either be taken up seriously or dropped—it is important to have the opinion of the people expressed decidedly in a plebiscite. This is offered as a suggestion that might be well considered seriously. If the people of Peterborough, the free-holders, who would ordinarily have a right to a vote on money by-laws, were to heartily endorse the proposal to go ahead with a project, the city council would be entirely justified in proceeding vigorously with the elaboration of a practicable scheme.

When any action by the city toward getting a supply of cheap power is backed by a strong public opinion as expressed on a vote, there would be no need for hesitation about getting down to business. As it is at present, of course, there is no definite expression from those who would have to finally approve of a deal of this size, and the council is in the dark as to whether an expenditure of $300,000 or $400,000 would be sanctioned.

It is only truth that so far the power discussion has been of a more or less vague nature. It is pleasant to talk about the glory and the advantages of having cheap power, about the necessity of getting it. It is quite inspiring to think that the minister of power in the Ontario cabinet is coming to Peterborough to deliver addresses, that the engineers of the hydro-electric power commission have investigated the remaining possibilities of the district. But when it comes to a show-down, what guarantee is there that Peterborough will spend such a vast sum on any proposition, however favorable it might look? With an expression of public approval, the aldermen would be carrying out the will of the city in going ahead into the deal, and it seems as if there is little likelihood of serious, determined action on such a large question without this mandate.

No matter what the probing of the power matter might produce, in the way of a practical proposition for voting on, it would have to go to the people at some stage or other, and why not at the inception of the scheme, to give some vital force to the project.

There are about 2,700 free-holders in the city. If 2,300 or 2,400 of them were to say at the polls, "We want cheap power, even though the city go into a $400,000 deal to get it," what a force would be given to the proposition. The lesson of the Independent Tire Co. vote should not be forgotten, because if the people will not turn out to vote in favor of pushing forward for cheaper power, at an expenditure of approximately a few hundred thousands, the sooner it is known the better.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Galt has a slogan "What other towns have done, Galt can do." Why not change it to this "Whom other towns have done, Galt can do." Of course this raises the question if there would be anything left for Galt.

Mayor Hopewell, of Ottawa, who was to go to the coronation says he will not go to sit on the fence to see the procession. Now if he were a politician he would be so used to the fence business that he wouldn't mind it in the least.

The woman mayor of Hunnewell, Kansas, refused to attend a meeting of the council, and called one that the aldermen will not attend, it being not in accordance with by-laws. These men should recollect that the lady mayoress is acting only according to nature and instinct. If they are married, they will be able to make due allowance for her refractoriness.

The maids of honor to the Queen must not wear large hats. They must wear toques. They must not wear tight dresses. They must not wear low necked dresses except on most formal occasions. They must wear dresses that touch the ground, and waists that have long sleeves. Evidently being a maid of honor to the Queen is second only in excitement to being a militant suffragette.

A few weeks ago the Liberal newspapers were trying to play the undertaker to the opposition at Ottawa, with stories about dissension and rebellion. They are complaining now because the Conservative newspapers are telling of the troubles in the Cabinet, Fielding threatening to resign, the Quebec members kicking over the traces, etc. The Liberal party is living in a very thin glass house when it comes to party troubles.

The oil that is being used on the Peterborough streets is apparently no more effective or lasting than water. The dissatisfaction that exists over the dust nuisance is strong and well founded. While Street Commissioner Evans has done good work in having the streets scraped and cleaned while still wet, thus minimizing the dust nuisance as much as possible, there is a great deal of room for improvement under conditions such as existed yesterday.

The refusal of Chairman Levee of the Toronto Board of Education to resign in view of the report of Judge Winchester on the stock transactions with the school teachers, brings out a curious situation. Can the chairman of a public body, elected for a year, be "fired" by that body in the middle of the term providing that he has done nothing criminal? Of course, if that body were the Peterborough fire and water committee, the question would be quickly decided.

USING SINKING FUNDS TO BONUS

Municipalities Caught Red-handed in Dishonest Financing

The Galt Reporter has the following to say in regard to the wrong usage of the town sinking funds:—

"Occasionally we hear of a municipality being caught red-handed in the diversion of its sinking funds to illegal uses. For a few years, Guelph, with an abnormally low tax rate, was the wonder of the Province. Its finances seemed to be in splendid shape and its tax payers were everywhere in Ontario being congratulated on the easy burdens they were carrying. Then one day it came out that Guelph was using its sinking funds to reduce its rate. The fat was in the fire.

"Now it is St. Catharines that has disbursed $200,000 of its sinking funds in various ways. An expert auditor has disclosed this fact and naturally citizens are astonished. But has not St. Catharines been buying buildings for manufacturers, reducing assessments and altogether playing the angel to industrial promoters? Not long ago it sold a building that cost the city $40,000 to a manufacturing company for $5,000— and incidentally beat Galt out of an industry. The other day it secured another branch of an American concern by offering the proprietors three times as much as Galt was prepared to give. No wonder St. Catharines is short $200,000 in its cash box. There are perhaps others in the same predicament. Galt is on the safe ground because not a dollar of its sinking funds is in the bank, with every call on the debentures provided for. In the long run the honest way in municipal financing pays."

CARUSO HAS A TUMOR IN THROAT

Operation Necessary to Enable Tenor to Recover Voice

Rome, May 12.—According to the celebrated surgeon, Prof. Della Vedova, Caruso is again suffering from polypus, a species of tumor of the throat.

It was Dr. Vedova who successfully operated on the tenor in 1906 and 1908, when he removed similar growths from the singer's larynx. Dr. Vedova then warned Caruso against overtaxing or straining his voice, and predicted a repetition of the disease if his advice was unheeded.

Now a third operation has become necessary. Prof. Vedova is confident the operation will be successful and that the tenor will recover his lost voice, as he did after the previous operations.

Dr. Vedova refuses to divulge when the operation is to occur, and estimates a month's complete rest will be necessary after it. Caruso's return to Florence is reported to be imminent.

During Caruso's long period of silence in the closing months of last season's opera, it was variously reported that he was suffering from dust irritation of the larynx, from grip, and from almost paralyzing fear caused by Blackhand threats.

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson

Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE AINSLEE MAGAZINE COMPANY

The bird being plucked, the vulture was no longer scrupulously careful regarding its deportment, and, in fact, if Mr. Randall had been himself he could not but have noted the contempt and derision in the estimable colonel's voice and eyes.

"Yes, I am the doctor, suh," replied the planter thickly, "and a Randal never quits. Never, suh! I take yoh and I raise yoh bet. Fifty thousand that I beat yoh fon out of six. Ther's the way I play, suh. Now, do you take me, Colonel Moreau?"

A momentary astonishment flickered in the other's eyes, for it seemed as if the bird had not been picked so cleanly as he had supposed. "I reckoned yoh cleaned out, suh," he said cautiously. "If yoh're serious, of co'se I take yoh."

Mr. Randall, swaying unsteadily, promptly slammed a green morocco wallet on the table. "That and a deed to my plantation, colonel, against yoh winnings and fohty thousand. I am about to show yoh, suh, how a Randall plays poker. I stake everything I own on the fact that yoh leave this table dead broke, suh. Here's to the Randall luck, and to the devil, suh, with everything else!" And, drinking to this admirable sentiment, he raised his glass, drained it at a draft and sent it crashing to the floor.

A lupine twist came to the other's lips as he produced pen, ink and paper. "Yoh just make out that deed now, suh," he said suavely. "My name is Colonel Jacques Gaspard Deschamps Moreau, and very much at yoh service, suh"—

He stopped and whirled about, the pen extended in his hand, as the door of the private stateroom opened, giving admittance to a man of perhaps thirty-five, who exuded a certain debonair and rakish atmosphere. At the neck of this gentleman's elaborately frilled shirt there gleamed a huge cameo, and companion stones fastened the cuffs at his wrists.

"Gentlemen, your servant, and my humble apologies," he said, with an elaborate bow. "I trust this is not an untimely intrusion."

CHAPTER II.

"THIS is a private stateroom, suh," interrupted Moreau, glaring at the intruder.

"What— Why, as I live, it is Colonel Moreau—by all the saints, your admirable self, my dear fellow!" heartily exclaimed the younger man, slapping the other on the back. "These lights are so dashed disobliging I didn't recognize you. I have been watching the game for some time through that window," pointing to one on his right, "and you must remember that a stateroom isn't private so long as the curtains aren't drawn. If I had known you were aboard I would have hunted you up long ago, for you know how I love a game, colonel, and hence this ventured intrusion. Have you any objection to making it three cornered?" His bow included Mr. Randall, now blinking at the table.

"Sorry, but quite impossible, suh," replied Moreau shortly. "I am already this gentleman's master foh a matter of ten thousand or so—he has been playing in dam poh luck—and our next wager is for fifty thousand. Too high foh yoh, I calculate?"

"Not at all, I assure you," lightly replied the intruder, smiling into the other's venomous eyes. "Come; if your friend is willing, let me sit in. I really insist upon losing to you, colonel. Won't you introduce me?"

Moreau hesitated, trying to read the other's eyes. Then, apparently satisfied, he turned to the nodding Mr. Randall, saying: "Have yoh any objection, suh, to making it three? My friend, suh, Mr.—er—Mr. Jackson of New Orleans."

"Honored, suh! Honored!" replied the planter, arising and extending a frank hand. "I warn yoh, suh, that the Randall luck has turned and that yoh will surely lose. Stay out, suh; stay out!" he added impressively, patting the other's shoulder. "Foh I am about to make a killing, and I don't want yoh to be among the dead. The colonel and I are old men of the world, suh, but this is no place foh a young man like yoh. I trust yoh will take my advice in the spirit in which it is offered, foh I am a father, suh, and—and I like yoh. By Gad, yoh remind me of a dear friend I once had—the Kirbys, suh, of Plaquemine"—

"Come," interrupted Moreau, "let us resume our friendly hostilities. Mr. Randall, foh yoh make yoh landing, suh, in about half an hour."

"I thank you for your advice, sir," said the intruder, with sudden gravity, while gently and unobtrusively he steered Mr. Randall to his seat. "But I am afraid it has come too late, for card games of all kinds are my weakness. Perhaps if I had received it when I was younger— But I see our good colonel is impatient."

"I am," replied Moreau, shuffling the cards, "foh we have only half an hour, and it is to be the best out of six hands. Come, my money is up, as yoh see, suh, and Mr. Randall draws a deed for his plantation as his stakes, so we await yoh pleasure, Mr.—er—Jackson."

"I understand you to say that the stakes were fifty, not twenty thousand?" replied the other, casually glancing at the colonel's roll.

"I calculate my check is good for the balance," replied Moreau, signaling a warning with his eyes—"the National Bank of New Orleans, suh."

"Ah, a very sound institution, for I draw against it myself," observed the younger man. "As, of course, we do not carry such an amount with us," he added, with deference, turning to Mr. Randall, "Colonel Moreau and I must of necessity substitute our checks. We are strangers to you, sir, and"—

"Yoh word, suh, is entirely sufficient," interrupted the planter, waving his hand. "This is a question of honor between us, foh I might draw a deed to a plantation I never owned. I am a man of the world, suh, and I reckon we each can recognize a southern gentleman on sight."

"Yes, in the present company that is not a very difficult matter," gravely responded Mr. Jackson. "Shall we cut for the deal? The four best hands take all. Ah, luck is with me. I take the cards, sir."

"One moment," said Moreau, "as no stakes are up I reckon I'll give my check for the full amount should I lose." Pocketing his roll, he glanced satirically at Mr. Jackson.

If for a presumable amateur who occasionally indulged in a gentleman's game merely for the sake of passing the time Colonel Moreau had exhibited a wonderful aptitude at shuffling and dealing his performance was now completely overshadowed by that of the young intruder, whose lightning deftness was almost uncanny. Talking nonchalantly and brilliantly, he stacked the deck with a beautiful precision, fascinating in the extreme, even while the colonel's watchful and suspicious eyes never for a moment relaxed their vigil. Owing entirely to this marvelous and criminal skill Mr. Jackson won on his own deal and, luck following him, won also on that of Mr. Randall. As each and every one of the colonel's undertakings were highly estimable he naturally held the best hand when, for a moment, the cards were in his power, and it speaks eloquently for Mr. Jackson's large charity of judgment that he refrained from criticism even when acutely aware that the middle aged creole had rather clumsily garnered his third ace from the bottom of the deck. But as youth must be served, especially when possessor of such consummate skill as that owned by Mr. Jackson, the latter handsomely won his fourth showdown with surprising ease, verve and dash.

"Well, that winds her," airily remarked the colonel, arising and stretching his long arms. "One hundred thousand ain't such a bad cleanup, I reckon, but yoh always were lucky, yoh young scamp, and there's no playing against it. Yoh even topped my foh kings. I calculate the Randall luck finished a very poh last. How about yoh theory now, suh?"

traffic, it made it absolutely necessary that there should be another line for the carriage of the products of the west to the east, as well as feeding that line from the east to the west. "I believe," he said, "that there is a day of prosperity near at hand, that will extend clear through to the Maritime Provinces, a prosperity which I do not think will be secondary even to that of the west. My own conviction is that we cannot get these lines constructed too rapidly to meet the absolute necessity that will then exist for the carrying trade of our own products, to say nothing of the carrying trade we might do for any other country.

"As to the necessity of a guarantee, this company might in a few years proceed to work this line through. They have done a good deal, but they have been aided by subsidies, and aided by guarantees. But in order that we may have this line constructed, and constructed without undue delay, constructed in a way that we should have something to say about its construction, and in order that we may be able to finance such an undertaking in the best possible method, so that the freight rates might be based on the least possible cost of construction, I believe it is in the interests of the people who have to ship goods, that the Government should enable the company to borrow their money at the best possible rates in the old country. I do not believe that this guarantee will ever cost the Dominion of Canada a dollar, and if we can ensure the rapid construction of this road at the cheapest possible rate merely by lending the name of the Dominion of Canada to the company to secure its money.

R. L. Borden protested against so important a measure being delayed until the eve of the adjournment of the session. He would postpone consideration of various points in the resolution until the discussion in committee. The questions he had asked the Minister of Railways had only been answered in general terms. He would point out, however, that between the east and west there was a stretch of country that had no appreciable population, yet a railway had been constructed through it, and had been in operation for twenty years.

Hon. John Haggart said that the Minister of Railways had not made it clear that there was room for this additional transcontinental line.

Haughton Lennox criticized the proposals. What with the proposed water routes and the three railway systems he believed there would be no necessity for this line. The result might be that all would become impoverished and compelled to charge rates which would afford no measure of relief to the western farmer.

Man Who Acts Queerly Taken in by Police

Harry Wright, an Englishman, who it is claimed is of unsound mind, was again at police court this monring. He was remanded. Wright is the man who was in court about a month ago for the same thing and after a medical examination which showed that there was a pressure on his brain he was given his liberty. He is not dangerous when his periods of insanity come on, but has a desire to race trains or horses. His case will receive further investigation.

AN HONOR FOR J. A. CULVERWELL

Made a Life Member of Engineers' Club at Toronto

Mr. J. A. Culverwell, of Port Hope, the "Electric Power King," has been made a life member of the Engineers' Club, of Toronto, the leading engineering society of the Province of Ontario. The Guide congratulates Mr. Culverwell on this new honor. Mr. Culverwell has made a complete engineering and financial success of his power companies in Central Ontario, both on the Trent and Otonabee rivers, and in which, although not now actively engaged, he has still a very large financial interest in the electric merger. Mr. Culverwell is also an associate member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers of New York, and recently was made a member of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association of Philadelphia, having delivered an address at Atlantic City on "The Trent Canal and the Benefits of Water Transportation" while there taking a holiday. A prominent legislator has stated that Mr. Culverwell has secured stronger municipal official endorsation for his undertakings than any man in the history of Canada.—Port Hope Guide.

LINDSAY CITIZEN GIVEN A "JOLLY"

Was Informed of the Merits of Oil Used Here—But the Date Wasn't Yesterday

The Lindsay Warder says:—The high wind to-day caused many of the citizens to chase their hats and also blow the dust about in a very objectionable manner. Such weather as this brings up the old question of oiling the streets. A local citizen was in Peterborough a few days ago and made enquiries which resulted in information stating that they were they were using a crude oil which was really cheaper than water and ever so much more effective in allaying the dust. If such is the case it might be tried with profit in town as the dust to-day was very objectionable, the wind drying up the water on the streets very rapidly, leaving the dust as bad as before being sprinkled.

PIANO RECITAL

By Pupils of Mr. Carl Forsyth at Lindsay

Lindsay Post—Last evening a delightful piano recital was given by Miss Jean Flavelle, Miss Ethel Matchett and Miss Amy Ch'stian, at the residence of Mr. C. C. Forsyth, Bond street. These talented musicians, who are pupils of Mr. Forsyth, were also assisted by Mrs. W. R. Widdess, contralto, and the program presented was an excellent one. The different numbers were rendered with excellent taste, and the recital was a tribute to those participating, as well as to Mr. Forsyth.

KING EDWARDS WERE IN FORM

Defeated South Centrals in Junior School League Fray

The King Edward school followers had sweet revenge last night for the beating their seniors received at the hands of the South Central huskies on Wednesday evening.

In a junior series fixture yesterday afternoon the King Edward nine secured thirty-five runs while the South Centrals only managed to tally ten times.

For the King Edwards Campbell twirled throughout, while the South Central artists were changed a number of times.

The batteries as they started last night were—

King Edward—Campbell and Frost.
South Central—Jackson and Austin.
Umpire—Parker.

On Monday evening South Central and Centrals play in the senior division. Both teams have won their opening game by a large score, and as they are the best teams in their division the game promises to be a hard fought one.

BASEBALL

Larry Lajoie is about the last of the old gang that wore the Philadelphia uniform in Harry Wright's managerial days. Wright rounded up a great team of hitters for the Philadelphia National League club in the early nineties. Clements and Cross were 350 hitters. Ed. Delahanty, Billy Hamilton and Sam Thompson, the three outfielders, were also .350 sluggers.

Bill Douglas, Larry Lajoie, Joe Sullivan and Bill Nash composed the infield. While Billy Hallman was playing second base for the team Lajoie covered first base. Hallman was the weakest hitter on the club. The other infielders were all smashing stickers. When Jack Taylor was pitching for the club every man on the team hit over .300.

Taylor pitched for St. Louis in 1898, the year Tim Hurst managed the St. Louis team. He should not be confused with Jack Taylor, of Nelson, O., who played with Robison's Cardinals, and is now in the minors. Harry Wright's Phillies put more pitchers out of business than any team that ever took the field.

Clements, the catcher, was a left-hand hitter, and could hit the ball a mile. The year Harry Diddlebock managed the browns for Chris Vonder, Abe and Ben Muckenfuss, Theodore Breitenstein almost pitched a no-hit game against the hard-hitting Phillies. The score was 1—0 in the last half of the ninth. Breitenstein started off by walking Billy Hallman. Harry Wright then sent Clements up to bat for "Klondyke Bill" Douglas, who was catching. Breitenstein, a left-hander, thought Clements, a left-handed batter, would prove easy picking, and tossed one over. Clements picked it, driving the ball over the right fielder's head. It landed in the shoot-the-chutes pond and the game was over.

The following is the standing of the teams in the Western Canada Baseball League—

	W.	L.	P.C.
Calgary	5	0	1,000
Edmonton	3	1	.750
Winnipeg	4	2	.667
Brandon	2	4	.333

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 11.—Tightening of European markets led to a considerable change of sentiment here to-day regarding wheat. Many traders jumped from the short to the long side, and there was a steady advance in prices. At the close, a steady tone prevailed, with last sales 1⅛ to ¼ to 2½ higher than last night. Net gains were scored in all the other pits—corn, ½ to ⅞; oats, ¾ to ⅞ to 1⅛, and hog products all the way from a shade to 70c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅜d to 1¼d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ¼d higher on corn. Antwerp closed unchanged on wheat, Buda Pest ¼c lower; Paris 1c to 2c higher.

Liverpool Grain and Produce.

LIVERPOOL, May 11.—Closing: Wheat—Spot steady; No. 2 red western winter, no stock; No. 2 Manitoba, 7s 5½d; No. 3 Manitoba, 7s 3¾d; futures strong; May, 7s; July, 6s 11⅝d; Oct., 6s 9⅝d. Flour, winter patents, quiet, 27s 6d. Hops in London (Pacific coast), £5 to £6.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 11.—There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, and, as bids were 6d to 9d per quarter higher in some cases, sales of several loads were made. The demand for oats continues good, and as cables were strong and higher a fair amount of business was done. The local trade is also fairly active and the tone of the market is firmer in sympathy with the reaction in prices in Winnipeg. A fairly good trade is being done in flour, and prices are firm. Demand for shorts and middlings and low grade flour is good at firm prices.

Oats—Canadian western No. 2, 42c to 42¼c car lots ex-store; extra No. 1 feed, 41½c to 41¾c; No. 3 C.W., 41c to 41¼c; No. 2 local white, 40¼c to 40½c; No. 3 local white, 39½c to 39¾c; No. 4 local white, 38½c to 39c.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.30; seconds, $4.80; winter wheat patents, $4.50; strong bakers', $4.60; straight rollers, $4 to $4.10; in bags, $1.80 to 1.90.

Rolled oats—Per barrel, $4.30; bag of 90 lbs., $2.05.

Corn—American No. 3 yellow, 60c to 61c.

Eggs—Fresh, 19c to 20c.
Cheese—Westerns, 11½c to 11¾c.
Butter—Choicest, 22c; seconds, 21c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, May 11.—The railways reported 74 carloads of live stock at the City Market, consisting of 886 cattle, 2605 hogs, 106 sheep and lambs, 87 calves and 7 horses.

Exporters.

A few choice export steers were sold for export purposes at $5.90 to $6. Export bulls are worth from $4.75 to $5.15.

Butchers.

George Rowntree bought for the Harris Abattoir Co., 412 cattle on Wednesday and Thursday, as follows: Butchers' steers and heifers at $5.45 to $5.85; steers of export weights, $5.90 to $6; cows, $4 to $5.35; bulls, at $4.50 to $5.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

The demand for stockers and feeders was greater than the supply, and fully as many more could have been sold. Short keep feeders, 1050 to 1125 lbs. each, sold from $5.60 to $5.75; feeders, 800 to 950 to 750 lbs., $4.90 to $5.25; yearlings, $4.50 to $4.85. But read the sales of C. Zeagman & Son, as well as those made by Charles Maybee and Robert Wilson, which will convey a better idea of the stocker and feeder trade, than can be given any other way.

Milkers and Springers.

The milker and springer trade was not just as swift to-day as it has been in the near past. The main trouble is that there are too many common and inferior milkers and springers in comparison with the few good to choice.

Good to choice cows will sell at any time, but inferior and common are slow sale and if drovers persist in bringing so many of them to the market some one day they will get hit hard and then they will blame the papers for giving high prices. Prices ranged from $35 to $75.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves sold at steady prices, ranging from $4 to $6.50 per cwt., or an average of $5.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

Hogs sold at $6.15 for selects, fed and watered, and $6.90 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

BUFFALO, May 11.—Cattle—Receipts 50 head; market, light and steady; prime steers, $6.15 to $6.25; butcher grades, $3.25 to $6.

H. C. Duff Tells of Good Work in East County

Government Station Helping to Plant Waste Land

Readers of the Review will be interested in learning of the work that is being done this spring amongst the farmers of East Peterborough in connection with the branch office of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, located in Norwood, which branch is in charge of Mr. H. C. Duff, B.S.A. To-day Mr. Duff was in the city while passing through on a hurried trip to central South and talked interestingly on farm work.

Some work has been done in the matter of reforesting blow sand areas. An acre of Mr. Frank Greenbanks' farm, one mile out of Norwood on the Peterborough road, has been planted to Scotch pine secured from the Government nurseries. The area planted is a hill of blow sand on which one would not think anything would grow at all.

Near Westwood an acre of land belonging to Reeve Comstock has also been planted to Scotch pine. This land at Westwood has given the council much concern in recent years and $500 has been spent in repairing the road, and in erecting a high board fence to prevent further damage being done to the road by this drifting sand.

Those who have seen these new plantations and have heard about them think that the matter is purely an experiment, and some have little faith in the ultimate success of the venture. As a matter of fact these small plantations are not in any sense an experiment, but rather a demonstration of what has been accomplished elsewhere, and that the same results may be accomplished in Peterborough county in preventing damage from blow or drifting sand.

Considerable work is being done in connection with neglected orchards in East Peterborough. The trees on three acres of a 10 acre orchard owned by Mr. Ben Cardwell have been pruned and sprayed and placed in first class shape. The orchard before Mr. Duff took hold of it was in an awful condition, and Mr. Cardwell was on the point of cutting it out, believing that it was impossible to improve the orchard and to make it pay. Quite a number of farmers have gone to see this orchard since it has been renovated. All have been greatly surprised and pleased at what has been done, and the owner is greatly delighted at the results.

Other orchard work is being carried on in connection with an orchard owned by Mr. J. Sargent. Material is being supplied for the spraying of several small orchards in the vicinity of Norwood, and material instruction are being furnished to a few others.

Mr. Duff reports an unusual, in in fact a tremendous interest among the farmers of East Peterborough in regard to alfalfa. Many of the farmers have sown alfalfa this year for the first time, and are hopeful of securing a satisfactory stand of the crop.

Dr. Carman Called.

Montreal, May 12.—Dr. Carman, general superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, took the witness stand in the Workman libel case yesterday and gave evidence on points of Methodist belief involved in the alleged assertions of Dr. Workman. Dr. Carman claimed that from his position his testimony could be regarded as the voice of the Methodist Church. His statements on points of Methodist belief, he declared, were the interpretations of the Methodist Church courts. His testimony on many points was directly opposed to that of Dr. Workman, who in testifying Wednesday refused to admit that the beliefs which he held were not in accord with the standards of Methodism.

LIBRARY FOR THE BLIND CANADIANS

Institution Will be Moved to Toronto, and Enlarged

Of all our public libraries, one of the most interesting and most deserving of public support is the Canadian Free Library for the Blind, which was established at the village of Markham in 1906. It is now proposed to move the institution to Toronto, in order that it may be more easy of access, and to improve its usefulness by placing some hundreds of additional volumes on its shelves. An effort will also be made to install a press for the manufacture of tactile books, in order that some of the gems of Canadian literature which have never been reproduced in raised letters may be enjoyed by the blind.

This library has also a department of free instruction in the art of reading tactile print. While it is difficult for those of us who are blessed with sight to realize fully how much tactile books, and the ability to read them, will mean to our five thousand fellow-Canadians who are doomed to pass their days, as well as their nights, in utter darkness, this library's appeal for public support on humanitarian ground is eloquent.

A good circulating library of books they can read is more important to the blind than is such an institution to people who can see. In these days of cheap literature, even the man of small means can at least own a small library. For the blind there is no cheap literature, owing to its bulk (for the sheets can only be printed on one side) and to the necessarily limited sale. A book printed for the blind costs several dollars, while the same work can be owned and enjoyed by a seeing person by the outlay of a few cents.

This library is established under the Ontario Public Libraries Act. It is under government inspection, and its accounts are carefully audited.

Subscriptions towards its endowment fund are solicited. Remittances addressed to E. W. Hermon, treasurer, 37 Balmuto street, Toronto, will be gratefully received and duly acknowledged.

The library is available to all the blind of Canada, from Halifax to Vancouver. Books are transmitted free of postage, and the librarian promptly mails books ordered from the catalogue.

Correspondence is invited with the secretary, S. C. Swift, M.A., 8 Washington avenue, Toronto.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

WILL MR. CARLISLE SPEAK?

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir.—I have never written a letter to any paper in Peterborough, and I am exceedingly sorry to be forced to do so in connection with a subject which has become most offensive to many of your intelligent readers, but I cannot refrain any longer.

I feel that the time has come for Mr. John Carlisle and others to speak out plainly with regard to the persons to whom they refer in their letters on higher criticism.

I have been a resident of Peterborough for years and I fancy I have quite as much qualification to speak as anyone who has been heard on this subject; moreover, I know the pastors of all of the larger churches in the city; I know their teaching of both the Old and the New Testaments, and I beg to say that the man who suggests that we have in any representative pulpit in this city a minister who is in any sense untrue to the word of God is either grossly ignorant or wilfully malicious. The people of our churches believe in their ministers, and they strongly resent the suggestions of Mr. Carlisle.

I do not know that I have ever seen Mr. Carlisle, and I am not a member of the church that enjoys, or endures his presence, but I am convinced that not one in a hundred of the members of our churches have any sympathy with his positions, and no one is advertising the extreme positions of the higher critics, and doing as much to undermine the word of God as Mr. Carlisle, and those who sympathize with his propaganda.

If these people are sincere they will now speak out plainly, telling us who these dangerous ministers are in "our churches," or, they will henceforth and forever hold their peace on this question.

Yours truly,
A LOVER OF THE BIBLE.

TWO CHAIRS USED AT THE CORONATION

Older One in Which King Will Sit Was First Used by Ill-Fated Edward II.—Interesting History

Though it is customary to speak of the Coronation Chair in the singular, as a matter of fact there are two of them, and these will be placed side by side in Westminster Abbey on the all-important day next June. That which will be occupied by Queen Mary, however, is considerably more modern than the other, having been made for the coronation of Queen Mary II.

It is the older chair that is most worthy of inspection. It was made by order of King Edward in 1296 from oak especially cut in Windsor Forest for this purpose, and its primary object was to contain the Scottish "Stone of Destiny" which that warrior King had brought back with him from Scone.

The first English Sovereign to be crowned in it was the ill-fated Edward II., and since that time with but one exception every British Sovereign has seated himself or herself in it at the Coronation. The solitary exception is that of Mary II. of sinister memory, who was crowned in Westminster Abbey in a chair sent to her by the Pope.

Through the six centuries the old chair has existed it has only left the Abbey upon one occasion, and that was when Oliver Cromwell was formally proclaimed Lord Protector in Westminster Hall. Its usual resting-place is in the chaped of St. Edward the Confessor, and near at hand are the shield and sword used with such effect by Edward III. It is from its position that this chair has received its popular name of "St. Edward's Chair," but of course it had no actual connection with that King and saint.

A curiosity of its construction is that it does not contain a single nail, nor is there any metal of any kind about it. It is joined together by stout oaken pegs, and it has withstood the ravages of time in remarkable fashion. It has, however, received rather severe treatment upon the occasions on which it has been used, nails and tacks having been driven into it most ruthlessly in order to hold the handsome draperies with which it used to be decorated at former coronations. The whole of the chair was evidently at one time gilded and traces of this gilding are yet to be seen. A coronation is the only time in which the Sovereign seats himself in this chair. This, too, is the only occasion upon which it is removed from St. Edward's Chapel. It is placed at the head of five steps in the Sanctuary and directly facing the principal altar of the Abbey, the Queen's Throne being two steps lower. His Majesty does not take his seat in it until he has been acclaimed the true and lawful monarch of the Empire by his assembled subjects, and the crown is then placed upon his head by the Archbishop of Canterbury. He then remains in the chair during the remainder of the service, and, still seated, receives the homage of those present.

The chair is of Gothic design, and is nearly seven feet high from the ground to the pinnacle at the back. Each foot is composed of a beautifully-carved lion—the badge of Edward I. It is one of the finest specimens of thirteenth-century wood-carving known to exist in this country.

The late King Edward was greatly interested in the chair, and was noted to inspect it most carefully as he took his seat in it, while he subsequently paid a private visit to Westminster Abbey in order to examine it more closely.

The "Stone of Destiny" that is situated beneath the chair is, according to legend, the very one upon which Jacob pillowed his head when he had his wonderful vision. Geologists, however, have rather discredited this assertion by stating most definitely that the stone is undoubtedly of Scottish origin, and probably was originally found in Argyllshire. Upon one occasion the Abbot of Westminster was ordered to return this stone to Scotland by the English King. He utterly declined to do this, however, and here it will probably rest for all time.

A promising young sculptor, Mr. Arthur Rogers, A.R.C.A., is now engaged upon the creation of a colossal bronze statue of King George V. THE POPULAR TURBAN.

All the Girls Are Wearing This Natty Little Headgear.

The popular little worsted turbans girls are wearing for outing nowadays are made in the following way:

Materials—Three skeins eight fold Germantown, amber crochet hook No. 6.

Ch. means chain, tr. c. means treble crochet.

Ch. 3, join to a ring.

First row—Ch. 3, make 15 tr. c. in ring, join into 3rd ch.

Second row—Ch. 2, insert hook into 1st ch. draw up a loop, insert hook into first tr. c., using both loops at top of stitch, draw up a loop, yarn over hook draw through all stitches on hook, ch. 1. (This ch. 1 forms an eye). Now, X insert hook in the eye, draw up a loop, insert hook in back loop of stitch, draw up a loop, insert hook in next tr. c., draw up a loop, yarn over hook, draw through all stitches on hook, ch. 1. Repeat from X all around.

Third row—Insert hook into last eye, insert hook into back loop of stitch, insert hook into 2nd ch. at beginning of previous row, insert hook into top loop of first stitch of previous row (5 loops on hook), yarn over hook draw through all loops on hook, ch. 1, then make a star stitch by inserting hook into eye of stitch, insert hook into back of stitch, insert hook into back loop of next stitch, insert hook into eye of next stitch, yarn over hook, draw through all stitches on hook, ch. 1. Make another star stitch, then widen.

To widen, insert hook in eye of stitch, insert into back loop, insert into the same eye where last stitch was made (4 loops on hook), yarn over hook and draw through all loops on hook, ch. 1.

Continue this way, making 2 star stitches, and one widening, all around this row.

Fourth row—Make 3 stars and widen all around row.

Fifth row—Make 4 stars and widen all around row. Now work round and round, making 6 rows without any widening.

Then make two rows of single crochet, using the same color as the border.

Now, to make the border, turn the work, and, working on the wrong side, make 6 rows of star stitches. This throws the border on the right side, when it is turned up.

Finish with one row of single crochet.

To make the button for top of cap, ch. 3 join, make 8 single crochets in ring.

Now make 2 single crochets in each of the 8 just made.

In the next row make X 2 s. c. in first stitch, 1 s. c. in next. Repeat from X around row.

Now make 2 rows of s. c. without any widening.

Then make 1 s. c. in every other stitch until there are no stitches left.

Of No Use to Him.

Two old settlers sat smoking in a cabin far away in the backwoods. No woman's hand had ever desecrated that sanctum, and grime reigned supreme and triumphant. The conversation veered round from state politics to cooking.

"Yaas," said the elder of the two, with a drawl, "I did get one o' them there cookbooks wunst, but I could never do nothing with it."

"How was that?" inquired the other. "What was the hitch?"

"Waal," was the answer, "every one o' them receits begun in the same way with the same words. Every one o' 'em started off with 'take a clean dish'—and I never got no further."

And he slowly replaced his old black clay pipe in his mouth and fell to ruminating sadly on the narrow outlook on the world of human beings as displayed by authors of cookery books.—Dundee Advertiser.

FACTORY BRANCHES

World's Work Says 755 American Factories Have Plants in Canada

The World's Work, a prominent United States periodical, in a recent number contains an article on the town of Welland, which has had such a phenomenal growth in the last five years by reason of the large number of manufacturing industries that have been established there. The World's Work says:

In the little town of Welland, Ontario, are 20 manufacturing plants which have gone from the United States in the last ten years. These include branches of the Plymouth Cordage Company, of Deere & Company, plow makers from Iowa, of the Pittsburg Tube Company, of the United Motors from Detroit, and sixteen others. The town has, in fact, been made by American manufacturing plants. Hamilton, Ont., too, boasts of 36 American industries, including branches of the American Can Company, the International Harvester Company, the Oliver Chilled Plow Works, and the like. And there are other Canadian towns that boast of a similar transplanting of American factories, for 755 companies from the United States have built factories in Canada since 1900. Many of these are larger than the original plants in the United States. The tariff against Canada—which was necessarily met by a Canadian tariff against us—was, of course, designed to protect our manufacturers; but the result has been to drive these 750 establishments out of the country in ten years. Most of them were built on the other side of the border to take care of the Canadian trade. Many, however, moved from the United States because they wished to take advantage either of the lower cost of living for their employes or of the more favorable tariff arrangements that Canada enjoys for her products in European markets.

HIGHER IN CANADA

Prices of Farm Labor and Live Stock Not So Good in the States

Senator Stone, of Missouri, spoke three hours and a half on the Reciprocity question in the United States Senate on Monday, May 1st. He is the leader of the radical Democrats, and in his speech he showed how the United States farmer would benefit by free access to Canadian markets. He set out to prove that American farmers would not be injured, as had been claimed, by competition with a country where it was alleged farm labor and the prices of live stock were lower. He quoted a multitude of figures to show that, if anything, the prices of farm labor and of live stock were higher in Canada than in the United States.

His figures were such a surprise to some of his listeners that they piled him with questions, and for a time half a dozen or more of the Senators gathered in the aisle and pored over Government reports to determine if the statistics were reliable. The particular problem was as to the possibility of the average wage for farm labor in the United States, as a whole, being $19.21 per month, compared with an average in Canada of $30.08. It was finally pretty well agreed that there must be some difference in the conditions, such as board, the statistics having no common source, but being prepared by each country respectively. Following this up, Senator Stone was at pains to show that cattle, horses, sheep and swine were all slightly higher in Canada than in this country, from the figures that he had gathered.

OUR RAW PRODUCTS

These Are Needed by the States, Says Henry C. Long

Before the Intercolonial Club of Boston, Mr. Henry C. Long recently spoke on the advantage to be gained by the Eastern States through Reciprocity with Canada. He dwelt particularly upon the Canadian resources which were needed by the States. In part he said:

"The time has come now, when the shipments of foodstuffs from the United States in any other form than that of the finished product must cease. That business must come from Canada now, and Canada is ready and able and willing to supply it. It has more agricultural land in it than the whole of Europe. It has more coal in it than the whole of Europe. It is fine for cattle, horses, hogs and other domestic animals. They can be raised as cheaply, as readily and as safely as in the United States. Packing houses are going up in all the important cities of Western Canada. Stock endures the winters of North Western Canada better than it does in New England. The amount of oil in Western Canada seems unlimited. The country is wonderfully supplied. The lakes and rivers will make mighty inland waterways which will drift the commerce down toward the Great Lakes, and thence through the ports of Montreal, Boston and New York City. The connecting up of the port of Boston with Canada will open up to Canada new markets which she now scarcely dreams of and it will open up to Boston a market and commerce before which her men will stand simply dazed. Grain grows in fine quality all the way to the Arctic Circle and all kinds of vegetables that we raise in New England grow well in Western Canada as far north as the Arctic Circle. The day will return when New England will not be unknown in the iron industry. When the Erie Canal is done we can have the Lake Superior ores delivered on the south shore of New England as cheaply as they can be delivered at Pittsburg, and in order to make first-class iron they must mix the Lake Superior ores with other ores. These we can get from Canada. There is in Ungava, which is the northern half of Labrador, as much iron as there is on the Lake Superior region, which can be delivered into New England ports cheaper than the Lake Superior ore can be delivered at Pittsburg."

The international conference for the preservation of Pacific fauna begins in Washington to-day.

THE CALL OF GROWING EMPIRE

London Times.

The Governments of the Dominions have never in their history been confronted with the full realities of international politics. They have never been called upon to decide between peace and war with a foreign nation. During the stage of their adolescence they have necessarily been dependent for protection on the strength of the Mother Country, and as a natural corollary, they have left to the statesmen of the Mother Country the decision of their foreign policy. They have been almost entirely absorbed, for their own part, in those problems of internal development, the solution of which was in the first instance their best contribution to the common strength of the Empire. That state of affairs is plainly coming to an end in these days, coming to an end more rapidly than the most far-seeing of political prophets would have ventured to predict a few years back. The Dominions have already reached the stage at which circumstances compel them to look beyond their borders. With the accomplishment of South African Union the last of them has definitely achieved the status of a nation, and their self-respect as nations is leading them, in one form or another, to undertake a growing share of the burden of defending their borders. Simultaneously the problems of their population are becoming more acute; they are acquiring commercial and industrial interests which are not identical, and in some cases actually conflict with those of these islands; they are being driven at a dozen points into practical world-politics on their own account. We may recognize gladly that, in their dealings with these new external questions, the leading statesmen of the Dominions are showing every year a keener sense of their responsibilities to the empire.

But the broad fact remains that there is no real security that any Imperial problem, whether of population or defence of commerce, can be handled safely and satisfactorily so long as there is no mutual understanding of the obligations of the five British nations to one another and to the Empire as a whole. It has become impossible under modern conditions to continue a system, or which foreign policy remains a sealed book to all but one of the five partners. In this matter the Dominions which have taken the lead in so many developments of the Imperial body, cannot move of their own accord, for the simple reason that their history has kept them in ignorance of the issues involved. The Imperial Government alone possesses the traditions and knowledge requisite to elicit a complete discussion of all the conditions which rule our relations with one another and with the world outside.

BLAZE ON STORE ROOF

Damage of $150 at Premises of J. J. Cocks

Blaze Spread Rapidly on dry Shingle Roof

A stubborn fire commenced this morning about 11 o'clock at the store of J. J. Cocks, corner of George and Dublin streets, and it was not till after three-quarters of an hour of steady work by the firemen that the blaze was completely extinguished. The fire is thought to have been caused by sparks from the chimney of the building, which ignited the dry shingles on the southern side of the roof and which spread with alarming rapidity. Mr. William Menzies, of Mann's planing mill, first noticed the flames and Miss Emmerson, the bookkeeper 'phoned in an alarm while Mr. Menzies sent in a second call from the fire alarm box at the corner. The brigade responded very promptly, arriving on the scene in between three and four minutes' time.

The estimated damage Mr. Cocks stated would be about $150, including stock damaged by water.

The whole roof was scorched and burned and the cornice at the front. The fire on the south side was first smothered, but along the front where the blaze was underneath the shingles it required concentrated attention on the part of the brigade before it was effectively put out. The cornice had to be ripped off to do this.

The chemical tanks were also used. While the firemen were as careful as possible, still a considerable amount of water penetrated the store below and caused damage to the grocery stock of Mr. Cocks, whose premises will require a new roof and cornice.

FIRE OUTSIDE CITY LIMITS

Neighbors Drew Water From Creek and Protected Buildings

The property of Mr. Sucee, North Monaghan, was in great danger of being completely wiped out by fire this afternoon. A large pile of fence rails, near the house and barn, became ignited in some manner. The fire department was called out, but by the time they got to St. Peter's cemetery, which is nearby, a number of neighbors had arrived on the scene with teams and barrels, and they drew water from a nearby creek, which was used effectively in saving the property. The rails were destroyed.

MAYOR MORROW TELLS WHY COUNCIL HAS NO CONFIDENCE IN COMMISSIONER DUGGAN

A Letter Explaining the Position Taken by the City Council—Mr. Duggan's Actions in the Power Matter Are Severely Criticised—An Answer to the Letter Written by Mr. O'Connell.

To The Editor of The Review.

The decision of the City Council not to engage Mr. Duggan as Industrial Commissioner has been freely and severely criticized in some quarters, and while it will not be necessary to reply to all that has been said and published, yet, with your permission it might not be amiss to present some of the facts by which the action of the Council was influenced and determined.

There were two main factors to consider, when the question came up. One was, what had been accomplished by the Commissioner during the past year, and judging from that, whether the Council would be justified in spending sufficient of the people's money to continue him in the office as an official of the Council. Mr. Duggan has pointed to two industries as the fruit of his work, the Bonner Worth Co., and Gold Medal Camp Furniture Co. As to the first, Mr. Bonner wrote me, and I handed his letter over to the Commissioner, who invited Mr. Bonner to visit Peterboro. Mr. Bonner and Mr. Worth came, met members of the Council, and the whole matter of the bargain between them and the city was made and concluded by the members of the Council. As to the other firm, which we hope will build a factory here, its representatives visited Peterborough and selected a site before Mr. Duggan came to Peterborough. On this phase of the matter, therefore, there did not appear to be sufficient result to satisfy the Council.

The other main factor was his actions in the power matter in which his course has not been straightforward. Leaving out the scheme which he took up last year, and in connection with which he visited lake front towns, but which apparently fell through, let us consider what occurred this year. At the organization meeting of the Council, Ald. Bradburn and myself were appointed a Power Committee. We promptly took action in more than one direction, and while the members of the Council are aware of what has been done by the committee, it would not at present be in the public interest to refer to more than the application made to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. In January, I, as Mayor, wrote to the Hon. Adam Beck and asked him to have that Commission make a report on the powers from Lakefield to Hastings, for the purpose of advising the Council as to which of the powers it would be best for the city to secure or from which to procure power. Mr. Mr. Beck replied that the Commission would do so. A little later the City Solicitor, saw Mr. Beck in Toronto, urged an early report, and was assured that no time would be lost, and that the engineers would consult me when they came to Peterborough. I also interviewed Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P. about the expected report and he saw Mr. Beck more than once to make doubly sure that no time would be lost. Then Mr. Bradburn informed me that the report was about ready, and that Mr. Beck would be pleased to assist the Council further in any way he could. The members of the Council were called together and Mr. Bradburn was asked to meet them, which he did and repeated to them the information and Mr. Beck's offer. The Council decided that it would be well to have Mr. Beck meet the Council, and give any explanations in connection with the report that he might consider useful, and Mr. Bradburn was asked to convey the invitation to

THE VICTORIA MEMORIAL IN LONDON

FUNERAL OF ARCHBISHOP WAS ATTENDED BY PROMINENT MEN

Toronto Prelate's Body Laid at Rest in Vault—Magnificent Tribute by Bishop Fallon.

Toronto, May 13.—"Fergus Patrick McEvay, once Bishop of London, late Archbishop of Toronto, but over all a priest of the holy church of Jesus Christ, farewell from all of us until we meet again with God in heaven."

With these words the Right Rev. Michael Fallon, Bishop of London, concluded an eloquent oration over the mortal remains of his grace Archbishop McEvay. It was a fitting tribute by a strong man to a strong man, and more appropriate because the one who spoke was the ecclesiastical successor in London to the one who had departed, who took up the crozier he had lain down to assume a larger responsibility and was now completing the work he had left unfinished.

No more impressive scene has ever been witnessed within the stately walls of St. Michael's Cathedral than that of yesterday. The ornate decorations, sufficient in themselves to form a suitable background for such a ceremonial, were amplified by the funereal drapings; the gathering of the prelates around the casket with the gorgeous colorings of the papal vestments; the sombre hue of the densely packed throng in the pews mingled with the white surplices of the visiting clergy in the centre of the nave; these, and the striking figure of the speaker in the pulpit, clothed in a simple black cassock with a broad girdle of purple, towering above and reaching over the vast throng made a picture which those who saw will never forget. And in the closing moments of his remarks, when Bishop Fallon said, "Eternal rest come unto him. The Lord let perpetual light shine upon him, and may his soul and the souls of all the faithful departed, through the mercy of God, rest in peace," there was a spiritual quickening; a wave of emotion passed over all, as it might be when the voice of the archangel was speaking. The soft intoning of the organ which followed and the sweet voices of the choristers as they chanted the responses of the requiem of peace. Not a few said, "Even as he who succeeded his grace to the see of London, and has so fittingly expressed what was in every hear, may he also succeed him in the archiepiscopal see of Toronto, here to implement the work which has been so abundantly endowed with his blessing and spirit."

Shortly after 10 o'clock the procession of clergy arrived, the bishops and prelates passing into the chancel and grouping themselves in order of procedure around the casket. The archbishop's throne was appropriately left vacant, while on the opposite side a canopy had been erected for his excellency Mgr. Stagni, papal ablegate, who, robed in purple and gold with mitre and cope, conducted the high mass of the requiem.

The archbishops present were: Archbishop Bruchesi, Montreal; Archbishop Begin, Quebec; Archbishop Gauthier of Ottawa.

GENERAL BERNARDO REYES

who is mentioned as a possible successor of Diaz as President of Mexico.

MEDIATORS ARE SEEKING PEACE

No Official Move Has Been Made in Mexico.

Provisional Government is Organizing System.

Juarez, Mexico, May 13.—The Provisional Government of Mexico made much progress with its work of organization yesterday. Although nothing was done yesterday by officers of the Provinsional Government respecting peace negotiations, the fact that there is a deadlock over procedure became more pronounced. The Federal Government and the Provisional Government are standing their distance, each waiting for the other to make the first move.

Unofficial go-betweens are again busy in an effort to bring the two sides together. They expected to get an audience with Provisional President Madero yesterday, but were not successful. To-day it is expected he will listen to what is believed their new argument, having dissolved their original peace commission of three, the rebels now may conduct their peace negotiations through their newly organized body of foreign relations.

A gleam of hope for peace is contained in the fact that some rebel leaders have declared they would be willing to accept Gen. Diaz's manifesto as sufficient evidence of his intention to resign and go ahead with peace negotiations, providing that Diaz consent to immediate appointment of governors for fourteen of the twenty-seven states and to again transfer power into the hands of the revolutionary party.

On the other hand some of the insurrecto leaders believe that the military successes soon will include Mexico City, whither the Provisional Government will be moved, and that submission at this time hardly would afford a complete transfer of political power.

THE WAR SECRETARY QUIT TAFT CABINET ON APRIL 23

Henry Stimson of New York is Appointed to Succeed Him—Pressure of Private Business.

Washington, May 13.—Secretary of War Dickinson has resigned. President Taft has appointed Henry L. Stimson, recently Republican candidate for governor of New York, in his place.

Secretary Dickinson's resignation was dated April 28, and his action was due to the pressure of his private business in Tennessee. The President's letter of acceptance, dated May 3, shows that in the meantime Mr. Dickinson had offered to sacrifice his private affairs if his leaving the Cabinet during the Mexican troubles should embarass the President. The correspondence is of the most cordial nature.

Jacob M. Dickinson is 60 years old and a lawyer. He was one of the counsel for the United States before the Alaska boundary tribunal, and is a past president of the American Bar Association. While his home is in Nashville, Tenn., and he has served on the Supreme Court Bench of that state, he had a law office in Chicago for years before he became Secretary of War. He has large land interests.

Stimson is a New York lawyer, formerly a partner of Senator Root. He is 43 years old. He served as United States attorney for southern New York, and as such initiated proceedings against the Standard Oil Co., and most of the railroads running into New York, convicting them of rebating. He also prosecuted the Sugar Trust for defrauding the Government and recovered over $3,000,000, besides sending many of the employes and officials to jail. He also prosecuted C. W. Morse, the banker, who is now serving a fifteen-year sentence in Atlanta prison, and James Gordon Bennett of The New York Herald, who had to pay $30,000 fine for publishing indecent advertisements.

Stimson was Col. Roosevelt's choice for Republican candidate in New York last fall for governor, but went down with his party, owing to the dissensions in the Republican ranks and the opposition to Roosevelt's so-called new nationalism.

Mr. Stimson is a mighty hunter and his favorite stamping ground is the Canadian Rocky Mountains district. He has been for many years an enthusiastic militia man and holds a commission as captain in the National Guards.

All Foolish Stories.

Washington, May 13.—Through Secretary of State Knox, President Taft yesterday authorized American Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson at Mexico City to deny in the most positive terms "all foolish stories" of intervention in Mexico by the U. S. Secretary Knox's telegram to Mr. Wilson, which also is to be made public in Mexico, was sent following a session of the Cabinet at which the Mexican tangle took up much of the time.

PREPARING TO DEFEND THE CITY

Strong Opposition Against Forces of Madero at Mexico City.

Special to the Review.

Mexico, May 13.—The authorities are making hurried preparations for the expected attack on Mexico City by the insurgents, under Garibaldi. The garrison is being increased, and cannon are being posted before the public buildings. An anti-foreign outbreak is feared.

FIXED WIRELESS; SAVED LIVES

Hero in the Merida Accident Was Engineer.

Norfolk, Va., May 13.—The passengers and crew of the steamer Merida were landed here at 7 p.m. Perry E. Boulon, an expert engineer, was the real hero of the hour. It was largely through Boulon's assistance that the Farragut's wireless was repaired and Operator Leach's first call for aid, at 5.30 o'clock, was made possible. From the old Dominion liner Hamilton and the battleship Iowa, both 55 miles away came quick response. The Iowa and the Hamilton raced to save lives. The Hamilton won. Just a few minutes after eight o'clock the Hamilton sighted the Admiral Farragut, and in half an hour had lifeboats out. Within two hours three hundred and twenty-nine passengers shifted from the Farragut to the Hamilton. The Merida's lights were extinguished ten minutes after the collision. Passengers were thrown from their beds in state rooms and bunks below. Ship's officers quieted women passengers, three or four of whom having infants in their arms rushed to the deck in their night clothes.

Two scare Mexican refugees were among the Merida's passengers, bound for the United States and Europe. One passenger is said to have been a Roman Catholic archbishop enroute to Rome.

One woman said she lost $1,000 in gold, deposited with the Merida purser, and half a carload of tropical birds, which she was importing. The secretary to the Italian legation in Mexico lost eight trunks, and there were many other losses equally as great.

NORTHERN STATES FARMERS FIGHT

Agriculturists Strong Against the Reciprocity Bill.

Special to The Review.

Washington, May 13.—The farmers of the Northern States are making such a determined fight against the reciprocity bill that it has been found necessary for the Senate Finance Committee to extend the present hearings over into next week. The National Grange threatens a political disaster to those responsible for the treaty.

REPORTED MUTINY AT FEZ GARRISON

Tangier, May 13.—A report reached here to-day that the garrison at the city of Fez had mutinied, and that the capture of the city by the besieging rebels was imminent.

TRIED TO DIE BY INHALING GAS

Girl Secretary to Dr. Latson Calls Him "God Man."

Special to the Review.

New York, N.Y., May 13.—Miss Alta Marhovka, secretary to Dr. Latson, physician and mystic teacher, who committed suicide Thursday night, attempted to end her life early to-day by inhaling gas. The girl refers to Dr. Latson as "God man," and states she would gladly have helped him "free his soul." She is now under arrest.

PETAWAWA BLAZE; BUILDINGS GONE

Many Fires Reported in Various Parts of Dominion.

Ottawa, May 13.—The Militia Department was apprised yesterday of a fire at Petawawa military camp on Thursday which destroyed the ordnance stores building, the army service corps building, and the house of Sergt. Slade, the caretaker, entailing a loss of about $25,000. The fire was caused by lighting, which struck the building, and, despite the efforts of a number of men employed in getting the camp ready for the summer training, the buildings and contents were consumed. The loss is made up mainly of the blankets used in camp, a number of Ross rifles, several subtarget guns and transport wagons. The buildings were one-storey frame structures.

Craighurst In Danger.

Craighurst, May 13.—Bush fires are raging furiously all around the Village of Craighurst, causing much alarm to the residents. Unless the high winds that prevail at the present time abate, and rain is forthcoming, the village is in danger of being wiped out. The fire is making rapid strides, fanned by high winds and the village is enveloped in smoke. A number of the male residents are out to fight the flames.

Approaching Bala.

Bala, May 13.—Wm. Carr started a fire Thursday to clear the corner of a chopping. After dinner it was beyond his control and is now across the C.P.R. track. The fire is raging before a high wind eastward along Shanty Bay towards Bala. Buildings will be in danger if it crosses the swamp north of Robertson's Point, as there is no provision of any kind for fighting it.

Lavant Threatened.

Kingston, May 13.—A big bush fire is raging at Lavant, on the line of the Kingston & Pembroke Railway, sixty miles north of here. Mayor Graham was called upon to render assistance last night. The mayor gave Fire Chief Armstrong permission to take the Chatham fire engine and as much hose as he could spare. A special train was made up and left as soon as possible with men and equipment. The report from Lavant states that the fire is about a quarter of a mile from the village. It is believed it will be checked in time to save the buildings in the village. There are less than a dozen houses as Lavant.

A special from Lavant says the employes of the Wilbur Iron Mines have been fighting bush fires for two days and nights, and that if the wind changes, it is sure to strike Lavant. Kingston firemen are at the scene checking fire as best they can.

May Become Serious.

Megantic, Que., May 13.—Forest fires are raging in the Woburn district near here. Between four and five miles square of forest have already been burned over. A large force of men have been rushed to the scene and are now making an effort to stay its progress. Unless rain comes soon, the situation will be serious.

Sworn In as Judge.

Brockville, May 13.—Lt.-Col. Fisher returned to Brockville from Pembroke, where he was sworn in as junior judge of the County of Renfrew by Judge Donohoe. He will enter upon his official duties shortly.

BANK ACT IS LAID OVER

No Revision This Session is Now Settled.

Hon. Mr. Fisher Explains Provisions of Copyright Act.

Ottawa, May 13.—There was a business-like sitting of the House yesterday and a number of Government measures were under consideration.

Hon. W. S. Fielding introduced a bill to extend for one year the charters of the Canadian banks, which expire at the end of every ten years. This probably means that the general revision of the Bank Act will be deferred until next session of Parliament.

Before the consideration in committee of Hon. Mr. Fisher's bill to amend the Copyright Act was taken up, the Minister made some additional explanations in reference to it. He said that under the present arrangements British subjects and bone fide British residents had copyright privileges in Canada. Copyright acts were under consideration, both in the Imperial Parliament and in Canada, and when these were passed, he proposed to extend Canadian privileges throughout the Empire.

Under the new Canadian act citizens of countries outside the international union were not given copyright privileges in Canada unless there was a special arrangement with that country. The new bill provided for making such arrangements.

It was a question as to whether Canada should remain in the union under the new act. Under the present system a country outside of the union could get privileges in all countries in the union by obtaining copyright from one of its members. The United States was a case in point. That country, while not a member of the union, could get all its advantages without giving any concessions in return. Under the circumstances, Mr. Fisher thought it would be as well for Canada to withdraw from the union, unless an arrangement could be made whereby an outsider's privilege within the union would be restricted to the one country within which it had been obtained. The Minister further stated his belief that if Canada were to withdraw from the union, several countries would immediately take steps to secure privileges within the Dominion. Progress was reported.

The Ontario & Quebec Railway bill, to which there have been objections, was allowed to stand in the absence of the promoter. Mr. Graham suggested that a good title for the railway might be the Ontario and Abitibi.

The bill to incorporate the Grain Growers' Grain Co. passed through committee and was given a third reading. There was a short discussion over the title, in view of the wide powers sought by the promoters. W. S. Middlebro of North Grey suggested that it should change to the Grain Growers' Trading Co. In that case, he said, nobody would be misled.

Finding that the western Conservatives were against changing the name of the company, the question was dropped.

The resolutions to increase the salaries of postoffice employes were discussed in committee. The total amount involved was $51,850.

In reply to Mr. Taylor of Leeds Mr. Lemieux said that letter-carriers delivery was established in places of twelve thousand inhabitants. This was the rule, but the practice was to apply it to towns of between ten and twelve thousand people.

Mr. Taylor said he had seen it mentioned in the newspapers that Brockville, Hon. Mr. Graham's constituency, with nine thousand people, was to get a letter-carrier delivery. Mr. Lemieux, however, stated that he had not heard of it himself.

Jos. Russell (Toronto) pointed out that junior mail clerks got less in the beginning than mail carriers, but had no allowance for clothing.

Mr. Lemieux said he was quite willing the consider the question of supplying railway mail clerks with uniforms. He also expressed himself as inclined to the view that Canada should follow the example of the United States and other countries and provide more distinctive and ornate mail cars.

The Minister then made reference to the various increases which have been given to the service recently, and intimated that there would be more in the future.

The resolutions were passed shortly after midnight and bills based upon them were given first reading.

Confessed to Thefts.

Kingston, May 13.—A fifteen-year-old boy, found guilty of many petty thefts from city stores, was given a year in the industrial school. Merchants had been complaining for months of the thefts. The lad confessed.

Kingston Canadian Club.

Kingston, May 13.—Sir George Gibbons was the guest of the Canadian Club at the noon-day luncheon. He spoke on the work of the International Waterways Commission.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME

Mayor Morrow has missed his calling. He should be letter-writer in ordinary to the King.

Queen Mary will have a coronation train of twenty yards, but it won't be in more than one section.

That Ottawa man who beats himself for supposed laziness ought to be employed on a watering cart around this town.

Those rowing club fellows ought to be able to do a pretty good stroke of business.

When a man gets mad and goes up in the air, he is in the higher critic class.

The Mayor of Ottawa won't go to the coronation because he would have to sit on the fence. Mayor Morrow has to stay home to sit on the industrial commissioner.

SOUR RISINGS FROM STOMACH

Those Who Experience Fullness and Pain After Meals, Stomach Disorders, and Indigestion, Should Read Below.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

TAFT AS ORACLE

The Liberal organs are driven to explaining that President Taft is no oracle, that he is mistaken about the effect of the reciprocity pact in killing all chance of an imperial commercial band. But they cannot succeed in convincing the thinking Canadians that Taft, who inaugurated the reciprocity negotiations, and is the chief American sponsor for the movement, does not know why the United States is seeking it. No one knows the reasons that lie behind, better than the genial President. And he says: "Another, and a very conclusive reason for closing the contract is the opportunity which it gives us to increase the supply of our natural resources, which, with the wastefulness of children, we have wantonly exhausted. The timber resources of Canada, which will open themselves to us inevitably under the operation of this agreement, are now apparently inexhaustible. . . . There are other natural resources which I need not stop to enumerate, which will become available to us as if our own if we adopt and maintain commercial union with Canada; and this is one of the chief reasons that ought to commend the Canadian agreement to the farseeing statesmanship of leaders of American public opinion.

And this: "Ought we not, then, to arrange a commercial agreement with Canada if we can, by which we shall have direct access to her great supply of natural products? Should we not now, therefore, before their policy has become too crystallized and fixed for change, meet them in a spirit of real concession, facilitate commerce between the two countries, and thus greatly increase the natural resources available to our people?"

REPRESENTATIVE OPINIONS

Thomas C. Shotwell, an American writer in the New York American says—"The reciprocity agreement will check the east and west development of Canada, and make that country a business part of the United States, with lines of traffic running more to the north and south. Reciprocity will really cut Canada into two countries. The section east of Lake Superior will merge with the New England and Eastern States, while the great agricultural section west will become a part of the great west of the United States."

The New York Times says—The agreement opens the channels of commerce northward and southward, and practically puts an end to the policy of the British Tories, which aims at blocking these channels and directing the currents of trade eastward across the ocean to the special gain of England. Incidentally our acceptance of the agreement would also destroy the hope of the British Tories to establish a tariff wall about the markets of England, with the avowed purpose of reducing American trade.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says—The fears of the British as to the political results of reciprocity with the United States are soundly based, for with the closer commercial relations which will result, there will come a unity of political sentiment between the people of our country and those of Canada. The people of Canada have ever been friends with us, and as the years go by that friendship will become stronger, until it produces first, alliance, and then, possibly, union.

* * *

The St. Paul Pioneer Press says—The dream of a federated British colonial empire closed against us by preferential duties and trade agreements is vanished forever if this reciprocity agreement is consummated.

* * *

The Detroit Free Press says—The principal merit of the agreement is political and social. It will, it is hoped—and confidently hoped—be the beginning of the end of the stupid separation of two halves of a continent which is inhabited by substantially one people.

The Minneapolis Journal says—The Taft policy spells not only North American commercial union, but also the doom of British imperialist's unity. Too late, provided Congress acts, the British are awakening to the value of the prize they so fatuously rejected. Too late, if Congress rises to a level of this, perhaps the greatest piece of statesmanship effected by an American President since Thomas Jefferson annexed the west.

To-day England is our best customer, and Canada our third best. But our foreign trade wanes, and that of Canada grows. If we push Canada into England's arms, the trade arrangements between the two will tend more and more to shut us out.

A MYSTERY

The Galt Reporter says that the cost of electric lighting in some cities in Ontario—prices that will be charged for Hydro electric power—are as follows, the figures being the cost of lighting a medium sized residence consuming 200,000 watts of current per annum.

London	$ 9.00
St. Catharines	11.90
St. Thomas	12.15
Woodstock	12.20
Galt	12.20
Stratford	12.80
Berlin	13.28
Peterboro	14.00
Brantford	15.30
Owen Sound	16.00
Guelph	18.00

Inasmuch as Hydro electric power in Peterborough is still in the minds of the dreamers, we don't quite follow the Reporter's method of arriving at the Peterborough price.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A blinding snow storm in Winnipeg makes Peterborough people reflect that there are worse things than dust in May after all.

Brantford Y.M.C.A. has raised $117,000 in three days. That is "going some." Probably the local Y.M.C.A. would like to get into the game. How much in excess of $117,000 would it get?

Congressman Summers, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., says that the reciprocity bill will be greatly amended before it passes the Senate. In this case a change will give reciprocity a rest.

Moved and seconded and carried unanimously, that the City Council be asked to provide a fund for the purchase of a commodious cemetery for the Board of Health. Flowers gratefully declined.

Fifty thousand dollars will be spent on Rideau Hall in preparation for the coming of the Duke of Connaught. That is a mere bagatelle compared to what sassiety will spend in trying to cope with the occasion.

Sir William Ramsay, a famous archaeologist has discovered that the Stone of Destiny that reposes under the chair on which British sovereigns are crowned, is only a Scotch stone, and that it did not come from Bethel where Jacob was supposed to have slept on it when he dreamed of the ladder that extended up to heaven. How these modern iconoclasts do like to destroy the happy illusions. No man will feel safe in believing anything some of these days.

Now that the power report is in the hands of the City Council, and Hon. Adam Beck has given his address to the people, what is the next step? The people at large do not know whether there is any option or agreement with the Otonabee Company for the possible purchase of the company, or not. Industrial Commissioner Duggan says that he has a document which would bind the company to sell at $225,000, but the president Mr. Ferguson, has said that he has given no option or agreement or tentative offer over his signature as the chief executive of the company. Hon. Mr. Beck is beginning to talk of Healey's Falls, the settling of the difficulties in connection with which may take a year or two, or three, as these legal matters never move quickly. What is the next step?

Wood's Phosphodine, The Great English Remedy. WORKING ON THE C.N.O. RAILWAY

Mr. Bert Costick Almost Became a Cripple

But his trouble was caused by the Kidneys, and he found quick relief and complete cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Barnsdale Lake, Joseph, Ont., May 12. "Thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills I am in perfect health again." So says Mr. Bert Gostick, a well-known resident of this place. "Before I left the old country" he states, "my breath was bad and my urine was milky. When I came to this country I worked on the C.N.O. Railway, and while there I was taken with pains in my back and Kidneys. I went to a doctor but he did me no good.

"I got so bad that when I came home from work I could not stand up straight and my limbs seemed twice their usual size.

"Reading of Dodds' Kidney Pills I decided to try them, and after taking five boxes I found myself perfectly cured of all my troubles."

Notice how gradually but surely Kidney Disease was getting Mr. Gostick into its clutches. First the urine then pains in the back, then swollen limbs! But the cure was swift and certain when he used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Unavoidable Delay.

A woman went before the magistrate and modestly inquired:

"Your honor, can I have a warrant for the arrest of my husband? He boxed my ears yesterday."

"Certainly, ma'am," replied the judge. "I will make out a warrant on the ground of assault and personal injuries."

"Can I fetch the warrant in about a month?"

"In a month? Why won't you take it at once?"

"Please, your honor, when my husband slapped my face I took my rolling pin and hit him on the head so that he had to be removed to the hospital. The doctors say, however, that he will be on his legs again in a month."

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson

Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE AINSLEE MAGAZINE COMPANY

The planter did not reply, for it is somewhat difficult for a but newly ruined man to sense the full humor of his condition. In silence he drew toward him the pen and ink, while for a long moment he stared at the white sheet of paper, upon which he was about to give title to all which he owned. He and his children were beggars, total and complete. This was the turning of the tide, his royal homecoming. For a moment he bowed his grizzled head; then, shutting his teeth against all thoughts of the future, seized the quill pen. For a Randall must show the world how it can lose. A Randall must be beaten at nothing—even at playing the fool.

"Yoh name, suh?" he courteously inquired, turning to the young stranger who had proved so fortunate.

"Eugene Kirby, sir."

"What?" exclaimed the planter in a dazed manner. "I thought, suh"—

"Oh, the colonel sometimes calls me Mr. Jackson because he thinks I resemble the general," lightly replied Cameo Kirby as, head between hands, he stared gravely at the table. "Any one will tell you my name is Eugene Kirby—even the Texas tender knows it."

"Ah, the General. I have a boy, suh, whom we affectionately call by that name," replied Mr. Randall irrelevantly, staring at the ceiling. "I have three children, suh. There is Tom and Adele and the General. Their mother is dead, suh. And yoh say yoh name is Eugene Kirby. Very strange, suh. I know the Kirbys of Plaquemine, suh. No relation, I suppose. But yoh pardon, suh."

And, with a hand now steady and firm, he wrote and signed the deed to the Randall plantation and, with a bow, handed it to the gambler whose father he had befriended; the gambler whose reputation was said to be the worst on the river; the son of the man who had been his nearest neighbor and closest friend.

This accomplished, Mr. Randall arose unsteadily and walked to the door, where he turned and for a moment surveyed the smoke fouled room with its litter of empty bottles. And if for a moment a fleeting realization of the very thorough manner in which he had been victimized permeated his throbbing brain no hint of it was depicted in face or bearing.

"Good evening, gentlemen," he said gravely, "and thank yoh for the obligation. Good evening." Head erect, he walked out and very softly closed the door.

Kirby resumed his preoccupied attitude at the table, while Moreau, carelessly lighting a cheroot and pouring himself a drink, sprawled elegantly over an adjacent couch.

"Well, I calculate that's the easiest mark that ever came our way," he observed, with a laugh. "Green as the everlasting hills," quietly pocketing Mr. Randall's wallet, a delicate maneuver which Kirby neglected to note. "I calculate this is the first time yoh and I ever played together, eh? Yoh're a deuce of a hand at the cards, my boy—never saw yoh equal befoh. I take it, yoh partner, Mr. Larkin Bunce, is not with yoh this trip or yoh wouldn't have so unceremoniously doubled up with me. Or perhaps yoh two have fallen out, eh? If so, suh, I will be happy to make our impromptu partnership permanent."

Kirby swung slowly around and fixedly regarded his magnificent and amiable companion. "Since when have you contemplated such an admirable partnership?" he blandly inquired.

"Ever since I first saw yoh play, Kirby. Come; yoh partner, Bunce, is crude—a blubber faced Yankee, with no manners whatever, suh. But yoh and I are gentlemen and would make the best team on the river. I consider our play tonight the biggest haul in a decade, and I promise yoh moh like it, foh I never go in foh picayune affairs. My fingers are growing a little too stiff foh skillful manipulation, and I frankly own I haven't yoh delicate and admirable finesse. But I have the manner, Kirby, and can rope the cattle for yoh to brand, suh. I'll guarantee yoh the biggest gams on the river."

"You will oblige me, sir," replied the other, carefully lighting a cheroot, "by employing the prefix to my name—if ever in the future I am unfortunate enough to have you address me. Permit me to inform you that you are a blank scoundrel, sir! I cannot be too emphatic concerning that statement. Whenever I form a partnership with you I will be more qualified for a front seat in hades than I am at the present moment. Why, you low, thieving swamp cat," he cried, losing all self control, "how dare you think I gamble like you—by getting unsuspecting victims drunk and then robbing them? I watched you outrageously cheat Mr. Randall and ply him with liquor in order to cover your characteristically clumsy manipulation of the cards, and if I stepped in tonight and stooped to emulate the type of game which you solely play it was in order to save your victim from complete and total ruin. It is unnecessary to say that when Mr. Randall is capable of estimating what has occurred and is once more himself this deed will be returned to him."

"Now, Kirby, yoh can't play that game on me," cried Moreau, jumping to his feet. "Yoh come in on my kill and then try to do me out of the spoils. That don't go, Kirby. I'm too old a hand. Keep that line of talk for sapheads. The Randall plantation is sold under the hammer, and I get two-thirds or"—

"Or what?" coldly demanded Kirby, carefully pocketing the deed. "You know me, Mr. Moreau, so don't try to pull a derringer. It's considerably safer to wait until my back is turned. I say Mr. Randall himself will destroy this deed and that his plantation will not be sold, and you may believe it or not, just as you like. That ten thousand you virtually stole I cannot, unfortunately, refund; but, believe me, that is the entire extent of your stealings. For once in your life you are going to release a victim before he has been completely sucked dry; for once in your life you are going to be half-way decent"—

"Decent?" bellowed the other. "That's a compliment from one of yoh standing"—

"Like yourself, I game for a living, Mr. Moreau," coldly interrupted Kirby; "but, unlike yourself, I endeavor to do so honestly, and I have never yet stooped to the methods which you exclusively employ. Although you are seemingly not aware of the fact, there is a distinct difference between a gambler and a thief. Once I had the privilege of meriting the friendship and esteem of gentlemen like Mr. Randall, and I now warn you to keep your claws off him. If ever in the future I catch you bleeding him as you did this evening you and I will have a different sort of discussion. For your own sake I beg you to remember this."

SUFFERED GREATLY FROM COLIC

Mrs. Aime Guenette, L'Immaculee Concepcion, Que., writes: "My little boy suffered greatly from colic. I gave him castor oil and other medicines without helping him in the least. One day I saw Baby's Own Tablets advertised, so wrote for a box. I found them so good that I always keep them in the house and would use no other medicine for baby. The experience of Mrs. Guenette has been that of thousands of other mothers. Not only do the Tablets cure colic, but they cure constipation, vomiting, indigestion, make teething easy, banish worms and make baby bright, active and happy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Bryan at Galt.

Galt, May 13.—William Jennings Bryan, the noted American politician, wh ois on a tour through western Ontario, arrived in Galt yesterday morning, having motored here from Paris, where he lectured Thursday night. At 1 o'clock he was entertained to a luncheon at the Imperial Hotel, which was attended by over a hundred prominent citizens. Mr. Bryan delivered a strong address, in which he supported the Y.M.C.A., and outlined the great work the association is doing in the uplift of men. Speaking of the association as a co-operative institution, Mr. Bryan digressed from his subject somewhat to commend the system of annuities recently inaugurated by the Canadian Government. For years, he said, he had been trying to figure out a similar scheme for the benefit of the citizens of the United States. Only yesterday did he learn that such a system was in force in Canada. He could not understand why every civilized country did not follow the lead of Canada and encourage the people to put something by for the day when they would be old and could not work.

FUNERAL OF ARCHBISHOP

The bishops in attendance were: Bishop Dowling, Hamilton; Bishop Latioleppe, vicar apostolic of Temiskaming; Bishop Weber, head of the Roman Catholic College at Berlin; Bishop Bruneau, Nicolet; Bishop Carey, St. John, N.B.; Bishop Macdonnell, Alexandra, Ont.; Bishop Fallon, London; Bishop O'Connor, Peterboro; Bishop Feehan, Fall River; Bishop Hickey, Rochester.

Those in the first seats were: Premier Whitney, A. C. Macdonnel, M.P., South Toronto; Edmund Bristol, M.P., Centre Toronto; Hon. Dr. Reaume, M.P.P., Minister of Public Works; Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands and Mines; Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General of Ontario, and Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary.

Behind them were seated Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, representing the Dominion Government; George Clare, M.P., Waterloo, and George Gordon, M.P., Nipissing.

Next came Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and ... Justice Latchford.

The ceremony of robing the celebrant lasted a few minutes, and then the organ pealed forth in the solemn mass of requiem, and the choir sang in Latin:

"Eternal rest give them, O Lord; and let perpetual light shine about them. A hymn, O Lord, becometh thee in Zion; and a vow shall be paid to thee in Jerusalem, O Lord, hear my prayer, and all flesh shall come to thee."

The confiteor was recited, and then came the Kyrie Eleison, during which prayers were offered up to the Lord to have mercy on the soul which had passed away.

At the conclusion of the sermon by Bishop Fallon, final absolution was given, the prelates coming close around the casket and sprinkling the body with holy water. The funeral cortege then moved off to Mount Hope Cemetery, where the body was temporarily committed to the vault to await a decision as to the final disposition.

After Eight Years.

New York, May 13.—After eight years in the Arctic ice pack, a message despatched by balloon from the headquarters of the Baldwin-Ziegler polar expedition in Franz Josef Land, on June 24, 1902, is now in the hands of the original sender, Evelyn Briggs Baldwin. Baldwin sent out a series of messages stoutly sealed in small casks, and suspended by a special releasing device from balloons. When the balloon sank low enough for one of the casks to touch water or ice, that cask was released and the balloon freed of just that much weight, sailed on again until another cask touched and was released. So the process went on until all the casks were deposited. The message now in Mr. Baldwin's hands is the second that has come back to him.

Carroll Must Hang.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 13.—The assizes closed yesterday, at the last duty devolving upon Justice Britton being the sentencing of Wm. Carroll, to hang on July 26 for the murder of Joseph Taillon, in a lumber camp back of Blind River in November. Carroll received sentence in the same stoic manner, which has characterized his attitude throughout the trial. He had nothing to say, and in fact did not seem to realize his position.

It is believed that clemency will be shown in Carroll's case, as he is an old man and had been confined in asylum at London in 1902, from which he made his escape.

Frank Bishop and Charles Burgess, charged with rape upon the person of Mary Arseneau, at Michipicoten, were discharged.

The grand jury in submitting its report touched upon the necessity for a new jail and court house. It is felt that the present building is not adequate for the importance of the district.

Dr. Carman Called.

Montreal, May 12.—Dr. Carman, general superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, took the witness stand in the Workman libel case yesterday and gave evidence on points of Methodist belief involved in the alleged assertions of Dr. Workman. Dr. Carman claimed that from his position his testimony could be regarded as the voice of the Methodist Church. His statements on points of Methodist belief, he declared, were the interpretations of the Methodist Church courts. His testimony on many points was directly opposed to that of Dr. Workman, who in testifying Wednesday refused to admit that the beliefs which he held were not in accord with the standards of Methodism.

SICK HEADACHES AND NERVOUSNESS

"Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured Me.

Lakelet, Ont., May 12th, 1910.

"It is my firm belief that every woman should take "Fruit-a-tives" if she wants to keep herself in good health.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives", I was constantly troubled with what is commonly known as "Nerves" or severe Nervousness. This extreme Nervousness brought on the most violent attacks of Sick Headache, for which I was constantly taking Doctor's medicine.

Constipation was also a source of great trouble for which the Doctors said "I would have to take medicine all my life" but "Fruit-a-tives" has banished these troubles and I am a well woman.

When I started taking "Fruit-a-tives", I took four at a time, but have reduced the dose so that it is only necessary for me to take one in a week, and that one "Fruit-a-tives" tablet every week keeps me well". Mrs. FRED GADKE.

It is wonderful how quickly women get better when taking "Fruit-a-tives". These famous fruit tablets relieve headaches and tone up the whole nervous system. They regulate the bowels, strengthen the stomach, stimulate the appetite, and take away that pain in the back. Pale, weak, nervous women should always use "Fruit-a-tives".

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

REV. F. J. SAWERS AT LAKEFIELD

Appreciative Reference to His Work in General

The Lakefield News makes the following reference to the work of Rev. F. J. Sawers at Lakefield—

On Monday last Rev. F. J. Sawers left Lakefield to take up his work as rector of St. Luke's church, Peterborough. This is decidedly a great promotion for him; but it is a promotion that has been well earned. One has but to hear him preach a sermon to learn that he has been gifted by nature with much more than ordinary abilities; his academic standing is a proof of his high scholarship This scholarship and these abilities he most untiringly devoted to his work as pastor of St. John the Baptist church in this village; he has been indefatigable in the discharge of his duties as a minister of the gospel. How his work is appreciated by the people of the parish is shown by the presentation and address which were given to him by his congregation on Monday last. But Mr. Sawers, while here, was more than a clergyman—he was an excellent citizen. He served as a most useful member of the Library Board. He was especially active in promoting and sustaining every moment having a tendency to benefit the young people of the village. He enthusiastically encouraged all sports that have a tendency to make manly toys. All movements of every kind having for their object the betterment of the people of the village had in him a warm supporter. In short, it is not too much to say that Lakefield had no better citizen. Thus it is, that, while all regret his departure, all rejoice at his promotion. All feel assured that this is but the first step on the ladder that leads up to higher things. His future advancements in his chosen calling, which, if his health fails not, are sure to come, will be heard of by no one with greater pleasure than by his old friends in Lakefield.

FIRE AT KEENE

General Store of George Gall Was Destroyed

Special to the Review.
Keene, May 13th.

The frame building occupied by George Gall, general merchant was totally destroyed by fire, last night about eleven o'clock, and only the combined efforts of the residents of the village, saved other structures from being lost.

It is not knonw how the blaze originated. A strong wind blowing at the time, fanned the flames and in a short time, the store and all the contents were destroyed.

It was thought at one time, that the village would be wiped out. The fire spread to other points, but bucket brigades were organized, and while a shed was burned and other buildings scorched, the blaze was finally controlled.

Mr. Galls' loss will be heavy as very little insurance, it is understood, was carried by him, on the stock.

The property was owned by Frederick English.

NORWOOD MASONIC LODGE DEDICATED

Interesting Ceremony Largely Attended—Banquet in the Town Hall

Friday was a red letter day in the history of Freemasonry in Norwood. The brethren had an installation, a banquet and general festivities on their hands, and proved to be worthy Masons and most hospitable hosts.

The old lodge room was destroyed by the fire that swept the centre of the village. Determined to push ahead, premises were secured in a new business building on the main street, and there the lodge has fitted up and equipped one of the most comfortable and handsome lodge rooms in the province. The walls are beautifully decorated, of appropriate design, were made expressly for the lodge in England, the furniture is of dark oak Mission style, and the whole thing exceedingly good. Congratulations were freely offered by visiting brethren.

lodges attended, going to Norwood by auto, and for which service they are indebted to Bros. G. W. Green, J. E. A. Fitzgerald and G. A. Gillespie, who placed their fine cars at service.

The dedication ceremony was performed during the afternoon session, the presiding officer being the M.W. the Grand Master, Bro. McWatt, of Sarnia, assisted by P.G.M. W. Bro. Judge Harding, of Lindsay, and representatives of the Grand Lodge. The rich and beautiful regalia of Grand Lodge was used, and which added to the impressive character of the ceremony. In the evening the local Masons, ladies and visiting brethren gathered in the lodge room, and a pleasant hour was spent, and afterwards adjourned to the town hall, where an elaborate banquet had been prepared. Full justice was done to the good things.

The chairman of the evening, was W. Bro. Pickford, of Norwood Lodge, and who made a very efficient officer, pushing the details of the program through with promptitude. Responses to the several toasts were made by the P.G.M., W. Bro. Judge Harding, of Lindsay; Right W. Bro. McLeod, Newcastle; Bro. Pickens, and Rev. W. Bro. Gall, of Norwood; Bro. Dobbin, and Right W. Bro Kenner and Bro. F. D. Kerr, Peterborough, and W. Bro. Craig, of Norwood.

To the program Miss Pearce contributed an instrumental solo, Miss Duffield a song, Miss Pearce playing the accompaniment.

The proceedings came to an end somewhat abruptly, as at 12 o'clock the electrics were turned off and the gathering dispersed in the dark, a rather unfortunate way of closing up a very delightful evening.

Great credit is due the committee of Norwood Lodge who handled the affair. Everything was done that hospitality could think of or suggest, and the records of the lodge will chronicle a very pronounced success.

Hear Frank Hill, the famous Basso in his magnificent Solo "Ship Ahoy." Mighty fine Soloist To hear him is a treat. At the Minstrels to-night (Saturday). Matinee at 2.30 p.m.

LAID TO REST

The remains of the late Rev. Wm. Bennet, who passed away at the residence of his son, W. J. Bennet, barrister, at 558 Gilmour street, on Wednesday, were laid to rest in Little Lake cemetery yesterday afternoon. The funeral cortege left the house at three o'clock, the service being held at 2.30 Rev. D. A. Thomson, of Hastings, led the service at the residence, and Rev. Geo. Yule, of Winchester, and formerly assistant pastor at St. Paul's, led in prayer.

Rev. Mr. Thomson referred to the noble and godly life of the deceased, and to his active and unselfish career of devotion to the gospel. At the grave side Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Millbrook, conducted the last obsequies. The pall-bearers were all ministers, namely; Rev. Robt. Pogue, Rev. James Rollins, Rev. H. J. Keith, Rev. W. Johnston, of Millbrook; Rev. D. A. Thomson, of Hastings, and Rev. Dr. Marsh, of Springville.

The Salvation Army was also represented by Ensign Merritt, Staff Captain Burrows, of Toronto, and R. C. Braund, the latter an intimate friend of the deceased. The late Rev. Mr. Bennet since his retirement from the ministry, conducted a Bible class at the Salvation Army and was much beloved and respected in Army circles.

TO FORM SOCIETY

Meeting Arranged for Monday Night at Coleman's

A meeting of Englishmen of the city has been called for Monday evening at 7.45 at Coleman's parlors, to form a St. George's Society. A branch of the St. George's Society would be very useful in the city. Many Englishmen arrive week by week, and a little timely help during the first week or so would be appreciated very highly by the majority of the new arrivals. Everyone knows a kind word of welcome for a little friendly action, although nothing in themselves, help many persons struggling on day by day, and therefore the committee in charge of the inauguration of this society trusts that every Englishman in the city will interest himself in it, and by so doing make the lot of some person a little brighter than it otherwise would have been.

MILK BY-LAW TO BE PREPARED; TO BE DELIVERED IN BOTTLES

Recommendation of the Property Committee

Te milk question was the main item of discussion at the meeting of the Property Committee last evening, at which were present Ald. Duncan, chairman; Mayor Morrow, Ald Bradburn, E. H. D. Hall, city solicitor and Dr. McPherson, M.H.O.

The M. H. O. was instructed to prepare a form of by-law with the assistance of the city solicitor which would embody everything that they thought necessary for the proper delivery and care of milk, and to include clauses providing for the purity of milk and that it shall be delivered in bottles which must be strictly clean. This recommendation be submitted to the committee at an early a date as possible. The motion was moved and seconded by Mayor Morrow and Ald. Bradburn.

Ald. Bradburn was strongly for the delivery of milk in bottles. He thought that the milk should be tested and that the milkmen should be compelled to stop changing milk on the streets. The quality of the milk was the most important question in the estimation of the Board. Mr. Hall said that it would cost more to have the milk delivered in bottles but Mr. Bradburn said "well why not let them pay a little more" The Mayor was thoroughly in accordance with the Medical Health Officer's suggestion that a sanitary inspector be appointed.

A letter was read from the Board of Health asking the committee to have all scavengers pay a license of 50 cts. a year in order that the M.H.O. may keep tab on them. Ald. Bradburn moved that the matter be referred to the M.H.O. and the police commissioners.

Nothing was done regarding the question of erecting a fence of some kind on the grounds of the public Library, separating them from the houses just south.

REBUILD BOATHOUSES

Those parties who had boathouses on the bank of the river where the fire occurred recently have asked permission to go ahead and build again. Ald. Duncan said it was many working mens' only source of recreation and pleasure to go down and get out their boats for a sail in the evening, and he thought that they should be allowed to go ahead and build their boathouses again. The Mayor thought that the Council should soon get busy and try and get that water front built up. Finally Ald. Bradburn moved that the committee, with the engineer, at the call of the chairman should go down and inspect the premises.

TESTING APPARATUS

Dr. McPherson was also instructed to go ahead with the purchasing of the milk testing apparatus which will cost about $15 without the motor. He was authorized to go to Toronto and his expenses will be paid. At the same time he will visit London where a meeting is being held shortly to discuss sanitary work.

GARBAGE BY-LAW

The garbage question was not discussed. The fact that the garbage by-law was defeated by such an overwhelming majority in 1908, made it appear in the opinion of the committee that the people did not want a garbage by-law.

THE ROWING CLUB MINSTRELS APPEAR AT GRAND TO-NIGHT

A Jolly Performance, With Clever Jokes and Catchy Music—Special Numbers That Have Made a Reputation in Toronto—To-night at the Grand

If you want to have a good laugh and thoroughly enjoy yourself for a couple of hours, hear the Toronto Rowing Club Minstrels at the Opera House this evening. There are over fifty young men in the aggregation, all of whom are well worth hearing in their different numbers. The first part of the program will be given by the end men and soloists, assisted by their own orchestra. Amongst the numbers that are to be given are: "Ship Ahoy," by Frank Hill; "Moonlight Glide," by Ed. Pevee; "When you and I were Young, Maggie," by James Bryan, and "Darling Chloe," by Victor Lewis.

One of the hits of the program is "Forget Me Not," sung by Bert. Caldwell, and also the barber shop chord, "You're Gwine to Get Something," sung by Bill Leflamme. The chorus is under the direction of Mr. Charles J. Read, and they have been well trained.

The olio consists of a skit entitled "The Insurance Man," and a sketch by Victor Lewis, formerly of Al. Field's Minstrels. Fine buck and wing dancing will be given by Joe Hill. A musical number of importance will be "On Mobile Bay," introducing Leo Hourigan, "the swell stepper." In this he is assisted by ten of the company.

This is the fourth annual tour of the minstrels, and judging from the previous performances, a good show may be expected.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES

Some New Books

The following new books have just been placed on the shelves at the library—

Fiction — The Crisis, Churchill; While Caroline was Growing, Josephine Bacon; John Henry Smith, F. H. Adams; Prodigal Judge, Kester; John Winterbourne's Family, Alice Brown; The Woman in It, Garvice; Helen with the High Hand, Bennett; Panther's Cub, Agnes and E. Castle; Red Pepper Burns, Grace Richmond; People of Popham, Mary E. Wemyss, Six volumes of girls' books by Anna Chaplin Ray.

Autobiographical — The Corsican, Napoleon I.

A Year in a Coal Mine, Joseph Husband; Palestine and Its Transformation, Huntington.

The above are all excellent books in their class. The People of Popham and Red Pepper Burns are very nice stories. John Henry Smith has a humorous turn which will appeal to such readers as prefer to have their literature tinctured with mirth.

Attention is directed to the rules and by-laws of the library which appeared in the Review and Examiner of yesterday's date, and particularly to that one dealing with the reservation of books. So many have been disappointed at not being able to obtain certain books on account of their being always out of the library, that it is just as well to reiterate the fact that by depositing the sum of five cents with the librarian any book in the library may be reserved and the depositer assured of getting it in due course. Wherever possible, persons are notified by telephone in order to allow of as little delay as possible in the receipt of the volume.

The public will be interested in knowing that in a short time there will be a great many more books placed on the shelves. Notice of their arrival will be announced at once in the papers.

OBITUARY

Death of Miss Emeline Hazlitt

At the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank Sanderson, Chemong road, Smith, Miss Emeline Hazlitt entered into rest yesterday about ten o'clock.

Miss Hazlitt was the daughter of the late John Hazlitt, Esq., of Otonabee. For the past ten years Miss Hazlitt has resided in Peterborough with her mother, who preceded her a year and a half ago. Since the death of her mother, Miss Hazlitt's health had been steadily declining. In May, 1910, she took a trip to the west, hoping that she might regain her strength. About four months ago she returned to Peterborough and since that time had been a confirmed invalid at times suffering intense pain. Miss Hazlitt had been a faithful member of St. Paul's church. While not able to engage actively in church work, she will always be remembered as one who rendered valuable assistance in connection with the W.F.M.S. She is survived by one brother, Mr. T. G. Hazlitt, Otonabee, and six sisters, Mrs. Hewson, Quill Lake; Mrs. Millar, Toronto, Mrs. Lancashire, Otonabee; Mrs. Dickson, Quill Lake; Mrs. Sanderson, Smith, and Mrs. Johnston, of Lakefield.

Funeral will take place Monday, May 15th, at two o'clock, from the residence of Mr. Frank Sanderson, Chemong road, to Little Lake cemetery.

Death of Lawrence O'Connor

After an illness of about a year's duration, Lawrence O'Connor passed away at an early hour this morning at the age of 49 years.

The late Mr. O'Connor was born in Ennismore and resided there until about five years ago. He was a carpenter and plied his trade in Ennismore and vicinity until coming to Peterborough in 1906, when he took a position as conductor on the Peterborough Radial Railway and was with the company for four years. He won the esteem of his employers and fellow employees as well as the patrons of the service.

A year ago the late Mr. O'Connor became ill and he removed to the residence of his sister in Ennismore, where he gradually sank. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, but as there was no hope for his recovery he was removed to Ennismore last Tuesday.

The funeral will take place from the late residence at nine o'clock Monday morning to St. Martin's church, and to Ennismore cemetery for interment.

O'Keefe's PILSENER LAGER

The Light Beer in the Light Bottle

Canadians laugh at any talk of the superiority of "imported lagers".

They know that O'Keefe's "Pilsener" Lager is a purer, better beer than anything imported into Canada.

They know that O'Keefe's "Pilsener" is brewed only of the choicest hops and malt—which cannot be said of any American lager.

COLLEGIATE AND PUBLIC SCHOOL BALL LEAGUE GAMES

Dixon's Nine Won From Cresswell's—Centrals 22, King Edwards 10—S. Centrals 8, East City 1.

Although fanning five men in the opening innings of a Collegiate League game at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, Stan. Cresswell was given ragged support by his team mates, and Dixon and his merry men passed the counting station four times and practically won the contest. The final score was 7—4 against Cresswell.

Huycke, for the winners, pitched some good ball, and when he was hit his men fielded nicely, holding Cresswell's braves to one run until the last of the seventh, when they tallied three times.

There was not much hard hitting, though Cresswell's team usually wield the bat pretty freely. This is the second win for Dixon's and the team have yet to be beaten.

The line-ups were as follows:—

Cresswell's—Taber, 1b; Leahy, 2b; Sheehy, ss; Hatrick, 3b; Cresswell, p; Howden, lf; Carlisle, cf; Lynch, rf; Horsefield, c.

Dixon's—Hill, 2b; Corkery, 3b; Phelan, c; Morrow, rf; Dixon, 1b; Knapman, ss; Christopher, lf; Lees, cf; Huycke, p.

Umpire—M. Ferguson.

CENTRALS WON EASILY.

By meeting Campbell's shoots on the nose in the early part of the game, and keeping up the good work throughout, Centrals won a public school senior contest at Boswell's field yesterday afternoon with a score of 22—10. The batting of both teams, and particularly that of the Centrals, was healthy, but the fielding was slow. Skuce, of the King Edwards, copped a difficult long fly and Ken Routley, for the winners, made a grandstand one hand stab at third cushion. The batteries were:

Centrals—Dobson, Long and Kavanagh.

King Edwards—Campbell, Eakins and Frost.

AT THE OVAL.

South Centrals, with Lefty Parker on the hurling heap, put the East City nine away with an 8—1 score. Batteries:—

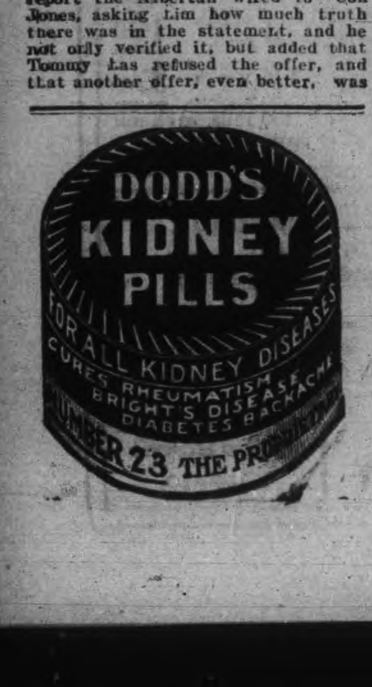
South Centrals—Parker and Haskill.

East City—Anderson, Philips and Johnston.

South Centrals and Centrals meet at the Oval Monday afternoon for what promises to be a well played game. Neither team has as yet entered the loss column.

LACROSSE

This is from the Albertan of Calgary: "Tommy Burns has decided to remain in Calgary as a retired boxer and lacrosse player rather than accept the offer of Con. Jones of something like $10,000 a year to play with the Vancouver team. The story, it must be confessed, sounded pretty much like a lot of superheated atmosphere and free advertising when it first appeared; but the offer was made all right. Just to verify the report the Albertan wired to Con Jones, asking him how much truth there was in the statement, and he not only verified it, but added that Tommy has refused the offer, and that another offer, even better, was being sent by mail. Tommy said yesterday that he wouldn't consider any offer at all, as it was an utter impossibility for him to play lacrosse or any other game because of his game knee that he received in the street car accident in Seattle last last winter. While Tommy Burns is the subject, it might be well to mention the rumor that went the rounds immediately following the announcement. It was hinted around that the offer was such an enormous one that it looked like a put-up job to try to get Tommy into the game to prove that his knee was not in such a hopeless shape as he claimed in his damage suit against the Seattle Street Railway. It would be a good investment for that crowd to put up $10,000 plunks to get Tommy into action. It would mean a cool saving of $40,000 for them. But Tommy wasn't born yesterday or the day before for that matter, and won't be the fall guy for any bunco games like that."



BASEBALL

Dubbie Shea is to get a tryout with the Hamilton ball team of the newly organized Canadian League.

Ross Laing leaves on the 1.01 C.P.R. train, Monday morning, for Montreal where he will reside in future.

Ross is a promising baseball player having caught for the Park Street club in the City League last year.

An important meeting of the Inter-Catholic Baseball League is called for Monday night at the Alphonsus Lyceum.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Found Lafayette's Body.

Edinburgh, May 13.—Digging amid the fire ruins of the Empire Music Hall, in the pit where the counter weights of the iron curtain were sunk, searchers last evening found the body of Lafayette the Great, the vaudeville performer who with a number of his company perished in the fire that destroyed the theatre. A body which previously had been taken from the ruins, supposed to have been that of Lafayette, now proves to have been that of Richards, who acted as Lafayette's double in the carrying out of his illusion.

Another member of the vaudeville company died yesterday, this being the tenth fatality resulting from the fire.

Killed by Fall From Ladder.

Brockville, May 13.—Mrs. James Stewart of Putnam's Corners died at her home as the result of a fracture of the skull while housecleaning. She slipped from a ladder and fell, striking her head on some crockery. The woman never regained consciousness. She was 60 years old.

SHE WAS SURPRISED

When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

Mrs. R. Smith, of Winnipeg, Man., tells an interesting story of relief from almost intolerable sufferings:

"I can hardly tell you how great my sufferings have been. Chronic liver complaint accompanied by biliousness were a daily source of trial to me. Every day I experienced the sickening effects of these ailments. I longed for some medicine that should permanently drive them away.

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure Bowel and Kidney as well as Liver troubles, and keep you healthy. 25c a box at your dealer's. 14

Ford Model T's

It has been estimated by Motor Car Manufacturers that 150,000 automobiles will be built in 1911. Out of this immense quantity 37,500 will be FORD MODEL T's built by the Ford Motor Company.

There is a reason for this exceptionally large number of FORDS and FORD popularity.

The demand for a car of Ford design and Ford quality has been so great that a yearly output of over 30,000 Model T's has been required to supply the demand of buyers.

Ford design and construction, Ford quality in material, strength, durability and service, and ECONOMY in UP-KEEP are features which have caused FORD to manufacture this season ONE-FOURTH of all the cars built in America.

Chest Inflammation

Suffered From a Heavy Cold, Pleuritic Pains in Side—Constant Coughing.

"Anyone that goes through all that I suffered last winter will appreciate the value of a remedy that cures like Nerviline cured me." These are the opening words of the solemn declaration of E. P. Von Hayden, the well-known violinist of Middleton. "My work kept me out late at night, and playing in cold drafty places brought on a severe cold that settled on my chest. I had a harsh racking cough and severe pains darted through my sides and settled in my shoulders. I used different liniments, but none broke up my cold till I used Nerviline. I rubbed it on my neck, chest and shoulders, morning and night, and all the pain disappeared. Realizing that such a heavy cold had run down my system, I took Ferrozone at meals, and was completely built up and strengthened. Since using Nerviline I have no more colds or pleurisy, and enjoy perfect health."

Nerviline CURES CHEST COLDS

It's because Nerviline contains the purest and most healing essences and medicinal principles, because it has the power of sinking through the pores to the kernel of the pain—these are the reasons why it breaks up colds, cures lumbago, stiffness, neuralgia, sciatica, and rheumatism. Refuse any substitute your dealer may suggest—insist on Nerviline only. Large bottles, 50c, trial size 25c. Sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

BEAUTIFUL EYES

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes, and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost if the eye brows are thin and scanty; and the lashes are short and lifeless. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. A two weeks' treatment will bring beauty to your eyes that you have never before possessed. By mail, prepaid, in opal boxes, on receipt of price, fifty cents. B. V. MOTHERS' DAY TO-MORROW

A movement which has proved a very popular one is that of observing the second Sunday in May as "Mothers' Day" by wearing a white carnation. Although only started last year already it has spread widely. In Canada the sponsor for the movements is W. G. Rook of Toronto, President of the Canadian Home Journal. He is receiving cordial assistance from the press and the pulpit.

In the May issue of Canadian Home Journal there is a strong appeal for the observance.

"The small boy with his cut finger, the tiny girl with her torn frock, make an immediate chase for 'Mother' sure of a wisdom that will repair the injury even if some wholesome advice be thrown in about, 'not [illegible] again.' Then came the im[illegible] years when the exclamation 'Mother is so old-fashioned' and 'Mother doesn't understand that things are different now,' are constantly heard. But the years, those unhalting years, march steadily by, and we hear the man and the woman, with their own stern problems to solve, admitting regretfully—'I believe mother was right,' and 'I wish I'd done as mother advised me.'

So, on the breath of a white carnation, on the second Sunday of May will come back the old time memories with their childish joy and pain. It may bring the keenest sorrow in 'remembering happier things' or it may be but a badge in honor of the living mother."

A very touching little episode occurred last May in a very well-known and prominent Toronto family. On the Tuesday morning after Mothers' Day the postman brought a letter from a member of the family who had been a wanderer and rather a black sheep for many years, addressed to the mother of the group. As that dear old person had been with the angels for some time, the letter was opened by a daughter who read as follows— "Dear old Mother—The nurse in the hospital where I am has been telling me about Mothers' Sunday, and I have made up my mind to write to you. I am not long for this life, being far gone in illness, but if you are still alive, I want you to know that I am thinking of you on Mothers' Day. I enclose the white flower nurse pinned on me this morning. Good-bye dear old mother."

CURE THAT COLD

This is Quickly and Pleasantly Accomplished If You Use

Catarrhozone

Catarrhozone will relieve colds almost instantly and in a few hours will cure completely. If it is old-standing asthma or bronchitis its quick and curative results will astonish you.

Catarrhozone is little drops of healing medicine carried by air to the sore and diseased parts. You breathe them through the Catarrhozone Inhaler and they spread throughout all the air passages.

It is sense as well as healing, because Catarrhozone is a germ killer, a healer and restorer of weak tissues, because it is so prompt and certain in its results, better than any other remedy for diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes, and it is neither alcohol, morphia or cocaine—all dangerous.

Tens of thousands have used Catarrhozone without reporting a single case of failure to cure diseases of the throat and lungs and nasal passages. Remember, CATARRHOZONE is taken in air, and is little drops of healing for the throat, nasal passages, or lungs. It always does cure—is guaranteed.

Price 25c., 50c., and $1.00 at all druggists or by mail, post paid, from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A Sure Tip.

London, May 13.—For the first time in two weeks, William Hayden has taken the index finger of his right hand from the tip of his nose. It was a long time to remain in one position, but Mr. Hayden will think the results worth the inconvenience, for now he has a fine tip to his nose where formerly he had none.

Yesterday morning the cartilage of the finger was cut away and there to the end of the nose stuck that cartilage.

Only one thing remains to be done, where the finger nail was, a piece of skin will have to be grafted, but that will be easily done in a week or two.

THE BRIGHTEST DAY FOR EVERY WOMAN

Comes With Good Health through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Her brightest day for every girl and every woman is the day when she looks well, feels well and is well; but with most of the fair sex such days are rare. Instead they suffer from a painful langour, have a terrible weakness in the back, headaches that make everything seem blurred, and a ceaseless aching in the limbs. These and other trials afflict girls and women through the lack of rich, red blood nature is calling for. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have given the joy of real robust health to thousands of women who are happy to-day because these Pills actually make the rich, red blood that makes weak ones well and strong. This statement has been proven over and over again. Here is further proof from Mrs. C. J. Brook, Manitou, Man., who says: "After a busy time of relaxation, and a strenuous two and a half months normal course, in March, 1906, I began teaching school. I had a heavy rural school, with a large attendance, and consequently a large number of grades, thus I found the work a great nervous strain. This added to the overwork of study, previous to teaching, soon resulted in a "run down" condition. When vacation time came I did not pay much attention to my condition as I thought the holidays would fully restore me, but as I resumed work again I soon found this was not the case. One morning when I came to breakfast everything reeled before me and I almost fainted away. The lady with whom I was boarding advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She always spoke very highly of them, her daughter having used them with the most beneficial results following a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. I decided to take her advice, and had only taken a few boxes when I began to improve in health—and such an appetite as I had. I rapidly gained health, my face had a healthy glow, and I gained in weight. I have since often recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to others who have used them with equally beneficial results, and I believe the Pills to be a standard remedy for the ills for which you recommend them."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SIR WILFRID GOES TO CONFERENCE TO FIGHT IMPERIAL FEDERATION

His Organ, Le Canada, Tells French Readers the Reason the Chief Goes to London.

Le Canada, May 9.

The Conservatives appear astonished because, after having signified his intention of remaining in Canada and continuing the fight against the obstructive tactics of the Opposition Sir Wilfrid Laurier has finally decided to delay the fight for some months in order to take part in the Imperial conference. The reason for this decision is apparent.

Until recently the programme of subjects to be discussed at the Imperial conference contained only the natural development of questions upon which the autonomous colonies had expressed themselves at previous conferences. Since their new elements have made their appearance in the programme submitted by the colonies and among the subjects the Imperial Government proposes to introduce. Interpolated recently in the Commons the Imperial Government stated that it had elaborated a measure which would permit it to consult the autonomous colonies upon questions relating to the exterior affairs of the Empire. Even more recently there has been suggested a new federation project under which it is proposed to form a sort of confederation of five states: The United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the South African union. This confederation would have as its centre an Imperial Council, in which the five confederated States would be represented, and which would consider questions concerning the exterior policy of the Empire. It will be seen that the Imperial Federation scheme is once more upon the carpet, with the inevitable diminution of our autonomy as a result.

The Liberal party has always opposed Imperial Federation, which would deprive us of our autonomy and leave us one of the five states of a confederation in which we would only have, at the most, one vote out of five, and which would involve us, in view of the imperialistic tendencies of certain other states, in the risk of being perpetually in a powerless minority.

From our point of view, the situation has, therefore, become serious and the presence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the conference is absolutely necessary to save our international status from this imperialistic evolution. It is not reflecting upon any of his colleagues by whom he might have been replaced to say that Sir Wilfrid, with his prestige and his marvelous diplomacy, of which we have already been furnished proof, could alone face the situation and turn aside the storm which threatens our autonomy.

All Canadianism, regardless of party, who have taken the watchword, "Canada before all," will recognize that the presence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier has become under these circumstances absolutely necessary. All Conservatives, as well as Liberals, should, under the circumstances, felicitate themselves that Canada will be represented at the Imperial Conference by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and not by Mr. R. L. Borden.

THE LAW MUST BE MADE CLEAR

Toronto Saturday Night.

The now celebrated Hebert marriage annulment case will, in all probability find its way eventually to the Privy Council. This is as it should be. There can be no two sets of laws regarding marriage and divorce in this country. In the Hebert case the issue is clear. There are none of the attendant legal complications which surround many other cases of a somewhat similar nature. While familiar to most, a short resume of the case will do no harm.

Mr. and Mrs. Hebert were married on the 14th of July, 1908, by the Rev. William Timberlake, Methodist minister, of Montreal, who is authorized by the statutes of Quebec to perform marriages. Both of the parties were members of the Roman communion, but Mr. Timberlake was not aware of this. After they had lived together for some time, and had one child, the case was brought to the attention of the Archbishop of Montreal, who issued a decree declaring the marriage null and void.

The case then came before the civil courts, and the judge has given civil effect to the ecclesiastical judgment. The ground for the action of the church and the civil court was, not that the woman had been unfaithful to her vows, nor even because there was any other legal bar to the marriage, but solely because the marriage was not solemnized by a Roman priest.

The law in Quebec is different from that in other provinces, and it is contended that it would support the rules which any religious communion, recognized by law, might enact concerning marriage. But as the Roman communion is the only one which has such rules as the one which has been invoked in the Hebert case, it means that the Protestant communions are placed in a most peculiar position.

If a child is once baptised by a Roman priest, that child is thereby made a Romanist. Even if that child is brought up a Protestant, and has been a member of the Protestant church for years, the Roman communion still claims him, and it would seem that even in such a case his marriage would be null and void unless performed by a Roman priest.

Bishop Farthing, of Montreal, in discussing the matter recently in the Anglican Cathedral, declared that there is a grave doubt as to the proper interpretation of the law of the province of Quebec on this question, and pointed out that "In March, 1901, Mr. Justice Archibald, in the Delpit case, gave judgment that the marriage of two Romanists before a Protestant minister was legal. He gave a very clear and exhaustive statement of the law upon this point. Mr. Justice Torrance also, in the case of Burns vs. Fontaine, upheld the legality of a Protestant solemnizing the marriage of two Romanists.

"We cannot submit to see marriages thus dissolved," said the Bishop. "We do not desire to interfere with any disciplinary measures the Roman communion or any other communion may enact for its own members. If they choose to say that none of their faithful shall be married by any but a priest or minister of their own, that is a family matter; they are within their rights. But if two Romanists disobey that order and are married by another—it matters not if he be an Anglican priest, a Methodist or a Presbyterian, by anyone declared by authority of the state to be a competent person for the performance of marriage—then they incur ecclesiastical penalties and the Roman authorities, or the authorities of any communion, whatever it may be, have a right to inflict what penance they desire, if the parties concerned are willing to submit; but they cannot be allowed to touch the legality of the marriage so contracted, not to affect the civil status of the man and wife, nor of their lawful issue."

Canon Roy, Vice-Chancellor of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese, issued a statement in reply to Bishop Farthing, in which he says—"In asking that this impediment be upheld we are asking no favor. We simply ask that sacred agreements be observed. We simply demand rights guaranteed us by the constitution of the country. It seems to be forgotten in certain quarters that it was in virtue of a treaty that Canada was ceded to Great Britain, that in these treaties there are conditions guaranteeing to Catholics full liberty in religious matters, and that the various constitutions which have been drawn up, including the Act of Confederation, maintain these rights in entirety. It is useless to protest against the action of the church in claiming certain rights in connection with marriage as a sacrament. She will continue to pass laws on marriage, and if, in following this course of action, she comes into conflict with the legislation prevailing in certain countries, one cannot throw the blame upon her shoulders. One could hardly expect her to accommodate her rulings to the laws of each country."

On the contrary, this is just exactly what one would expect any church, Roman or Protestant, to do, conform to the laws of the country. As a matter of fact, the Roman church has done this very thing in Germany and in Hungary, where at the moment the Ne Temere decree has no effect, owing to governmental intervention.

The treaty under which Canada was ceded to Great Britain did guarantee full religious liberty to Catholics, as the Rev. Canon Roy states. There is no room for argument on these premises, but at the same time it is very doubtful indeed if this treaty or the Act of Confederation can, as he states, be made to read that Catholics or any other sect may start out making decrees which conflict with the common laws of the land, and this is what the Ne Temere decree would seem to do.

If the Treaty of Paris, the British North America Act and the Act of Confederation, gives one sect privileges which conflict with the civil and religious rights of the balance of the community, there is but one thing to do, and this is to abrogate the Treaty and amend the Acts.

Everybody entering Canada in sleeping cars will be required to fill out statement forms for immigration officials.

the Minister which he readily consented to do.

Permit a digression here. Mr. Duggan knew that the application had been made for this report within a couple of days after the application had been sent in, yet he had members of the Council come to his office, when he talked to them about power, and gave them to understand that the Power Committee would not do anything, because I was in some way interested in the Electric Power Co., and was opposed to securing power for the city.

Again, later, once at any rate, he repeated this and endeavored to cause suspicion and division in the council and to make my colleagues believe that I was acting contrary to the city's interests; his reasons for this can be readily imagined. At the same time he knew one of the steps Ald. Bradburn and I had taken, and his insinuations in regard to myself were entirely untrue. I have not directly or indirectly, near or remote, any interest in the Electric Power Co. or any other electric power company, and if any relative or business associate of mine has any interest in any such company, I am not aware of it. No one has ever tried to influence me nor so far as I know, Ald. Bradburn in the matter, and as I said, Mr. Duggan knew of one of the steps we had taken, and must have known that in interfering with the action of the council he was acting in an improper and discourteous manner.

Returning to the direct subject of the power report, Mr. T. E. Bradburn went to Toronto, and tried to see Mr. Beck, but as is well known, he is one of the busiest men in the Province, and Mr. Bradburn did not see him that day. Mr. Duggan was in Toronto the same day, remained over the second day, and finally saw Mr. Beck and got him to come to Peterborough with the report to a meeting of citizens, privately invited to a private house. Mr. Beck, however chivalrous he may be in the matter, understood that Mr. Duggan represented the city, and that he (Mr. Beck) was coming to an authorized meeting. The report was read there and published before it reached the Council.

Mr. Duggan obtained possession of a report that he knew belonged to the Council and made use of it as he saw fit.

There have been several explanations given in defence of this. At the gathering where the report was presented Mr. Duggan was given credit, as the newspaper reports show, for having the report made by the Hydro Electric Commission, and accepted it.

He treated the report as if it were his by giving it out. Yet he knew that the Mayor had made the application on behalf of the Council that secured the report. Then we were told at the Council meeting by the deputation from the Board of Trade, that Mr. Duggan did not know that Mr. Beck was bringing the report, although Mr. Duggan had informed citizens that it would be at the meeting several days before it was held, and before he knew Mr. Beck would come, showing that his getting possession of the report was premeditated. He also, according to his advocate, Mr. O'Connell, says he asked me in January to apply for the report. That is untrue. He did not suggest a report from the Commission and the obtaining of that report was an act due entirely to the committee alone, in conjunction with Mr. T. E. Bradburn.

Further, when the engineers came to the city and saw Mr. Duggan, who was aware that the Council had taken action in this matter, in some way it happened that the engineers did not call on me or any member of the Council, as Mr. Beck had said they would do, and expected they would do, and in addition to this, the public were led to believe that the city held an option on the Otonabee Power Company's property, which was not correct.

The Council is censured by the learned counsel, who has advocated Mr. Duggan's cause, because they did not take measures to have the votes brought out on the Independent Tire Co. by-law, but Mr. Duggan had a meeting to organize for that purpose, and the meeting was reported in the press, but I was not informed of the meeting, nor, I believe, was any member of the Council. If, then, the Council had attempted to take any action it would have been in conflict with the Commissioner's efforts, and would have caused confusion, which would have done no good.

Mr. O'Connell says the members of the Council have misconceived the position they occupy. Again he is wrong. We know that the city is not yet governed by Commission, but that we have been elected by the people to transact their business; that we have taken an obligation to do it to the best of our ability, and that we are doing, and we do not propose to be driven by a few citizens, however estimable they may be, into any action that we are convinced would be contrary to the interests of the citizens, whose trustees we are. We are responsible to the people for our course, and let me tell Mr. O'Connell that not for the position of Mayor of the city, and it is one I am very proud of holding, would I take a course that I was convinced was not in the interests of the ratepayers. And further let me tell him that I believe the action of the Council meets with the approval of a large majority of the electors, and that most of those whom he or Mr. Duggan has succeeded in enlisting as his supporters in this matter have become so because they had been misled, and still further, that he (Mr. O'Connell) has been seriously misled himself.

It is said that the members of the Council are displeased because they were ignored by the commissioner in the matter of the report. That is quite true; the report should have come to the Council. The Council is the representative body; its members were chosen by the people, and it represents the people. The members, consequently, resent being ignored, and their business taken out of their hands. The report was asked for by me, for the Council, and Mr. Duggan had not a shadow of a claim to it, and no reason, whatever, for the course he pursued.

But this is not merely a question of the dignity of the Council, neither does the question stop with a consideration of the propriety of Mr. Duggan's course. There is the important question of the effect on the business and the interests of the city. That is one reason that has so far kept me silent.

In the report it is stated that the price of the Otonabee Power Co.'s property is $225,000, and that that price is reasonable, and details are given. Such a statement in the report coming into the hands of the Council would be quite proper. The Council could then take up the matter with the company, make further enquiries, and endeavor to make a bargain for the city. But when that report is placed in the hands of the Otonabee Power Co., as it was through Mr. Duggan's interference, there is no longer any probability of the Council making any bargain with that company, except by paying them the full $225,000 or more. This is one consideration that weighed with the members of the Council, and it is not a matter of etiquette or dignity, but a serious matter of business.

It has been said by his friends that Mr. Duggan may have made a mistake, but that, even so, one mistake should not be sufficient to cause the Council to take the course it did. That would depend on the character of the mistake, if such it were, and the consequences of it, and whether it was such as to cause such a want of confidence that the Council would not feel justified in employing him.

Let me illustrate, and I hope I am not doing wrong in making public a piece of secret history of the past. When the Council began negotiations with the Peterborough Water Co. some years ago to purchase the waterworks system, they had an engineer make a valuation of the property. The engineer reported that it was worth to the town $250,000, but that report was not made public, and the town purchased the property for $20,000 less. Would they have got it for that price if the Water Company had known what the engineer had reported? The publication of that report would have cost the town $20,000 or more, in all probability a great deal more. But the late Henry Best, who was chairman of the committee in charge of the negotiations, and those acting with him, knew better how to handle a matter of business. Yet, by Mr. Duggan's unwarranted interference, a similar report on the power matter was made public, even before it reached the Council, and the city has to bear the consequences.

As a further illustration of Mr. Duggan's official conduct, we might refer to the fact that even this week he asked for the use of the Council chamber for a meeting of the Board of Trade. The request was granted, but the fact was that neither the president nor vice-president had authorized the request for a meeting, and the meeting held was not a meeting of the Board.

The Council took the action it did deliberately, in the performance of its duty, acting for the ratepayers, and I fully believe that the great majority of the people are satisfied with that action. And, while the Council is convinced that it acted rightly, I do not believe it will reverse its decision upon requests made by citizens who have no responsibility in the matter, nor be influenced by resolutions passed or petitions signed on the strength of representations that were not correct and without a full knowledge of the circumstances. If it did it would not be true to its trust, nor worthy of the confidence of the ratepayers.

Yours truly,
W. G. MORROW,
Mayor.

Band of the 57th Regiment Gave Splendid Program

The final band concert of the season provided by the 57th Regiment Band in the Armories last night was a largely patronized and thoroughly enjoyable event, and the classy and delightful program dished out was a fitting climax to the series of enjoyable band concerts which this organization of musicians have been responsible for this season.

To state that the program was a musical great is putting it mildly, and the evening must have proved gratifying and encouraging to Mr. Gliddon and his efficient and capable musicians.

Miss Edna Pringle was loudly applauded and encored in all her vocal selections and her presence added greatly to the pleasure and delight afforded by the program.

The rousing march by Paull, entitled "The Dawn of the Century," was remarkably well rendered and proved to be a splendid opening number. The "Kansas Two Step," a western oddity, was another decided hit and took well with the audience. The "Reminiscences of the Plantation," introducing solos and variations on E flat and B flat clarionets, cornet, trombone and basses was easily the star number, however, of the evening, and had everybody whistling involuntarily. The descriptive number, "Dance of the Skeletons," while not new, was as popular as ever and was given merited applause. The Grand Patriotic selection and the National Anthem concluded a program that would be difficult to excel or improve upon in any degree.

Hon. Adam Beck opened the "Fair of All Nations" on behalf of Kingston tuberculosis hospital.

Man Returns Home to Rest, While a Woman's Work is Never Done— The Kidneys Give Out and She is a Martyr to Backache— Booth's Kidney Pills Her Best Friend.

KAISER WILLIAM PAYS VISIT TO BRITAIN FOR UNVEILING

Splendid Ceremony to be Performed To-morrow—First State Visit of Kaiser Since Death of Edward.

London, May 15.—The German imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with the Emperor and Empress and Princess Victoria Louise aboard, arrived at Sheerness last evening. The German cruisers escorting the yacht exchanged salutes with the British warships. The latter were gaily decorated and the crews gave a cheering welcome to the visiting sovereigns. Their majesties remained aboard the yacht during the night.

Emperor Wilhelm and the Empress are making the first state visit by foreign monarchs to England since the death of Edward VII. They have come for the unveiling by King George of the statue in front of Buckingham Palace, which completes a great national memorial to Queen Victoria. This, however, will only be an incident of their visit, which extends over a week, during which the English court, now out of mourning, will entertain their distinguished guests at state banquets, a state ball and a gala performance at Drury Lane Theatre.

To-day the Emperor and Empress landed at Port Victoria, and proceeded to London, where they were greeted by King George and Queen Mary and other members of the royal family and escorted in open carriages to Buckingham Palace, where they will be the guests of the King and Queen. This evening there will be a family dinner at the palace.

The unveiling of the statue will take place to-morrow morning. The ceremony will not only be a picturesque military parade, but a religious service in which the choirs of Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral and the Chapels Royal will have a share. On the stand with the King and Queen and the Emperor and Empress and Queen Alexandra will be many members of royal families, all, however, related to the royal family of England or representing relatives. Among them will be the King and Queen of Norway, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden; the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Prince Arthur of Connaught; Princess Henry of Battenburg and her sons; Prince and Princess Christian; Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, the Duchess of Albany, the Duke and Duchess Saxe-Coburg Gotha, the Duke and Duchess of Teck, Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck, and all the other members of the royal family. The Grand Duke Alexander Michaelowitch will represent the Czar and Czarina. All the dominion Premiers who have arrived for the Imperial Conference will also be present.

The national memorial, which the statue crowns and completes, is surrounded by a circular space, it stands directly in front of the palace, the Queen facing down the Mall. Around this space are piers surmounted with emblematical figures symbolizing the chief possessions of the Empire. In the centre is the memorial proper, a stately monument of marble and bronze, which it has taken nine years to complete, at a cost of upwards of $1,000,000. On two sides are great fountains. Pedestals flank the broad flight of steps, surmounted by lions and bronze groups representing peace, progress, manufactures and agriculture. Over the fountains are colossal figures representing bravery and intelligence. From the centre of the granite platform rises a huge column around which the chief statues and groups are placed. At the base are seen four ships prows—two bearing trophies of the army and navy, and two fruit and flowers, emblematic of commerce and prosperity.

Some significance may be attached to the state banquet to be given in honor of the German Emperor next Thursday evening. Besides the members of the royal family, Sir Edward Grey, the German ambassador and possibly other diplomats will be present. The next day there will be a reception at the German embassy, and in the evening there will be the gala performance of "Money" at Drury Lane Theatre.

On May 18, the Emperor and Empress will go to Windsor to lay wreaths on the graves of Queen Victoria at Frogmore, and King Edward in St. George's Chapel. The state ball on Friday night will be one of the most brilliant gatherings of the year. The next day the royal visitors depart from England.

TRIED TO END IT

Young Man and Woman Attempt Suicide.

Philadelphia, May 15.—Avery McClain and Miss Bessie Smith, who were arrested in Toronto last Thursday, yesterday endeavored to commit suicide as the train upon which they were passengers in custody of detectives pulled into the outskirts of Philadelphia, where they were being brought to answer charges of stealing $2,500 worth of jewelry.

Although the young woman was supposed to have been thoroughly searched, she had succeeded in secreting a package of cyanide of potassium in her hair. Prior to reaching for the cyanide Miss Smith had been eating candy. She was just about to empty the box of cyanide into her mouth when Detective Ulrich, who had the couple in charge, noticed the poison label upon the box. He made a hasty grab for it and the woman struggled. She scratched and bit at the detective and he endeavored to pinion her arms without hurting her. In the melee the box containing the cyanide dropped, and she yelled to McClain: "Swallon it, Av, swallow it. End your troubles now. Don't let them send you to prison."

McClain made a movement as if to follow her instructions, and Ulrich transferred the attack from the girl to the man. Eventually both were subdued, and they were taken to Philadelphia without further trouble.

May Continue Competitions.

Ottawa, May 15.—Although nothing definite has been arranged, there is every probability that the next competition for the Earl Grey musical and dramatic trophies will be held in Ottawa under the active patronage of his riyal highness the Duke of Connaught.

The duke has already evinced great interest in the annual competition started by Earl Grey five years ago. He, like Earl Grey, has done something in amateur theatricals himself and it is said that on at least one occasion the two of them years ago had speaking parts in the same play.

It is the intention of the duke to have the competitions continued when he becomes Governor-General. The first two competitions were held in Ottawa and then they went to Montreal, Toronto, and Winnipeg. The choice for the next lies between Ottawa, Halifax and Vancouver.

Strike at Ottawa.

Ottawa, May 15.—Four hundred builders' laborers went out on strike Saturday forenoon, demanding 28 cents an hour, which the contractors refused to pay. The men have been getting 25 cents per hour. The agreement at the latter figure expired on May 1 and negotiations have been in progress since.

All buildings in course of erection are tied up and operations may be given a serious setback here this summer as a result. So great is the number of men out that labor hall was unable to accommodate them, and some of the locals held open air meetings on Cartier square.

OPIUM ROUTE WAS LOCATED

Montreal Police Track a Smuggling System.

Drug Smuggled From Canada Into the United States.

Montreal, May 15.—Following the arrest of an express messenger in Plattsburg, N.Y., the story of the smuggling of large quantities of opium from China to Canada and thence into the United States has been laid bare. Working on information received from New York and Boston, the authorities here instituted search proceedings and discovered small quantities of the drug on the premises of twelve people here, two of whom are whites and ten Celestials. Letters and cheques of an incriminating character were also found. The authorities state that they have a clear case against the twelve persons, but refuse to divulge their names. They are now awaiting developments from the arrest of the messenger at Plattsburg to secure information, which will incriminate a large number of people here and lead to the location of large quantities of opium which are known to be hidden here.

The discovery of the plot came through the great increase noticed in the traffic in the drug in New York, which lead to an investigation, as the result of which it was ascertained that the dealers were accustomed to make out cheques for considerable amounts payable to persons, both Chinese and whites, in Montreal. The cheques were traced here and the men engaged in the business in this city located.

Conductors and express messengers on the various trains running between Canadian and American cities were the agents to carry the goods across the border.

The business has proved a lucrative one, as while the drug is purchasable here at $12 per pound, in New York, so great is the demand and so stringent the laws that $50 a pound is obtained for it.

While no exact estimate of the amount of the drug smuggled is obtainable, the authorities place it at not less than $100,000.

FOUND GUILTY OF THE MURDER

Trepanier Convicted by Jury at Three Rivers.

Three Rivers, Que., May 15.—Hormisdas Trepanier was found guilty on Saturday morning in the Court of King's Bench of the murder of Maurice Plouffe, whose body was found on March 2 last on the road between Three Rivers and St. Laurant de Nicolet. The jury was only 12 minutes in Reaching its verdict, and there was no recommendation to mercy.

Sentence was postponed until Wednesday, as counsel for the accused stated that there were certain motions to be made by his client along the line of objections raised during the trial.

Plouffe and Trepanier were both farmers, and towards the end of February entered on a drinking bout. On March 2 the body of Plouffe was found and Trepanier, on being arrested, confessed that while under the influence of liquor, he had killed his friend.

The only points raised by the defence were that the confession had been illegally obtained and that Plouffe had made insulting overtures to the women of the Trepanier family. The latter point was supported by a sister of the accused, but his wife and son remained neutral and their testimony was, if anything, detrimental.

Body Found In Water.

New York, May 15.—The body of a policeman in full uniform was found floating in the East River Saturday. It is supposed to be that of Patrolman James J. Judge, who disappeared on Dec. 3, the day he had been assigned to report for strike duty.

The body found was so badly decomposed that it was impossible to tell without an autopsy if it had suffered violence before death or not.

Forest Fires Extinguished.

Perth, May 15.—Bush fires which have been raging near Perth, are reported to have been practically extinguished, no further danger existing.

Fire in the Village of Lanark Saturday morning destroyed the hardware store of Taylor Bros., with loss of $5,000. Cause unknown.

NOTHING OFFICIAL ABOUT BAHAMAS

As to Incorporation in Confederation With Canada.

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, May 15.—Morning sittings were commenced this morning in the House, in an effort to clear up for an adjournment on Friday. Replying to Mr. Foster to-day, Fielding stated that nothing official had transpired as to the incorporation of the Bahamas in confederation with Canada, but that it was not improbable that the subject would arise between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Colonial office, during the Premier's visit to England.

MEXICAN INSURRECTOS ARE GAINING GROUND EACH DAY

Have Captured the Cities of Acapulco and Canenea—Diaz Stays on the Job.

Mexico City, May 15.—From Acapulco the Government Saturday received news of the capture of that port on May 8, despite the efforts of the garrison, supported by the guns of the cruiser Democrata.

The Government reports the burning of a textile factory by federals. Acapulco is in the state of Guerrero, one of the states controlled by the Figueroa Brthers. Its capture does not mean, necessarily, that the contingent peace agreement made with the Figueroas is broken, as the place fell prior to the departure of Francisco Figueroa from the capital, to carry the terms to his brothers.

Occupied Canenea.

Sonora, Mexico, May 15.—All Canenea is celebrating the occupation by the insurrecto army and cries of "Viva Cabral," and "Viva Madero" fill the air.

Cabral's men having eaten their fill at spreads set at every restuarant in the city Saturday afternoon fraternized with the populace and there is every indication that busines will proceed without interruption or loss, as possession of the town was gained by the insurgent force without loss of life to either side.

The federal garrison under Col. Chiapas, having surrendered with all the honors of war, filed out as the triumphant insurrectos, marched into the town at 3.30 Saturday afternoon. Mayor Arnold and all other local as well as federal officials accompanied the federal troops, who, as the agreement allowed, took their arms and ammunition. They are once entrained for Nogales. The insurrectos hated to let Col. Chiapas go, as he is blamed for the execution of Prefect Talamentes and his sons. Senora Talamentes is in command of a body of troops. Juan Cabral is a native of Canenea, and when marching into the city he was almost pulled off his horse by enthusiastic admirers. Juan is only 25 years old and his revolutionary sentiments at the start of the rebellion made it unhealthy for him to remain here. He has called for the surrender of Nogales.

Juarez, Mexico, May 15.—Rebellion within the ranks of the Maderoist army Saturday morning resulted in the declaring under arrest of Francesco Madero, jr., Provisional President, the demand that the Maderos Cabinet resign, and for two hours threatened the destruction of the Jaurez army as a concrete fighting force.

The incipient rebellion arose in the ranks of the forces under Gen. Pascual Orozco, one of the fighting leaders of the Madero army, and was headed by Orozco himself.

A demand was made upon Provisional President Madero for food and money for his ragged and hungry soldiers. Madero was unable to satisfy these demands at the time, but his explanations were peremptorily thrown aside by the belligerent leader, Orozco, and his soldiers, and Madero was declared under arrest.

Finally the matter was settled by Gen. Madero promising that the immediate needs of the soldiers would be attended to, and the insurrectos, who had gathered in bands about the Madero home, left.

Diaz Still In Power.

Mexico City, May 15.—Gen. Diaz will not leave the Presidency while the country is in its present state of unrest, it is asserted by Finance-Minister Jose Yves Limatour. He also said that Diaz stood ready to state in more explicit terms than those contained in his recent manifesto if necessary, his attitude with reference to his retirement.

The President, he said, had demanded to know from his opponents the terms in which they expect him to announce his willingness to resign, and is waiting a reply from them.

Judge Carbajal will wait a couple of days in El Paso to get Madero's reply.

SENOR [illegible]

who is prominent among the advisers of President Diaz, and may be a successor—if Madero consents.

OLIVER ENQUIRY WAS POSTPONED

Will Come up in the House on Wednesday.

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, May 15.—Owing to the absence of Mr. Meighen, of Portage La Prairie, the enquiry into charges against Oliver, slated for to-day, was put over until Wednesday.

Redistribution In Quebec.

Montreal, May 15.—Local politicians on both sides of the party fence, are giving a good deal of attention just now to the redistribution bill, which Sir Lomer Gouin has promised to bring down at the fall session of the Quebec Legislature.

It is generally understood that the new measure, which will be brought down by the Government at the next and last session of the present Legislature will give at least fourteen and very likely fifteen members to the island of Montreal, including one for Jacques Cartier.

MAY SUPPORT THE SUFFRAGE

Asquith Government May Assist in Passage.

Will Send it to Lords to Reject, and Transfer Fire.

London, May 15.—It is by no means certain that the necessary facilities for the further progress of the woman's suffrage bill during the present session of Parliament will be refused by the Government.

It is reported that, in view of the impressively large majority by which the second reading was carried, Mr. Lloyd-George and other members of the Cabinet who favor this measure are of the opinion that the two or three days necessary for the completion of its remaining stages in the House of Commons ought not to be denied, and they will, it is expected, press this view upon the Prime Minister, who is the most formidable opponent of the bill in the ranks of the Government.

Although Mr. Asquith is naturally reluctant to do anything toward facilitating the progress of the bill, it is thought that he may recognize the tactical advantage of passing it on to the House of Lords, where is would, in all probability, be rejected. By that means the active hostility of the militant suffragists in the constituencies would be deflected from the Government and turned upon the Lords. The obvious advantages of such a transfer of antagonism, from the Ministerial point of view, may quite conceivably tempt Mr. Asquith to grant the necessary facilities and allow the bill to be sent to the Upper House in time for it to be dealt with there before the present session closes.

NATIONALISTS WILL BE BUSY

To Have a Campaign of Their Own in Quebec.

Montreal, May 15.—It is announced that the Nationalists, headed by F. D. Monk, M.P., and Henri Bourassa, M.P.P., aided by other younger men, will begin a political campaign in this province, these demonstrations taking place between seed time and harvest. The dates will be announced later on, and it is quite likely that those gentlemen will then state their attitude on the reciprocity question. Although Mr. Bourassa published some time since a series of articles in Le Devoir favoring, if anything, the measure, he has since seen new light and will now take the field against the ratification of the pact.

It is also announced from Ottawa that Mr. Monk and his followers, who were elected as Conservatives, but who have declined to attend the party caucus, will throw in their lot with Mr. Borden against reciprocity when Parliament reassembles, and when the final vote will be taken on the measure, previous to dissolution.

WELCOME TO GERMAN EMPEROR

Met at Station by the King and Queen.

Special to The Review.

London, May 15.—King George and Queen Mary with a brilliant staff, welcomed the German Emperor and his party at Victoria Station, at noon to-day.

Kingston's Labor Trouble.

Kingston, May 15.—Mr. Izzard, fourth vice-president of the International Federaton of Labor, has been asked to come and settle the labor dispute here. The masons will be bound by this ruling, but it will not affect the stonecutters. Saturday, the contractors on the House of Providence hired non-union men to take the place of the striking helpers. Just as soon as they started, the carpenters dropped their tools and refused to work.

FARMERS' BANK SHAREHOLDERS WILL FIGHT CLAIMS ON THEM

FOR JAPAN'S POOR

Tokio, May 13.—Prince Katsura, Premier and Minister of Finance, is leading a movement to obtain a fund of $10,000,000 to be used for the relief of the sick and poor of Japan.

A Lively Meeting at Wolfe Island.

Kingston, May 15.—The reciprocity question was threshed out at a meeting held in the town hall on Wolfe Island, Saturday night, at which Thos. Fawcett, vice-president of the Conservative Association for the county, presided. Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P. for Frontenac, and Andrew Broder, M.P. for Dundas, strongly opposed the agreement, while addresses in support of the pact were given by D. D. Rogers, ex-M.P. for Frontenac, and Grant Grimshaw. There was a free-for-all discussion, and the meeting was one of the liveliest ever held on Wolfe Island, the chairman having to call for order on many occasions.

TRY A REVIEW WANT AD.

Prepared to Dispute Double Liability Claim in the Court—Meeting to Organize.

Toronto, May 15.—Some, at least, of the shareholders of the ill-starred Farmers' Bank are preparing to fight rather than submit to the double liability call issued a few days ago by G. T. Clarkson, liquidator.

An initial step has been taken in the securing of an opinion from Sir Robert Bannatyne Finlay, eminent in the legal profession of Great Britain, as to whether the call might be successfully resisted. William Laidlaw, K.C., who has been prominent as a representative of the shareholders in Halton County, will present that opinion when the case comes up in the courts.

It is claimed that the bank was never from the beginning established on a legitimate basis as deceitful prospectuses were issued at the outset, the Minister of Finance was deceived when a charter was secured, false and lying affidavits were issued, and that funds were recklessly dissipated in wild speculation.

MONDAY, MAY 15, 1911.

MR. BORDEN'S TOUR

It is very amusing to note the Toronto Globe and Montreal Herald worrying over how Mr. Borden is going to treat the west when he makes his tour in June and July. They are very solicitous that he shall define what sort of a fiscal policy he will adopt, when returned after the next general election, for the benefit of the west. And they really feel sorry for Mr. Borden, because it will be so hard to please the west, and please the eastern protectionists, too.

Of course, all this tender solicitude on the part of the government organs, arises from a desire to be of assistance to the Conservative leader. His many friends on the government side point out to him the various rocks that seem to lie in his path, so that he may steer his course around or over them and arrive safely at the goal of the premiership. We fancy that Mr. Borden, who prefers to take a straight course on any matter of policy, will be able to meet the western farmers as man to man, and he will be able to enunciate a policy that will carry the west with him and the east also. The west is not a high tariff country; but the west is not prepared to follow the lead of a few Cobdenite free traders and declare for free trade and direct taxation. What the west to-day is wanting is a tariff that will not permit manufacturers to charge them more for their staple goods than will allow a fair margin of profit on the manufacturing cost. The west is objecting to a tariff that permits the boosting of prices unwarrantedly, making the consumer pay, not only what the goods are worth, but an extra modicum of profit into the pockets of the maker. The west as a whole, being made up very largely of eastern people and Americans—the Americans coming from a high tariff country where the farmers are protesting against reciprocity —certainly does not want free trade, or unrestricted reciprocity any more than it was wanted by Canada in 1891, or reciprocity in natural products is wanted in 1911. It is not going to be so hard a task, after all, to formulate a policy that will meet with the great approval of the general run of Canadians.

Canadians to-day east or west, want in the first place a stable policy, one that is not subject to violent changes. They want a policy that will maintain a steady flow of commerce, in which neither panics nor booms enter prominently. They want a policy that will be for the benefit of the industrial section of Canadian population, build up Canadian manufactures in every line, and a policy that will provide a first-class home market for the farmer, and also enable him to buy his goods at reasonable rates. We do not think Mr. Borden will be found promising free trade to the west, even for the purpose of capturing the few Clarks out there, because that not a policy for Canada as a whole. Where the wishes of the west can be without injuring the nation, they may be met, but as the policy of moderate protection is the policy of the Conservative party, just as it has been the policy of the Liberal party since it came into office, it may be that the west will concentrate its demands on such questions as can be dealt with to its entire satisfaction.

At any rate Mr. Borden in going to the west will not be handicapped by having in 1893 paraded the west declaring the tariff to be a "delusion, a snare and a robbery," and having when in office, maintained it substantially as found. He may assent to the proposition of a lower tariff or he may not, but at all events, his course will be found to be one of consistency and sincerity—which is more than can be said of the agile side-steppings of his distinguished opponent.

SIR WILFRID'S RELUCTANCE

The Montreal Witness takes exception to the statements of Le Canada that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is going to the imperial conference to defend Canadian autonomy, to prevent the four or five nations composing the active forces moving toward imperial federation from accomplishing their fell design. But is Le Canada so far out, after all, in its statements to its French readers?

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was reluctant to go to the imperial conference. There can be little doubt about that. He knew that it would be offensive to Johnny Crapaud, and he sought some good looking excuse for absenting himself, some excuse that would be swallowed by his English supporters and blamed on the opposition. Mr. Borden's clever stand on the question, however, cooked Sir Wilfrid's goose. The premier was given a fair alternative whereby nothing stood in the way of his going to the conference, except his own reluctance. Not even reciprocity was allowed to interfere with this imperial duty.

These ardent defenders of Canadian autonomy talk as if the imperial statesmen were trying to encroach on it, as if they were invading the national rights and privileges. The Toronto Globe says that we are loyal because we are free. Then why should there be so much fanning the air about being freer, as if our freedom were threatened? English-speaking people know that all of this autonomy talk indulged in by the French element in Canada is rot; that there never was a time when Canada was less in danger of losing one iota of her freedom of action.

The reluctance of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to participate in a movement to bring the various parts of the empire into closer relations, can be understood when one realises that loyal though he may be to Canadian autonomy, he is not the imperial statesman that Sir John Macdonald was. Sir John, while holding the French people with him, was chiefly responsible for bringing about confederation for welding the scattered provinces into one powerful whole, and Sir John's dying declaration that "A British subject I was born; a British subject I will die," illustrated most strongly the old chieftain's intense desire to make Canada the chief gem of the British imperial crown. The attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as compared with the attitude of Sir John is as darkness to day-light, for while Sir Wilfrid Laurier is loyal, he has not that active, aggressive spirit of promoting and consolidating imperial objects that distinguishes Canada's chiefest son, the father of the present great Dominion.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The charges made by Sir Sandford Fleming as to the financing of the giant cement merger are none too pleasant, and should be investigated. The high finance game is rapidly becoming a disease in Canada and a course of treatment is desirable at the incipient stage.

The backers of the reciprocity bill in the United States Senate appear to be having the time of their lives handling the angry deputations. The deputations there are not told that it is "too late" and that they must be prepared to take their medicine in silence and hope for the best, or worst.

Great Britain exported to Canada in 1910, $7,745,000 worth of articles that are affected by the reciprocity treaty. Seven millions is not big as compared with Canada's total trade, but it is big enough for reciprocity to check by that much the developing of imperial trade.

The population of Germany in 1871 was 41,000,000, and in 1910 it was 66,000,000. A sixty per cent. increase in 40 years shows that race suicide does not enter in the catalogue of German national evils. It isn't much wonder that Germany is anxious to solve the problem of German colonies, and to keep her people under the German flag.

Dr. W. J. Kilner, of London, is a great man. He has discovered that every human being has a halo. He has been able to scientifically prove what psychics and occultists have claimed for centuries—that every human being is surrounded by an atmosphere, or aura. This aura indicates the state of health, and the finest halos envelop the most intelligent humans, the halo of man being more distinct than that of woman.

On their first appearance at a public function since accession, King George and Queen Mary were given an enthusiastic reception by the people. The King has firmly established himself in the hearts of the people by his personal work. It is pleasing to know that the gloomy predictions made at the time King Edward died have not only not been fulfilled, but have been proved to have been absurd. No man is indispensable, and when one passes, his mantle is ably carried by another.

William Jennings Bryan, who will favor Peterborough with a visit on Thursday, says that he notices a wonderful difference in Canada in the last twenty-four years. When he last visited this country he noticed stump fences all around, and a general air of poverty and hardship among the farmers. Now he sees only good wire fences. The passing of the stump fence marks the passing of pioneer days. Mr. Bryan says that he will not be a candidate for the presidency again, but this will not detract from the attention he receives as a man among men.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, May 13.—Wheat steady, with prices ½d to ⅜d higher, with offerings light, and some disposition toward further support, on the strength in America and continued hot weather in Russia. Realizing developed, and the market turned easy. Selling was attributed to favorable reports from Argentine and predictions of heavy Russian shipments. The market was largely under the influence of week-end realizing, and at the close May was easy and others ⅛d to ⅜d lower than yesterday. Corn, after opening ⅛d lower, further declined ⅛d, with undertone easy. There was a poor spot demand, and this offset the firmness in America. The advance, however, was checked by the general heavy rains here, which will greatly benefit the growing crops.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Attempts to secure week-end profits crowded down the price of wheat in the last hour to-day. The decline was partly influenced by a prospect of large world's shipments and of bearish figures regarding the visible supply. Closing quotations were ⅜c lower to ⅛c up, compared with last night. Corn showed a net loss of ⅜c to ½c to ⅝c; oats a drop of ¼c to ⅜c, but hog products little change, except May pork, which was nominally 87½c harder to get.

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson

Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE AINSLEE MAGAZINE COMPANY

Before Moreau could reply the sound of a single shot rang out from one of the staterooms and echoed itself over the river. Impulsively Kirby turned to the door, and as he did so Moreau quickly withdrew his hand from the breast of his long frock coat. A tongue of flame leaping from his Derringer shattered the stagnant tobacco fumes, and with the acrid bite of powder in his nostrils and a bullet through the lungs the younger man, fighting hard against his fall, slowly eased himself to the floor.

"For yoh, suh," courteously sneered Moreau, carefully wiping the smoking pistol and returning it to his breast pocket, while he coolly watched the writhing figure cough out its life. "I calculate, suh, yoh are now booked foh that front seat in hades which you declined. I'll teach yoh to play a low down game on a gentleman, suh."

As he turned to refill his glass the door was violently torn open and a large, florid faced man entered. Moreau turned, his hand slipping into his breast pocket. For a long moment the two confronted each other in silence.

"Mr. Randall has just blown out his brains," said the intruder slowly at length. "I guess that's your work, my fine old bucko. But I heard another shot. Where's my pal, Gene Kirby?" His eyes, restlessly searching the darkened corners, at length happened on the huddled thing, now lying very still. "Gene," he cried, stooping and raising the other's head to his knee. "Speak to me, boy. It's your old pal, Bunce."

"I calculate yoh friend is past speaking, suh," observed Moreau, backing toward the door and keeping a wary eye on the florid faced Yankee. "Mr. Kirby insulted me, suh, and has paid foh it with his life. I shot him in fair and honorable combat."

"Fair and honorable hades!" snarled Bunce, leaping to his feet. "Shot him in the back, you skunk—your usual fair and honorable manner! You haven't the nerve to stand up and face a crippled hen!"

"Stand back, suh!" warned the other, drawing his Derringer. "Yoh are naturally excited, and so I choose to overlook yoh words, which I will not do in the future. But don't push me too far, suh—don't push me too far, foh even a gentleman has his limits."

"No man ever double banked Gene Kirby twice," said Larkin Bunce laconically, "and it'll be a good thing for you, Moreau, if he is past speaking, which, I guess, looks the case. If he happens to pull through you can gamble he'll fix your case himself, but if he doesn't, my fine old bucko, I'll settle your honorable hash. Yoh've stunk up this river just about along enough."

"It will afford me considerable pleasure, suh," replied the pseudo colonel in his best manner, "to place yoh in the same position which yoh friend Mr. Kirby will shortly occupy. I refer, suh, to a front seat in the grill room of his most Satanic majesty. Yoh servant, suh, and a very good evening." Bowing, the flower of southern chivalry backed nimbly through the door and disappeared.

CHAPTER III.

COLONEL JACQUES GASPARD DESCHAMPS MOREAU, to give him his full title, doing all things thoroughly, as befitted one of his honorable character, was not satisfied with, as he thought, disposing of Kirby's physical existence, but considered it his pleasurable duty to effectually ruin whatever little reputation had survived during the other's downward career.

Kirby, presumably fatally wounded, had been carried ashore by Bunce at the next landing, and, in those days shooting and stabbing affrays emanating from card games being only too common, but little attention had been paid to the affair. Cameo Kirby was notorious the length of the river, and such an abrupt and tragic termination of his career had not only been frequently and cheerfully predicted, but was, moreover, expected of all such members as graced his questionable profession. Indeed, for them a sober and respectable death would have been considered bad form. Among the gambling profession there existed a certain code, which in a manner served to link those at the top, who, like Kirby and Bunce, wooed fortune honestly, to the Moreau type, gracing and disgracing the lowest rung in the gamblers' social ladder. This code, if so it may be termed, was an understanding to the effect that in no instance, however great the provocation, should the law be invoked. Wrongs, fancied or authentic, were to be redressed solely by the bearers thereof, the joint office of judge and executioner being vested in each separate and distinct individual.

In view of this accepted understanding, Larkin Bunce had accordingly made no mention of the fact that a probable murder had been committed, and, the passengers and steamship officials dismissing it as a gamblers' quarrel, which was none of their affair, no stigma or notoriety was attached to the good Colonel Moreau, who, claiming to be an old and valued friend of Mr. Randall, had gone to the latter's stateroom and brazenly assumed charge of the body. Bunce's laconic statement was too pitifully true, for the old planter had effectually ended his life.

Again referring to Colonel Moreau's happy faculty of doing all things well, it was quite characteristic that to complete his revenge against Cameo Kirby he now did not hesitate to assume charge of Mr. Randall's body, did not hesitate to meet the son of the man for whose death he had been directly and shamefully responsible, for young Tom Randall had ridden over to the Plaquemine landing in order to greet his father, while over at the old homestead all was bustle and excitement in honor of the master's homecoming.

Anxiously Tom Randall waited to see the jovial and well known figure of his father march down the gangplank, waited to catch a glimpse of the familiar and weather beaten green portmanteau which the planter always carried. The moments passed. Other and numerous passengers stepped ashore, to be eagerly welcomed and claimed by their own, but John Randall was not among them. A curious and seemingly pregnant hush had succeeded the landing of the freight, and off somewhere in the darkness a child whimpered shrilly. The boy's nerves were set on edge. Perhaps his father was having a farewell talk with the captain and would come dashing out at the last moment with all his old disregard for time and place. It was time the bell was clanging, the signal for backing away, for by now the landing of passengers and freight appeared to be terminated. And still no John Randall. The boy walked along the stringpiece until the Texas deck came the more prominently into view, the glow from the open windows of the port staterooms silhouetting the lean visaged pilot, absolute monarch of his realm, who now that an easy stretch of the river had been entered loafed about while his cub took the wheel.

"Hello, on board the Shotwell!" shouted young Randall, looking up at the pilothouse. "Is that you, Mr. Bixby? This is Tom Randall. Do you know if my father is on board? We were expecting him by your boat, sir."

For reply Mr. Bixby, usually the pattern of courtesy, offered a monosyllabic affirmative and turned from the window.

But young Randall had no time to nurse his quick resentment, for now,

"THE SCOUNDREL HAS ALREADY PAID FOR IT WITH HIS LIFE."

at last, his father had come ashore, borne on the shoulders of two roustabouts, while the captain and officers stood with bared heads and thankfully left the unwelcome task of explaining the tragedy to the amiable and willing Colonel Moreau.

"My boy," said the latter, now laying a fatherly hand on young Randall's heaving shoulder, "although I am a stranger to yoh, suh, I have ventured to assume temporary control of this terrible affair, foh I am a southern gentleman, as was Mr. Randall, and I feel bound to yoh all by the ties of sympathy and country. I was a witness, suh, to the events which preceded and prompted this outrage, and, although I am aware it is but poh satisfaction, still it is something to know that the scoundrel who was instrumental in causing yoh poh father's death has already paid foh it with his life. My name, suh, is Colonel Moreau, and if I can be of any further service to yoh all in this dark hour of tribulation pray command me, suh. As an old soldier I beg of yoh to meet this calamity with the fohtitude of a Christian gentleman," with which admirable and pious adjuration the good colonel flourished his handkerchief and helped himself to a generous pinch of snuff.

"I—I thank you, Colonel Moreau, for all you have done," said young Randall stonily, looking on the huddled thing at his feet. "You—you say you witnessed my father's death?"

SCIENTIFIC MYSTERIES.

The Problems of Mind, Life, Gravitation and Electricity.

A most remarkable state, condition or point in nature, the absolute zero of temperature, has been reached to within three degrees. This is considered to be a great scientific achievement. Hydrogen gas was solidified into pure white ice, and this was employed in the process of cooling helium, and all works of the hand of man were surpassed. The temperature sank lower and lower until a point only three degrees from absolute was reached, but the obdurate helium did not even liquefy.

The imagination, however vivid, cannot encompass what this intense cold implies. It may be the death of the activity of matter—that is, a state of rest so far as chemical reaction is concerned. Thus if the true zero of nature can be reached it may obtain that matter will put on new aspects and hitherto unknown properties, or it may expire, become chemically inert, totally devoid of heat and lifeless.

Still even then the standing mystery ever confronting man, always awaiting explanation, gravitation, will act. Nothing known can affect the universal attraction, forever directly as to mass, whether hot or cold.

However, the three degrees may never be overcome, or, indeed, they may, for it is now thought that science has no limits, the scientific mind being capable of solving all problems—so saith some mentologists.

The capital problem is first to discover what mind is, then life, next gravitation, next electricity, and reach a climax in finding how it is that gaseous masses glow and issue light when existing in frigid voids at zero absolute.

There is no solution in sight for any of these perplexing problems and harassing. No progress whatever has been made in finding what mind is; the reason being doubtless that mind is unable to think of itself. On trial it will be soon discovered that one is unable to set up a train of reasoning regarding his own or another's mind. "His own" implies an owner, but no fact as to who this owner is has ever been discovered. Humans are not perfect. —Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

A DOUBLE CURE FOR DOUBLE TROUBLE

Father Morrisey's No. 26 Cures Catarrh by a Combined Treatment.

The sudden weather variations in our climate result in a great many cases of catarrh—a troublesome disease usually considered hard to cure, and one which often leads to serious pulmonary and intestinal troubles.

A neglected cold in the head weakens the nasal membranes, so that at every future exposure the trouble returns. At length these conditions are fastened onto the system, and the sufferer undergoes the annoyance and danger of chronic catarrh.

Some doctors confine themselves to prescribing external applications, and thus do not reach the seat of the trouble. Others give internal treatment exclusively, and thus do not promptly relieve the affected parts.

Father Morrisey, the skilled priest-physician, rightly regarded catarrh as a double trouble, consisting of unpleasant local effects and their fundamental causes, the latter having to do with impaired general vitality.

His famous remedy, No. 26, is a combined cure for catarrh. It consists of tablets to be taken three times a day, and an especially compounded salve.

The salve is antiseptic, and quickly heals the inflamed membranes of the nasal passages. The tablets go to the seat of the trouble and restore the system to its usual tone. Together, they cure.

Instead of neglecting a disease that is unpleasant to yourself and to others, and one which often leads to pneumonia and consumption, it is surely the part of wisdom to take timely steps to do away with the effects and at the same time remove the cause. No. 26 does just that.

50c. for the combined treatment. At your druggist's, or from Father Morrisey Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, Montreal, Que.

The Odd Minutes.

It is really wonderful how much can be gained by improving odds and ends of time in keen analytical observing, thinking, reading, studying. Think of the untold wealth locked up in the spare moments and long winter evenings of every life. It is possible to pick up an education in the odds and ends of time which most people throw away. If those who have been deprived of a college education would only make up their minds to get a substitute for it they would be amazed to see what even the evenings of a few weeks devoted conscientiously to the college studies would accomplish. When a noted literary man was asked how he managed to accomplish so much with so little friction or apparent effort he replied, "By organizing my time—to every hour its appointed task or duty, with no overlapping or infringements." There is a great deal of time wasted, even in the busiest lives, which, if properly organized, might be used to advantage.—Success Magazine.

Romance of Samuel F. B. Morse.

The story of Samuel Finley Breese Morse, born fifteen years after the battle of Bunker Hill, is one of the thrilling romances of American biography. On Main street, Charlestown, at the very foot of Breed's hill, I found the birthplace of the great discoverer who fulfilled the almost prophetic utterance of Shakespeare when he spoke of Puck as "girdling the earth in forty minutes." He fought battles and won victories that were just as important as those of any general or admiral on land or sea. He has practically conquered time and distance. He began his career, strange to say, as an artist and amid his struggles and hardships learned that courage and energy would do more than anything else in this world, whether in art or in the pursuit of some abstruse problem in science. Enemies could not dismay him, and inch by inch he fought his way until he won the victory that was flashed out to the world across telegraph wires.—National Magazine.

BODY WAS RECOVERED

Found Floating in Mid-stream Near Club House

The body of little Eddie Taylor, who was drowned two weeks ago last Saturday evening, was recovered about 5.30 o'clock yesterday.

Mr. Bob Wright was coming up the river in his launch yesterday evening and saw the body floating in mid-stream. Mr. Rye and he went out together and rescued it below the Helmont Club house.

Dragging operations had been going on in the vicinity and it is probable that the body was freed from some obstruction where it had become caught.

The remains were taken to Belleghem's undertaking parlors from where the funeral took place at four o'clock this afternoon to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. H. A. Trumpour officiated.

OBITUARY

Michael O'Brien Dead

Michael O'Brien suddenly passed away at his home, 72 Monaghan road, this morning.

The late Mr. O'Brien went to Saskatoon two months ago and returned home on the midnight C.P.R. last night. He had been conversing with his family and was apparently in the best of health. About three o'clock, however, he took a pain in his heart and passed away shortly after.

Deceased was 57 years of age and had lived in Peterborough and vicinity all his life, being engaged in the butcher business for the past thirty years. Always an enthusiastic hunter he was one of the oldest members of the Bottle Lake Hunt Club, with which he went to camp every season.

The late Mr. O'Brien was a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters.

The survivors are his wife, four sons, Harry of Saskatoon; Leo, Gerald and Stanley, residing at home; two daughters, Misses Mary and Georgina at home; one brother, John, of this city, and three sisters, Mrs. Shannon, of Saginaw, Mich., and Misses Margaret and Johanah O'Brien, city.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The Late Robert Sheridan

A life-long resident of East City passed away yesterday in the person of Robert Sheridan, assistant lock-master at the lift lock.

The late Mr. Sheridan had been at work up to last Thursday. Mr. J. H. McClellan, superintendent of the Trent Canal, happened to pay the lock a visit, and noticing that Mr. Sheridan was ill, sent him home, and put another man in his place, temporarily. He never rallied, and passed away at his home, 428 Rogers street, yesterday from pleurisy and heart disease.

The late Mr. Sheridan was born 61 years ago, on Mark street, in East City. He resided in that vicinity all his life, and won the esteem of all who knew him. For twelve years he was a member of the School Board, and he had always been interested in municipal affairs. He served four terms as councillor for the village of Ashburnham. Since the opening of the Hydraulic Lift Lock he has been in the employ of the Trent Canal in the capacity of assistant lockmaster.

Deceased was a Methodist, and a member of St. Mark's church. He was one of the oldest members of Lodge No. 29, C.O.F.

Those left to mourn his death are his wife and two sons, John H. and Robert, both of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place to-morrow from the family residence, 428 Rogers street at 2.30 and proceed to Little Lake cemetery for interment. Service at the house at 2 o'clock.

A TRIP ON THE NEW MOTOR CO.

Rutherford and Grimes Have a Reliable Service

Friday afternoon the bright rays of a glorious summer sun danced and played on the varnished sheen of Messrs. Rutherford, Grimes Company's fine new auto 'bus, as Mr. Tom Rutherford took a few invited guests out for what could be correctly called a "joy ride." The trip, which included a ride to Lakefield via the Smithtown road and return along the beautiful riverside Douro route was most enjoyable and demonstrated the popularity that will inevitably attach to this latest addition to Peterborough's pleasure conveyances. The 'bus under absolute control of the skilled chauffeur, Mr. Percy Grimes, made good speed while on the level road in climbing the steepest hills encountered. On the return trip that steep hill leading from the Lift Lock was surmounted without the slightest difficulty. Whilst descending the equally steep hill leading from that lock westward Mr. Grimes displayed the perfect control he had on the 'bus by stopping that immense weight of steel at intervals at the steepest portion of the grade. Whilst out on this strip Mr. Rutherford, at advantageous points, placed some fifteen or twenty large tin signs advertising Messrs. McLaughlin's garage on Simcoe street. Without doubt this 'bus line, which is shortly to be augmented by another auto, will be very popular among those wanting safe, comfortable and speedy transportation to Chemong, Lakefield and other points as a similarly advantageous means of conveyance to picnics. The ad of the Rutherford, Grimes 'Bus Co. appears in another column.

Wm. Jennings Bryan

In the course of his address in Hamilton before a crowded house, Wm. Jennings Bryan, who will speak in Peterborough on May 18th, took occasion to mention incidentally the trade negotiations now on, between Canada and the United States.

REV. SAWERS AT ST. LUKES CHURCH

Preached His first Sermons Before Large Congregations

Rev. F. J. Sawers, late of Lakefield, and the successor to Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, preached his initial sermon at St. Luke's Anglican church yesterday, and made a decidedly favorable impression of the two large congregations that thronged the church both morning and evening.

At the evening service his discourse was brief, yet pointed, and in simple language he was able to draw a helpful and elevating lesson from the words of the text found in Psalm 21, first verse, "The Lord is my Shepherd."

"Jesus had many titles," said the rector, in opening, "but none that was so reverently bestowed upon Him by the Jews as the one contained in the text. The word, shepherd, in the Biblical sense, stood for everything that was good, watchful and tender. The greatest men among the Jews were all, at some period of their lives, engaged in the occupation of shepherding."

The speaker told a touching little story which illustrated the text very graphically. It was about a little boy who was ill and very weak. The clergyman was asked to call on him and try and cheer him up. He thought that the words of the text would be very suitable, one word for each finger, "The-Lord-is-my-Shepherd," and impressed them upon the sick boy. He went away and called again a few days after. The mother of the child met him at the door, and with a heartbroken look, led him into the sick room, where the child lay dead. Drawing away the coverlet from his still form, the minister beheld a sweet little smile on the dead lips of the lad, and on looking at the little fellow's hands he was surprised to see one hand resting on the other with the fourth finger prominent, revealing that the little fellow had died remembering the last words he had heard from his minister, and taking delight in the fact that Jesus was really his Shepherd.

"It does not matter one iota," continued the preacher, "what others do, God shows you the path to tread if you are to be a true follower of Him."

ROWING CLUB WAS IN GOOD FORM

Minstrel Show Thoroughly Enjoyed Saturday Night

The Toronto Rowing Club Ministrels gave on Saturday night an entertainment that deserved a better attendance than it received. Possibly the evening, which is sacred in Peterborough, to street promenade, accounted for a lack of attendance.

The boys put on a play that is a proper conception of minstrelsy, in the first part or olio. This was staged in strict accordance with the craft—all in black, except the middle man, the singers massed in raised seats, the end men dressed in appropriate costume, the others in evening dress. The scenic effect was good, nothing lacking.

The solo and chorus work was superb. There is nothing to apologize for. Seldom is heard better work, even in professional lines. The preference of an audience, at a minstrel entertainment, is for the ballad, the simplest and most musical of all other song arrangements, and when supplemented by the chorus is exactly what it desired. The solo work was fine and the choruses strong, well in time and with good attention to effect.

"Love's Old Sweet Song," by Mr. R. Moran, was a gem, and the company well sustained his admirable solo work. "Ship Ahoy" by Mr. Frank Hill, was a capital song well sung. The venerable, but ever welcome ballad, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," by Mr. Jas. Bryan, met with hearty and well deserved approval. The work of the end men was all excellent, thoroughly well up to the traditions of ministrelsy. The joke repertoire was not so ample as it might be, brand-new catchy jokes being hard to manufacture.

Victor Lewis gave a number of impersonations of eminent men, and this was well done. His work is marvellously quick and realistic, and gained hearty and frequent applause.

The finish of the program included clever dancing by Joe Hill and a specialty act by members of the company.

WORKMEN FOUND SKELETON IN REAR OF POST OFFICE

Skull Was in Good State of Preservation

Some Interesting Back History About the Locality

This morning, while excavating for the foundation for the post office extension, the men employed came on the remains of an adult, buried beneath the surface about seven feet. Close under the edge, on a line from the inside of the pavement downwards, and extending underneath, with the bones of the legs and feet across the street. With the bones were found an iron buckle and a small dirk knife. Clothing and everything else had all disappeared. The skull was well preserved, with the teeth sound and firm. Whose the remains are, or how they were placed where found can be only a matter of conjecture. All were placed in a box and will be interred.

SOME BACK HISTORY.

In the county history of the city the corner now covered with the post office building, was a part of the hollow down into which the hill on which St. John's church stands projected. Water street was cut through the foot of the hill, north and south, and filled in on the west side. In the hollow stood for many years a two-storey building, used as a dwelling, and afterwards as an hotel, between the years 1842 and 1858. It was there, but unoccupied, in 1861, and afterwards was burned down. The depth at which the skeleton was found would indicate that it was placed there when the street level was much lower than at present, as the building stood fully seven feet below the Hunter street level, as it now grades.

NOTORIOUS DRINKING PLACE.

The incident recalls something of the chequered history of the old building. As a drinking place, it was notorious, at a time when there was no excise and no license. Whiskey sold at one shilling the gallon, threepence the quart, and as Pat Hamon who made whiskey in the building now used by Mr. Fitzgerald as a coal and wood office, said "Not a headache in a quart."

In 1845 Sir John Franklin made his famous voyage of discovery into the Arctics, and never returned. He died there in 1847, as was learned from the memorandum found by McLintock. Several relief expeditions were fitted out to look for the survivors, who had taken to the ice in an endeavor to reach the Great Fish River, overland. One of these parties was in charge of a Capt. Crozier, who had been identified in another part of the world with the work of Franklin.

Capt. Crozier had a twin brother who lived in Peterborough. He was given to drink, and led a very erratic life. Capt. Crozier perished in the Arctics, falling into a crevice in an ice flow and being crushed. It was afterwards found, on comparing data, that on the day and hour in which Capt. Crozier lost his life, his twin brother fell down stairs in a drunken spree in the little old hotel on Hunter street, breaking his neck.

SOME OPINIONS.

It was rather entertaining to hear some of the "Sherlock Holmes" who gathered explain the mystery. One 'sleuth' held that some terrible murder had taken place; while another was of the opinion that the skeleton was that of an Indian. Still another associated the find with the mysterious disappearance of a man by the name of Regan. Wes. Edwards took possession of the dirk, which was broken without any "Hackenschmidt" hold being used.

ST. JOHN'S DEFEATED PARK ST., WHO SCORED THEIR FIRST GOALS

Y.M.C.A. Lost to St. James and All Saints' Put Presbyterians Away.

The St. James football team, undefeated Church Leaguers, met greater opposition in their game Saturday with the Y.M.C.A. team than they anticipated.

The "Y" defence was strengthened by the addition of "Percy" Fitzgerald, who turned out without having any preliminary training, and he proved a hard proposition for the St. James forwards, who, after futile efforts to get in on goal, contented themselves with shooting from away out, scoring their only goal in that manner.

FIRST HALF

The game started with the "Y" playing ten men in the absence of Dr. McPherson, while St. James had their regular line, yet they were unable to make connections.

The ball hovered in the vicinity of the St. James goal, and it was carried to the opposite end of the field only to be returned.

The Methodists had good combination, but failed to get going for any length of time, as the Y.M.C.A. huskies seemed to get in their way.

Nearly the latter part of the initial half C. Hotston, of the St. James forwards shot from the right wing and, Fleming, misjudging the velocity of the ball, failed to connect with it, and the only goal of the day was scored.

SECOND HALF.

The Midland League baseball fellows wanted to use the diamond at four o'clock, and the Y.M.C.A. management had the game stopped at 4.15 o'clock.

At the finish the Y.M.C.A. boys were combining better and getting a number of shots on Leader, who made some phenomenal stops. The majority of the spectators were sorry that the game had to be cut so short. Had the teams finished the 45 minute half there would undoubtedly have been a different story to tell.

The following were the line-ups:—

Y.M.C.A.		St. James
	Goal.
Fleming		Leader
	Backs.
Fitzgerald		Gribb
Hampton		Brown
	Halves.
Moore		Sandiford
Dr. McPherson		Sparrow
Adams		Gates

Caniff		C. Hoston
Lane		Gash
	Left Wing.
Tarte		E. Hotston

Referee—Mr. Lingard.

ST. JOHN'S 3, PARK ST. 2

The home team won the toss and decided to kick with the wind, but this was not much advantage, as it blew across the ground. About 3 minutes from the start St. Johns' made tracks for the Park Street goal and tested Webb with a good shot. He saved brilliantly. After the game had been in progress for 15 minutes, Park St. made a dash for the St. John's goal, Kennedy gave Doddy a hot shot and he was forced to give a corner. This gave Park Street a free kick.

The game was of a give and take order after that, both teams trying hard to procure a goal. After 25 minutes play a corner was given in favor of St. Johns, and although it was placed very nicely by Smith, no counter fell. Then Park Street raced down the ground and would have scored had Hancox not tripped Kennedy. A free kick was given, Tooley kicking, and shot just over the bar.

St. John's woke up and made a raid on the Park Street goal, their forwards playing well together, and G. Smith scored the first goal. After this Park Street seemed to go to pieces, and St. John's fairly had all the best of the play. Gaskell made a good shot from outside right and scored No. 2 goal for St. John's, of which Webb had no chance of saving. The time was getting short for the first half, and St. John's kept on pegging at the Park Street goal, but the backs and goal-keeper were on the spot. Park Street had a good run down towards the St. John's goal and Tooley made a nice shot, but St. John's custodian saved, as the referee blew for half time.

Score, St. John's 2, Park St. 0.

SECOND HALF

Park Street started the ball off. For St. John's, after 2 minutes play Gaskell gave Webb a tester to stop, and he worked with great form.

After 15 minutes play, with Park Street having a little more of the game than St. Johns, they gave St. John's backs and goalkeeper a warm time, but could not get through as the backs were playing with good judgment and kicked well. But after 25 minutes had gone, St John's came on with a rush towards Park Street goal and one of the Park Street backs gave St. John's a corner, on which the ball was well placed by Simmonite, and Sharman turned in the goal, making 3 goals for St. John's.

Then Park Street woke up and made up their minds to do something for the benefit of their supporters. Fortunately for the home team, several supporters came on the ground from St. James' match, and they began to put things right. They cheered the home team on, and, after a little while a goal was scored for Park Street. The outside left passed to Tooley, the inside right, and he counted the first goal scored for Park St. Great cheering followed. After 5 minutes play from the kick off Park Street went ahead and scored No. 2 through Marsh, on which the St. John's goalie had no chance to save.

Now there was only 12 minutes to go and during that time an unfortunate accident occurred to Mathers, the outside right of St. Johns', who had a kick on the instep, and could not assist his team any more. So Park Street took the advantage and kept pressing, but the backs and half-backs of St. John's were good and kicked with fine judgment. St. Johns broke away just at the finish and tested Park Street goal, but could not score. Then the whistle blew for time and the result was St. John's 3, Park St. 2.

B. Relton gave splendid satisfaction as referee and the game was clean.

The teams were—

Park Street.		St. John's
	Goal.
Webb		Doddy
	Backs.
Collett		Renshaw.
Marsh		Hancox
	Half-Back.
Biddle		Brown.
Marks		Simmonite
Pitcher		Smith
	Forwards.
Smith		Mathers.
Tooley		Copson.
Kennedy		Stewart
Briscow		Gaskenell.
Thorne		Sharman

All players and members of the Park Street football team are requested to be out for practice to-morrow evening at 6.30, after which a meeting will be held in the parlors of the church. A full attendance is requested, as important business has to be discussed.

MISS COROLIE PEALE, WOMAN PITCHER

Philadelphia, Pa., May 15.—"Charlie" Dooin will spring something new in major league circles should any of his pitchers go back on him. The little red topped manager has found a young woman pitcher, who, he declares, can hold her own with any of the major league pitching timber.

The young woman's name is Coralie Peale. She has been playing ball for the last five years and has acquired a throwing arm of of which any man might be proud.

Miss Peale has all sorts of curves, drops and fadeaways. The only throw she has not mastered is the "spit ball," and she declares she has not tried that, as she does not think it ladylike for a woman to spit.

Y.M.C.A. SPORTS

The swimming campaign at the Y.M.C.A. has developed beyond all expectations, no less than 78 boys being out for their swimming lessons Friday. Owing to the large number that are already enrolled, it has been found necessary to close the list of candidates for the time being, and only those who have their names already on the list will be taken in during the next week.

The Intermediate Leaders held their first annual banquet, Friday night, and a most enjoyable time was spent. Mr. H. M. Gilchrist gave the members a most interesting and helpful address on "Leadership" after which he presented Mr. "Bill" Hastie with a locket from the other members of the Intermediate Leaders' Corps in recognition of the faithful and unselfish service rendered since the organization of the Corps. "Bill" replied in a few well chosen words, thanking the members of the corps for their kindness.

The Boys' Athletic Contest will open to-morrow when the 100 yards run and the standing broad jump will be run off.

The football team will practice tonight at Riverside Park.

Electric Seven Scored the Only Counter in Game With Bethany

The C.G.E. champions kept up their good work and defeated Bethany braves in a Midland football league game, at the exhibition grounds, Saturday by a 1—0 score, McNamee notching the counter from a corner in the first half. The Bethany boys put up a good exhibition and were always dangerous. The contest was interesting for the spectators and W. Patterson refereed in a capable manner.

The teams were;

C.G.E.—Jones, Hull, McNamee, Milburn, Pagett, Mason, Corless, Bridge, Dawson, French, Miller.

Bethany—Hannah, Price, Morton, Bigelow, Brereton, Staples, Sisson, Begg, Delong, Sherin, Kennedy.

BASEBALL

Two teams lined-up for a game at Riverside Park, Saturday afternoon, and the workout was probably the best of the season. Practices will be continued during the week.

The action by the Bowmanville Club in arranging to play Port Hope, on May 24 necessitates a change, and it is likely that Cobourg will be seen here.

WINNIPEG AFTER JERRY EDMUNDS

Hamilton Club Wants to Keep Him for Canadian League

Hamilton Spectator.—It didn't take the Canadian league long to give the national association officers some work. Early in the week, the London and Berlin clubs got into a squabble over a player, the row being settled to-day, when Secretary Farrell awarded the player in question to Berlin, and now along comes the Hamilton with a row on its hands, with Jerry Edmunds, the catcher, who has been doing so much good work for the local squad, as the bone of contention, with Winnipeg on the other end of it, and Secretary Farrell, acting as the referee. It seems that Edmunds played with Winnipeg last year in the Western Canada league and was on the Winnipeg reserve list. According to the rules he should have been tendered his contract for this year prior to March 1. The Winnipeg club did not send on a contract until after April 1, and Edmunds took no notice of it, accepting terms instead with Manager Lee, of the Hamilton club. He came to Hamilton last week to join the local squad, and two days ago received a telegram from Winnipeg instructing him to report to the western club. Jerry instead sent on the particulars to Secretary Farrell and asked for a ruling on the case, claiming that failure to receive his contract prior to March 1 made him a free agent and free to sign with the Hamilton club, with whom he prefers to remain. Farrell has not given out his final decision on the matter, although he has intimated that the Winnipeg club is to blame for not sending on the contract as provided for in the rules. In the meantime Edmunds is sticking with the local squad, even though he had another wire to-day from Winnipeg as he is satisfied that he will be allowed to stay here.

Edmunds has played some great ball for Hamilton since coming here, and is well liked by the fans, who regard him as the strongest player on the team.

Jerry handled the big mit on Saturday when Hamilton won from Niagara University, 2-1.

MADE EIGHT HOME RUNS IN THE NINTH

Some Clouting in a South Michigan League Game

Lansing, Mich., May 13.—Another season's baseball record, and incidentally a record never equalled in the South Michigan League, was made by the Saginaw Club against Lansing to-day, when eight home runs were secured in a nine-inning game. Less than that number were made on the same ground all last season. Saginaw won the game by 21 to 5.

Several farm buildings were burned at North Gower, Ont., and a man seriously burned.

"FEEBLE STOMACH"

Causes Digestive Weakness and Poisons the Entire System.

"No one can have suffered more than I did with stomach trouble," writes Phil. E. Pascalar, well known at St. Andrews Corners. "My doctor told me my indigestion and sleeplessness were due to poisons in the blood. Certainly my condition was desperate, and it seemed from the despondent feelings that swept over me that I would lose my reason. I happened to read about Dr. Hamilton's Pills and bought five boxes from the druggist. Such body-cleansing pills I never used; they were mild and yet quite strong enough to drive all the humors out of the blood. My stomach gained strength rapidly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I improved so much that in eight weeks I could eat and digest all ordinary food. Depression and weariness passed away and I am, thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills, enjoying robust good health."

No remedy for billousness, indigestion, headache, sick stomach, or constipation that compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse substitutes. Sold in 25c. boxes. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Shoe Factory Promotor Made a Sudden Move

The promoter of the new Harriston shoe factory has departed for parts unknown. It is said the total belongings of the institution is a horse and typewriter. The party came to Harriston about a year ago and induced the town to give him the use of a factory building to operate in. There was a great flourish, joy riding in an automobile, feasting, etc. A leading citizen advanced $1,000, and "the bum" was sure to come to Harriston. The automobile was burned while out on a trip last summer, how or why is merely conjecture. Now the bird has flown, and the bailiff is in possession of what l'ttle assets remain.—Guelph Mercury.

FUNNY INCIDENTS IN FARM LIFE

A young English immigrant arrived in this country recently, and was given a place on a farm. He knew little of Canadian ways and about farm produce, and his amusing lack of experience led to a humorous incident one day. His employer asked him to go out into a field and root out all the foxtails from the potato crop that was planted there. Some pumpkins were also growing in the vicinity.

After a time he came back and his employer said, "Well, have you picked out all the foxtails?"

"Yes," was the reply, "but I never saw foxtails like those before."

"Well, we'll go out and see," said the farmer.

What do you think the young fellow had done? He had picked out all the turnips by the roots and thrown them over a nearby fence. The immigrant had not known the difference between foxtails and turnips.

Another case was heard of an immigrant who apparently must have misunderstood the instructions of the farmer he was working for. Discovering one day that his binder was broken and required a new part, he asked the young fellow to bring out the buggy, as he would have to hitch up and go to town for a new part. Imagine his surprise when, on coming out a few moments later, he saw the young fellow standing beside the grind-stone, evidently believing that was the object he had been asked to fetch.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

PRICES IN THE STATES

Consumable Commodities That Have Dropped in Price Since April, 1910

There has been a decided recession in the various markets for consumable commodities in the United States since a year ago, when the great body of consumers in different parts of the republic protested against the high cost of living in the form of anti-meat-eating leagues and by many petitions to the Government at Washington. The Pioneer Press, of St. Paul, Minnesota, recently published the following table which shows prices of various commodities in April, 1910, and April, 1911:

	1910. April,	1911. April,
Navy beans, per bush	$2.55	$2.25
Cornmeal, per bush	2.10	1.50
Lard, per lb.	.18	.12½-.15
Cheese	.17½	.13
Salmon, per doz. 2-lb. cans	1.65	2.00
Rolled oats, per 100 lbs.	2.50	1.90
Ham (whole)	.16½	.12½
Bacon	.18½	.14
Flour (best) per bbl.	6.00	5.00
Eggs	.25	.15-.16
Butter (best grades)	.33-.35	.28
Chickens	.24	.18
Sirloin steak	.22	.20
Porterhouse	.26	.24

The Pioneer Press concludes by saying: "Butcher, grocer and consumer express gratification at the showing that the month of April makes in comparison to the same month in 1910. The dealers, especially, express themselves as well pleased with the 'drop,' because more goods will be sold and business will be better than for some time."

GRAIN AND BREADSTUFFS

Some Figures of the Trade in These Commodities

The Canadian Miller, in its May number, contains the following historical sketch of the grain and breadstuffs trade between Canada and the United States, showing the gradual increase in imports from the latter country:—

A brief summary of the development of trade between Canada and the United States in grain and breadstuffs since Confederation may be of interest just now. Statistics are not complete, and there have been changes in classification which alter the results in some items. In 1874 our imports of dutiable breadstuffs of all kinds were $64,328 from the United States. By 1880 these grew to over a million dollars, and from that down to 1896 they ranged from a million and a quarter to over four million dollars per year. They then dropped below the million mark till 1902, when they were $1,220,000, and they have risen steadily, till in 1910 these imports fro mthe United States were $1,740,000 out of a grand total of $2,589,000 from all countries. The list of free breadstuffs imported from the United States made a total of $15,447,000 in 1874, and these large imports were maintained till 1879, when the National Policy was enforced, when they dropped to nothing for three years, and the grand total up to 1889 was only about $10,000 of free breadstuffs. The imports were small till 1896, when they were $99,288, and next year they jumped to $720,000, and in 1898 they jumped further to $6,968,000. The free imports have ranged since then from two millions to eight millions a year, the figures in 1910 being $4,636,000. These figures include raw grain as well as manufactured cereal products.

Turning to exports, we shipped wheat to the United States to the value of $2,494,000 in 1868, and this varied from a few thousands in some years to over two million dollars, averaging about a million till 1894, when it dropped to $76,000. Since 1903 it has ranged all the way from $100,000 to nearly three millions. Taking all grains, our exports in 1868 to the United States were $6,699,000, and varied from four millions to thirteen millions till 1893, when for the first time it was under two million, since which it has in some years gone as low as $204,000. It rose, however, from $635,000 in 1908 to $2,958,000 in 1910.

Our exports of wheat flour in 1869 to the United States were $423,000, and remained above the $100,000 mark till 1878, since when they have been insignificant till 1904, when they were again above $100,000. In 1908 Canada exported flour to the value of $122,000 and in 1910 $571,000. Our exports there of all other manufactured grain products were $86,000 in 1896, and have been small all the way down the years till 1910. The grand total of our exports of grain products were $850,000 in 1868, but since the eighties were below $100,000, except in one year, down to 1904. In 1908 they were $126,000, and in 1910 $582,000. These returns are given in round numbers.

DECORATIONS ON ELABORATE SCALE

All England Busy Donning Its Gala Attire in Preparation for Great Ceremony of Coronation

All England is busy donning the gala attire with which it will greet the hundreds of thousands of spectators, among whom will be numbered the crowned heads of Europe, their retinues, and delegations from every nation of the world, besides throngs of wealthy sight-seers who are even now flocking into London by every boat and train. Judging by the elaborate preparations and the earnest assurances of those in charge of the festivities, the coming pageants will eclipse anything attempted in modern times, and vie with the festivals of the ancients in splendor, cost and attendance. For months and months thousands of British subjects have been at work preparing for the great events at an expenditure of many millions of dollars. London is to be decorated as it never was before. There are to be parades, receptions at the royal court, horse shows, friendly contests between the military of visiting nations, entertainments by the elite of Great Britain and decorations that will astound the visitors by their lavish magnificence. Despite the fact that the Coronation is to be the piece de resistence in this long list of events—there are very, very few who will witness the actual ceremony. This no doubt will prove a keen disappointment to many who have been led to understand, that the actual ceremony of crowning the King and Queen will be open to all who have the price. Such is not the case—the Coronation proper will take place within the sacred precincts of Westminster Abbey, with only members of the royal family of England and invited guests from among the crowned heads of Europe as spectators. A seat within the great cathedral cannot be bought for love or money. The plebian visitor need not be disappointed, however for he will have many opportunities to gratify his curiosity relative to this country's new sovereigns. Five times during May and June their Majesties will drive through the streets of London that all may see.

HIS WEIGHT IN GOLD

Unique Hindu Custom Which King Will Participate In

If the King raises no objection, it is proposed by the Indian community in Calcutta that he shall sit in a scale weighted by gold coins when he visits that city after his Coronation, his exact weight in gold afterwards to be distributed amongst the poor.

This is a very ancient Hindu custom, and is still kept up at Travancore, where it is called "Talabbaram." The gold is heaped up till the newly-crowned Maharajah rises well in the air. Meanwhile, the priests chant hymns, trumpets are sounded, and the assembled populace falls prostrate before the man in the scale, who then, and not until then, becomes their lawful ruler.

Afterwards there used to be a general scramble amongst all those present for the gold. But so many accidents occurred—eleven people were crushed to death on one occasion—that official almoners were appointed, whose duty it was to distribute it amongst the most necessitous.

The custom is not so expensive as it sounds. It is estimated, for instance, that the cost of the ceremony in King George's case, including the weight of gold and the necessary entertainment, will not be more than $100,000.

Obviously, however, much depends upon the size of the new ruler, and Indian native potentates are generally fat. There is, indeed, a story current of one such who weighed well over twenty stone.

Because of this he tried the experiment of substituting silver for gold. But his people resented the innovation, and promptly chose another ruler.

WHILE ROYALTY STANDS

No One May Sit, So Habit of King is Embarrassing

What effect, asks the Liverpool Post, will the King's early hours have on society? His dinner parties are earlier than those of his father. Instead of sitting down to bridge until the small hours he remains talking after the meal for a bare half-hour, and then it is all over. Of course, no one may sit whilst Royalty stands, and his habit of not taking a chair must somewhat inconvenience some of his guests. He smokes a good deal, but does not confine himself to the one brand beloved by his father. The present King's smoking is more general, and of not so strong a character as those his predecessor cared for. Also, he is often satisfied with an Egyptian cigarette.

BATHTUBS IN MEXICO.

Made of Cement, They Are a Real Luxury In a Hot Climate.

"Unless you have been in the tropics," remarked the man who had just returned from a trip to Mexico, "you can't possibly realize how great a luxury a cold bath can be. It's not that the climate is necessarily warmer than a New York summer, but the natives have worked out the problem of bathing to its ultimate conclusions. They have invented the ideal tub.

"On the great private estates in Mexico baths are in use today which were hewn out of the solid rock centuries ago by slave labor. They are located for the most part in the vicinity of running water and are fed by bamboo pipes, but in many cases they have to be filled by the old fashioned method of carrying a bucket to and from the spring.

"In the cities the so called stone baths are made of cement. The residences of all well to do people are provided with them, and they are a feature of the native hotels. They are usually about ten feet long by four deep—baby swimming tanks, in fact.

"The tropical custom is to fill the baths late at night. By the following morning the water will have acquired a limpid coolness that acts like a tonic upon the body. When one remembers that near the equator it is almost as warm in the morning as it is at noon and that water taken direct from the city mains is always tepid the advantage of the stone or cement bath is evident."—New York Sun.

TIGERISH TUNAS.

Wild Carnage When They Meet Their Natural Prey, Flying Fish.

One time at St. Clements we sighted a feeding school of tuna, an exhiiarating sight. A flying fish weighing a pound and a half or more would start from the water and soar an extraordinary distance, nearly out of sight, but every inch of that flight I knew was covered by a big tuna keeping his place just beneath the "flier" and ready to seize it the moment it fell into the water. This rarely failed. The moment the fish began to drop the tuna would spring at it like a tiger, turning and tossing the spume into the air with a splendid and electrifying rush, a maneuver that was repeated all over the blue channel.

The sensational charge meant that a school of tunas had discovered a school of its natural prey, flying fishes. At once the lust for blood and food was on, and the carnage was the result.

I have observed some curious scenes at sea, but never have I seen fear so forcibly expressed as by a school of flying fishes exhausted and at the mercy of the voracious tunas. I have had them gather about my boat and cling to its keel as closely as they could, while the air was full of leaping tunas and soaring flying fish. At such times when a school of sardines is rounded up the fishes are so terrified that men have rowed up to them and scooped them in by the pailful.—C. F. Holder in Outing.

Delhi and Its History.

Shah Jehan in 1631 built the present city of Delhi, close to the old Delhi, and made it the royal residence. The Mohammedans still call it Shahjehanabad, the "city of the king of the world." Nadir Shah, the Persian usurper, captured it in 1739, massacred thousands of the inhabitants and bore away plunder to the value of nearly $100,000,000, including the famous peacock throne and the great Kohinoor diamond. The British first came into control in 1803, when the Mahrattas were defeated near Delhi by Lord Lake. When the sepoy mutiny broke out in 1857 Shah Mohammed Bahadour, then ninety years old, took command of the city and until the English again triumphed enjoyed the imperial state to which he had long been a stranger.

Harriman Told Him.

Harriman had an almost supernatural instinct for knowing what was going on and who was doing it in the mysteries of stock manipulation. Once when Southern Pacific had been going up fast, Harriman and various banking houses buying in concert, he called up on the telephone one of his private brokers. "Somebody is selling," he said. "Yes, sir," was the answer. "Well, hand the market 25,000 for me." Immediately he called up the head of a banking firm much interested in the market. "Who's selling Southern Pacific?" he asked. "I don't know; we haven't been able to find out," was the answer. "I'll tell you," snapped Harriman; "it's your house." And he cut off the connection before any reply to him could be made.—Exchange.

"How is he getting along?"

"Oh, fine! Anything in the way of a novelty always appeals to him."—Washington Herald.

Blamed the Architect.

An architect who had business at the criminal courts building saw an old private pupil of his on trial for burglary. He waited around until the man was convicted; then he spoke to him.

"How did you happen to go to the dogs, Jim?" he said. "I expected better things from a man who pegged away at architecture as earnestly as you did."

"I pegged away because I needed a knowledge of architecture in my business," said the burglar. "I was a bad one then, but I wasn't proficient. I found I could accomplish much more if I knew how houses ought to be built. Suppose I wanted to tackle a strange house and had no way of examining the interior beforehand. If I knew the rules of architecture I could reconnoiter and get a good idea from the outside of the house how it was planned on the inside and so move about much more safely than a dunderhead who knew nothing about building. What I learned from you helped me through many a tight place. I wouldn't have been caught this time if I hadn't struck a house that had been planned by a bum architect."—New York Press.

Taking Stringent Precautions.

Ottawa, May 15.—Militia orders this year aim at the man who conveys typhoid around with him, though himself apparently well. They state that "no officer, non-commissioned officer or man of the miltia, permanent or active, who has suffered from typhoid fever, within twelve months" will be allowed to proceed to Petawawa camp unless it has been satisfactorily proved that he is not a "carrier."

No Anti-Chinese Policy.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—The Novoe Vremya in its editorial of yesterday denies the rumors published here that negotiations have been going on between Russia and Japan for a common anti-Chinese policy. The paper will say, however, that the Japanese and Russian Governments are negotiating for two conventions, one for the mutual extradition of criminals and the other for the mutual registration of patents.

New Labor Party.

Montreal, May 15.—At a meeting of the executive board of the Montreal National Trades and Labor Council Saturday, it was decided to organize a political labor party in connection with the council, and to place labor candidates in several constituencies in eastern Canada.

The new labor party will be conducted on lines similar to that of the British Labor party.

INTERESTING POLITICS.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—An interesting piece of inside history of Ottawa politics has just leaked through. Mr. Fielding was to have been left as leader by Sir Wilfrid Laurier when the latter was forced recently by Mr. Borden to go to the Imperial Conference. The French members, however, objected to Mr. Fielding's leadership and demanded adjournment, not forgetting their hatred of him on account of his stand against the infamous autonomy bills of 1906, by which Alberta and Saskatchewan were shorn of provincial rights in lands, timber minerals and education, and by which separate schools were guaranteed to the Roman Catholics there, no matter what the provinces wished in that way, and wholly contrary to Sir Wilfrid's professions in 1896 regarding Manitoba. In the Manitoba case the law of England was pronounced to be on the minority's side, and the Conservatives bowed to the law. But in the case of the other provinces there was no such law or judgment, because the date of forming the provinces expressly proved that. The admission of the provinces into confederation in one case (Manitoba) hinged on the separate schools being then in existence, whereas the new provinces were unhampered by any such schools and any such judgment of the English Privy Council. The Catholics deserted Sir Charles Tupper in 1896, however, and let him go down into the soup, and they stuck to his opponents for the good things that were to come in the new provinces, and since. Anyhow, all this has come back against Fielding, because he was opposed to it and Sir Wilfrid and the French triumph once more, as usual. They are too many for us.

Yours,
ON THE JOB.

Simcoe Street Being Treated With Tarvia

Mr. B. E. Smith, of the Paterson Manufacturing Co., of Toronto, is in the city to-day, and is treating Simcoe street, in front of the city buildings, with a "dust killing" preparation, "Tarvia," one application of which lasts one year, except when used on streets where there is a heavy traffic. "Tarvia" is a preparation closely resembling tar. A coat of sand is used after the treatment. One barrel covers 120 yards, and the cost is from 24 to 28 cents a square yard.

Hardly had a section of the street been treated this afternoon when Jupiter Pluvius turned on the juice. The competition may be taken as an indication of the merits of "Tarvia." At any rate there was nothing doing from the clouds, while the oil was working.

The company is making the application free of charge.

OIL AND RUBBER

Divided Opinion as to Ruinous Effects

There has been considerable comment lately about the effect of the oil on the streets on the rubber on the tires of livery outfits, automobiles and bicycles, and opinion seems to be divided as to whether it has a bad effect on them or not. While there is no doubt but that the oil is beneficial in settling the dust, still one auto owner complained about the manner in which it was sprinkled. He stated that the dust should first be swept off cleanly from the street and then the oil laid on which would give a good, hard, glossy surface. The same auto owner stated that it would not take long to rot the rubber of any tire if the oil was put on as it has been done without first removing the dust.

Livery men do not consider the oil to have much ill effect on the tires of their outfits, although they admit having heard complaints.

It is the bicyclists who are particularly up in arms. Tires purchased this year will not last to any great length of time, the oil ruining the rubber beyond repair.

Attacked by Moors.

El Knitra, Morocco, May 8.—(Delayed in transmission.)—Major Vidal yesterday conducted a reconnaisance to the south and was attacked by 200 Moors. Quick firers were turned on the tribesmen, who were dispersed with a loss of 20 killed or wounded. The French had one Spahi wounded.

The body of a native scout was found in a mutilated condition. The columns afterwards captured the Moor, who was concerned in this murder, and shot him.

The camp to-night was twice aroused by the shots from the outskirts. A convey from Mehidia on its way to Salee was attacked by a swarm of horsemen. The Spahis charged, sabring many of them. The native Kaid, co-operating with the French, had two of his men killed. The enemy's dead numbered twelve.

THE BAPTISTS CELEBRATE

Sixteenth Anniversary of Park St. Church

Rev. Dr. Sowerby of Toronto Preached at Both Services

The sixteenth anniversary of the Park Street Baptists Church was celebrated yesterday, and at both morning and evening services, the congregations were large.

Rev. Dr. Sowerby of College Street Baptist church, Toronto, preached both times. Dr. Sowerby is one of the best orators in the Baptist ministry.

He took as his text, Exodus, chapter 14 verse 19—"and the angel of God, which went before the camp of Israel removed and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face and stood behind them."

The people of Israel were in bondage about fifteen generations said the speaker, by the Egyptians, who were saved by Joseph.

By a miracle another Hebrew was saved—Moses, God's supreme mandate reigned forth, when Pharaoah decreed that Moses should die.

After having to leave Egypt, Moses came back and liberated one million people by the aid of God. Everyone remembered that marvellous plan God had put forth for the security of the first born of Israel. It was strange that Moses led the Israelites eastward to the boundary and then southward into a trap—mountains on right and left and the Red Sea in front. Any ordinary man would have avoided that plan. If there had not been something in history to show the hand of God we should have called it an unpardonable blunder.

God had undertaken to save his people and had taken them there for a double purpose—first to give the people a lesson that they should never say it was by their own wiles that they had escaped from Pharaoh, second, to annihilate the Egyptians.

The Israelites camped on the low land that night, and on looking up along the sky-line could discern the troops of Pharaoh—well disciplined—lined along the heights. The Israelites became frightened and Moses bade them be calm while he prayed.

No human power on earth would have saved the undisciplined Israelites against the Egyptian hosts, but God always came in the right time.

By getting behind his people, God thus threw light upon them, and a shadow upon the sleeping Egyptians, wh othougth their prey could not escape.

God bade Moses stretch his staff o'er the Red Sea, and lo a passage was made for the column.

God needed to be behind as a rear guard. It was always a safe thing to trust God as the Israelites had done. Thousands had suffered for their faithful service, in following their convictions based on God. God knows your troubles and he would see you through if you put your trust in Him.

There will be several speakers on the program to-night, including Rev. Dr. Sowerby.

LAID TO REST

The funeral of the late John Wood was held on Saturday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery at four o'clock and was largely attended by many old friends and acquaintances of the deceased. The service at the late residence, Belmont Ave., was conducted by Rev. I. Couch, assisted by Rev. G. W. Henderson, of Charlotte street church. The pall bearers were Messrs. Robert Fair, Wm. Scott, Frank Adams, Dr. Wightman, and Mayor Morrow and Dr. Morrison.

STANDARD OIL CO. MUST GET OUT OF BUSINESS IN SIX MONTHS

Huge Trust Must Dissolve, Says Supreme Court of the U.S.--- Missouri Court Decision is Upheld.

Washington, May 16.—The Supreme Court of the United States yesterday upheld the decision of the Missouri courts ordering the dissolution of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

The Supreme Court holds:

That the Standard Oil Co. is a monopoly in restraint of trade.

That this giant corporation must be dissolved within six months.

Corporations whose contracts are "not unreasonably restrictive of competition" are not affected.

Other great corporations whose acts may be called into question will be dealt with according to the merits of their particular cases.

The court was unanimous as to the main features of the decision, Justice Harlan dissenting only as to a limitation of the application of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

President Taft and Cabinet will consider immediately the entire trust situation and the advisability of pressing for a federal incorporation act.

The decision in the tobacco case was not handed down yesterday, but is expected on May 29.

Chief Justice White, in his opinion, first reviewed the preliminary proceedings in the case in the Circuit Court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri. He restated the essential points in the bill of the Government asking for the dissolution of the Standard Oil, and the answer questioning the jurisdiction of the court and denying the claims of the Government. He dismissed the objection to the jurisdiction in a few words, by holding that it was not well founded. He then came to the arguments as to the law and the facts in the case, saying that out of the "jungle" of law and facts both sides were agreed only in one thing, and that was that the determination of the controversy rested upon the proper construction and application of the first and second sections of the Anti-Trust Act. The views of the two sides, as to the law, the chief justice said, were as wide apart as the poles. The same, he said, was true as to the facts.

In this state of affairs, the chief justice seized upon the single point of concord, namely, the application of the two sections of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, as the initial basis of an examination of the contention. The rest of his opinion divides itself into a consideration of the meaning of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law in the light of the common law and the law of the United States at the time of its adoption, the contentions of the parties concerning the act and the scope and effect of the decisions of the Supreme Court, the application of the statute to the facts, and, lastly, the remedy.

In striving to get at the meaning of the two sections of the law he said that the sole subject with which the first section dealt was "restraint of trade," and that the attempt to monopolize and monopolization" was the subject of the second section. The chief justice said that in getting at the meaning of these words he would be guided by the principle that where words are employed in a statute, which at the time had a well-known meaning in common law, or in the law of the country, they were presumed to have been used in this sense unless the context compels to the contrary.

ROOSEVELT'S "CUCKOO PARENTS."

New York, May 16.—Colonel Roosevelt has coined another expression. It is the "cuckoo parent," which is now expected to take its place along with "mollycoddle," "dee-lighted," "malefactor of great wealth," and other picturesque offerings the Colonel has made to the English language.

"The cuckoo type of father or mother," Roosevelt told the Dewitt Clinton High school, "is one who deposits the child at the school door and goes away with the feeling that all the future physical, mental and moral welfare of the child lies in the hands of the teacher."

MR. O'CONNELL REPLIES TO MAYOR MORROW'S LETTER RE INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER

Takes Up the Mayor's Letter Seriatum—Claims Mr. Duggan Had a Lot to Do With Getting Power Report—Mr. Duggan Not to Blame in Reference to the Mix-up Over Mr. Beck's Coming.

Peterborough, May 16, 1911.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—If you will permit I would like to answer some statements contained in the Mayor's letter, published in your paper on the 13th inst., and which seems to call for a reply.

In the first place, I regret that I am compelled to say that the Mayor has not treated me quite fairly in the matter. He insinuates, rather than asserts, in describing me as Mr. Duggan's advocate, that I am acting for that gentleman in a professional capacity, and thus conveys an entirely erroneous impression. I have not any professional relations with Mr. Duggan, either in this or in any other matter, and my course throughout has been prompted by my conviction that that gentleman has not been treated with fair play.

Referring specifically to the statements contained in the Mayor's letter, allow me to take them up seriatum.

The Mayor says: "Mr. Duggan has pointed to two industries as the fruit of his work, the Bonner Worth and Gold Medal Camp Furniture Company. As to the first, Mr. Bonner wrote me, and I handed his letter over to the commissioner, who invited Mr. Bonner to visit Peterborough, and Mr. Bonner and Mr. Worth met the members of the council, and the whole matter of the bargain between them and the city was made and concluded by the members of the council." The fact is that Mr. Bonner wrote to the Mayor of Peterborough, presumably not knowing that there was such a person as the Industrial Commissioner. This letter was, as the Mayor states, handed to the commissioner, who immediately communicated with Mr. Bonner by telephone, and succeeded in inducing him to come to Peterborough for a personal interview. When that gentleman arrived Mr. Duggan took him in hand and discussed the situation with him, and finally attended with him before the meeting of the city council, where the bargain was concluded, and where only it could be concluded.

The mayor further says, as to the other firm, meaning the Gold Medal Camp Furniture Company, that its representative visited Peterborough and selected a site before Mr. Duggan came to Peterborough. This would seem to intimate that this matter was concluded before Mr. Duggan undertook the duties of his office. If this meaning is intended to be conveyed it is wholly wrong. On inspection of the commissioner's file in this matter the last communication that I can find between the

WORKMAN CASE TISSUE OF THEORIES

Effect of the Higher Criticism is Debated

Montreal, May 16.—That many of Dr. Workman's pupils had undoubtedly gone to the bad in a theological acceptance of the term, as the result of their professor's teachings, was the evidence adduced yesterday in the Workman libel suit case. Rev. Drs. Young of Montreal and Scott of Brantford both declared that Dr. Workman's views were at variance with the standards of the Methodist faith.

Mr. Justice Weir endeavored to obtain an admission from one of the witnesses that the doctrinal standards were subject to change and evolution, and asked if it was not true that the minister had placed a broader interpretation on the gospel than did he of fifty or a hundred years ago. The witnesses, while admitting that there was a broader interpretation given the doctrine to-day, no less positively averred that the doctrinal standards were in nowise affected thereby.

The judge also asked if it was not the very essence of Protestantism that every man should think as he pleased, and the answer given was that even granting this a Methodist minister was bound in conscience to teach the doctrines as outlined in the standards of his faith.

The chief points on which the witnesses declared Dr. Workman's teachings to be at variance with the doctrinal standards of his church were the questions of the corporal resurrection of Christ, the virgin birth, the nature of the atonement and the historical actuality of the fourth gospel.

NOVA SCOTIA ELECTION DATE; LIBS. HAVE BEEN IN 29 YEARS

Voting to Take Place on June 14 — Conservative Chances Much Brighter.

Halifax, May 16.—The Legislature of Nova Scotia is dissolved and the date of the elections has been fixed for Wednesday, June 14. The Legislature has run its full five years. The Liberals have held power in Provincial affairs in Nova Scotia for twenty-nine years, under two Premiers, with W. S. Fielding and George Murray, the latter for fifteen years and the former for fourteen. In the House of Assembly that has now been dissolved there are four Conservatives in the Opposition, with one Independent Liberal, and in the Legislative Council or Upper Chamber, where the members are appointed for life, there are only two who belong to the Conservative, or Opposition, party. Premier Murray will run for Victoria County, though he has not yet been nominated. Candidates have been nominated by the Conservatives in all of the eighteen counties except Antigonish, and the Liberals have made nominations in all except two, Victoria and Colchester. The ranks will be closed up in the three counties within few days.

CHURCH HAS NO REAL SAY

Justice Riddell Tells Toronto People Not to Worry.

No Church in Canada Could Declare Valid Marriage Invalid.

Toronto, May 16.—"Don't worry about any church declaring invalid any marriage in Canad which is valid according to the civil law," said Mr. Justice Riddell at Cooke's Presbyterian Church last night.

In addressing the Catch-My-Pal Society, Judge Riddell explained some of the legal positions of the crown, the courts, and the new Canadian.

The King was just as much King of Canada as of Great Britain. The crown possessed a veto power, but its exercise died with Queen Anne, and was as dead as Queen Anne.

The courts were not the mysterious institutions generally supposed. They were simply bodies employed to administer justice in accordance with custom handed down for hundreds of years, with the admixture of a little Roman law. The customs had, some of them been embodied in written statutes, but many of them had not. The safety of the community depended upon the intelligence and honesty of the jurymen.

WILD MAN RUN IN AFTER FIGHT

Hermit Lost His Mind and Became Dangerous

Brockville, May 16.—County Constable Hourigan of Brockville had an exciting encounter with a maniac named W. A. Vandusen, living practically the life of a hermit on a lonely island in Gananoque Lake, 10 miles north of Lansdowne. For twelve years this man had made his home in a shack with a vicious dog as his only companion, and a rifle and shot gun convenient in times of emergency. The man has the reputation of being an expert hunter and trapper, and recently his mind became affected to such an extent, that residents of the locality within a radius of five miles were alarmed at his actions. Vandusen had an imaginery grievance against one of their number, William Lee, and a few days ago Lee learned that Vandusen had on two occasions been seized with an impulse to kill him, first with an axe, and secondly with a gun. He accordingly came to Brockville and swore out a warrant for the man's arrest.

The constable was driven off by Vandusen and his dog on his first visit to the island. On the occasion of a second visit, Hourigan and his son found that Vandusen had left the island, the dog having been made secure in the shack by the maniac before taking his departure. After waiting four or five hours under cover, they were rewarded by Vandusen returning. Hourigan allowed him to get within a few feet of the house before he pounced upon him. Though completely taken by surprise, he fought like a wild animal for ten minutes before the handcuffs were adjusted. During the melee the crazed man bit the constable's fingers, but not seriously.

When arraigned in the Police Court here yesterday, Vandusen presented a wild and woolly appearance. He told the magistrate that he had thought of killing Lee, saying: "The devil tempted me, but the Lord stopped me." He was remanded to be examined for his sanity. With the capture of Vandusen, residents of the locality where he made his haunts, are breathing easier.

CENSUS ENUMERATORS ARE SELECTED BY LIBERAL MACHINE

MISS H. GRACE PARSONS.
A young lady of Brocton, Mass., who will try to introduce into English schools the public school farm garden idea.

Party Organizer in Manitoba in Charge of the Faithful Appointed to Look After Work.

Ottawa, May 16.—According to Mr. Borden, the doctrine enunciated in the House yesterday in the course of a debate initiated by W. D. Staples, was that the Government could make appointments to the census staff on the recommendation of criminals. In fact, the Minister of Agriculture went so far as to describe as "trivial offenders" men who had been branded as criminals by the courts, and also men who had been accessories after the fact, if not before, to the crimes committed by absconding deputy returning officers at elections—men who still dare not return to Canada.

When the motion to go into committee of supply was reached, W. D. Staples made a speech in criticism of Hon. Sydney Fisher, in connection with the appointment of census enumerators and then moved in amendment: "In the selection and appointment of pulbic officers, the Government is exercising a public trust and should be guided by consideration of the character and capacity of the person whom it is proposed to appoint.

"That the delegation of such a public trust to a local party committee or organizer is a public scandal and deserves the censure of this House."

Mr. Staples intimated at the outset that the matter would not have been brought up had certain questions which he put to the Minister of Agriculture the other day been answered to his satisfaction. He had asked whether or not the Liberal organizer of Manitoba had recommended the persons in that province appointed as enumerators, and Mr. Fisher had declined to answer. He had also asked if the enumerators were to be schooled by the Liberal organizer, and the Minister had replied in the negative in a very impolite manner. Mr. Staples then read letters addressed confidentially to census enumerators and signed: "Yours in the good cause, H. E. Perry."

Mr. Staples followed up the reading of the letters by a description of the incidents arising out of the provincial bye-election in 1905, when a poll was unlawfully held in the far north and 151 bogus ballots turned in to the returning officer. He read various letters which Perry, the present Liberal organizer in Manitoba, had addressed to Moberley McLeod and Neilson, the principals in that incident, which went to show that after they had been fined and left the country, Perry was in communication with them to stay away. Mr. Staples wanted to know if Perry was the kind of a man in whom the Minister of Agriculture had confidence.

Mr. Fisher said he did not hesitate to say that Mr. Perry, like many others, had made recommendations as to the appointment of census enumerators. "I do not," he said, "acknowledge in this House the recommendations on which I act and I do not propose to do so. They are of a private nature and it is the policy of the Government not to make them public."

Mr. Staples asked if, in view of the letters he had produced, the Minister still considered Mr. Perry to be a fit and proper person.

Mr. Fisher said he did not propose to accept any evidence against any men except such as had been established in a court of law. This was the first he had heard of these letters and he did not propose to accept them as evidence against Mr. Perry.

In reply to a question by Mr. Lake the Minister said that Moberley, who was engaged on census work in 1905, had been dismissed as soon as it was established in court that he had been guilty of offences in connection with an election. He would do the same thing to-day if it were shown that any census official was an improper person. Touching on the correspondence which passed between Mr. Perry and the principals in the Prince Albert election, as quoted by Mr. Staples, the Minister said that he gathered that they had been guilty of some trivial offences.

R. L. Borden interrupted to say that they were guilty of eight or ten offences against the election, and, besides, had committed forgery and perjury.

Mr. Staples' amendment was voted odwn by 84 to 51, a Government majority of 33.

George Taylor (Leeds) asked if it was true that the speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. W. S. Fielding on the reciprocity agreement were being sent out in bundles to postmasters, who were instructed to distribute them. He was informed that this was the case. He said that the Government had no business to use the postmasters for political purposes. The Postmaster-General being absent, the Minister of Finance said he would bring the matter to his attention.

Mr. Fielding gave notice last night for Wednesday next of this resolution:

"Resolved that it is expedient to

DIVORCE CASE GETS AN AIRING

Grantham Case Discussed by the Commons

Ottawa, May 16.—The unusual spectacle of a divorce bill being discussed on the floor of Parliament was witnessed when the bill for the relief of Gertrude Mary Grantham came before the committee of the whole for consideration. This bill was favorably reported by the Senate, but the Commons' private bills committee hesitated on the ground that the evidence was entirely of a hearsay character.

The petitioner is a daughter of Sir William Mackenzie of Toronto, and Sir Alan Aylesworth said he was not astonished that the private bills committee should have hesitated before reporting the bill. The evidence was entirely hearsay and consisted of the testimony of the wife, the defendant's doctor and Sir William Mackenzie to the effect that Grantham had confessed to misconduct. The Minister of Justice pointed out that while there was no collusion between the wife and husband suggested it was possible that the defendant might have boasted of his affairs with other women in order to get the wife to sue for divorce.

Mr. Barker of Hamilton took an entirely different view, as did E. M. MacDonald of Pictou, who urged that the House should be very careful in setting aside the judgement of the Senate divorce committee, and the Senate itself, which had passed this bill. Mr. Lancaster supported Sir Alan Aylesworth on the ground that to grant divorce on such evidence would be a bad example to young married couples. He also regretted that divorce was getting to be such a favorite fashion.

Mr. Borden argued that the evidence in the case was such as was always accepted and the bill passed on yeas and nays.

VETO BILL PASSES COMMONS; IS NOW UP TO HOUSE OF LORDS

Peers to Have a Chance at the Measure — Commons Gives Bill a Big Majority.

London, May 16.—The fight in the House of Commons over the Parliament bill, also designated as the veto bill, for the curtailment of the powers of the House of Lords, ended last night. An amendment moving the rejection of the whole bill was defeated by a vote of 363 to 243, and a motion for the adoption of the bill on its third reading was carried 362 to 241.

It is expected that the bill will go to the House of Lords at an early date.

The debate in the House of Lords yesterday, on the second reading of the Lord Lansdowne bill for the reconstruction of the Upper Chamber, indicated that the leader's orders will fail to coerce many of the Unionist peers into voting for a measure involving their own political extinction.

Baron Willoughby de Broke declared that the House as at present constituted, was the best the country could get, and if he were going to perish he would prefer to receive his quietus at the hands of the electors rather than at the hand of their lordships.

Lord Morley of Blackburn, spokesman for the Government, insisted that the passage of the veto bill must precede any settlement or compromise with respect to the Upper Chamber. He threw out the significant suggestion that in any reconstruction of the Lords the number would be restricted to 100. This is regarded as foreshadowing the purpose of the Government when the reform of the House of Lords comes before it for consideration.

Dry air treatment is the one treatment that will cure these diseases. What stomach medicine has ever been known to cure Catarrh or Bronchitis?

Catarrhozone is not a stomach medicine, but an air medicine, that carries to the remotest parts of the throat, lungs, and air cells little drops of healing so curative that whenever it touches germ life it kills and eradicates them from the system.

Thousands of doctors and patients have been disappointed by using stomach medicines for coughs and colds. Have you not found it a rather roundabout way to reach the diseased portion of the throat and lungs?

Why not use Catarrhozone, which is breathed to the very root of the disease and heals so quickly and perfectly that every spot is rebuilt with new healthy tissue?

UNION LABEL

THE BANK CLERK

It is not difficult to feel a great deal of sympathy for the poor bank clerk, concerning whose trials Parliament was so exhaustively enlightened the other day. His business is the uninteresting one of handling other people's money, and he has to lunch every day in the same place whether he likes it or not. His salary is ridiculously inadequate to the lobster supper and five-dollar-shirt requirements of this luxurious age, says the Montreal Herald.

But as to whether the bank clerk is to be benefitted by being taken under the protecting wing of the legislature of this country we are greatly in doubt. After all, no Canadian is compelled to be a bank clerk. In fact, judging from the number of importations which the banks find it necessary to make from Scotland and Ireland, few Canadians are inclined to be bank clerks. Of course it is incumbent on our legislators to see that no bank clerk, be he Irish or Canadian or Hindustani, is poisoned by the food served at the bank's sandwich-counter or suffocated by long confinement in the air of the bank's counting-house. But these things are fairly well provided for by the existing legislation. As far as they are concerned, we are under the same obligation to garment-workers and shantymen to see that the conditions employment are not ruinous to health.

The bank clerk is not the only kind of individual who is hit by the increased cost of living without having the power to hit back. He is paying, along with many other estimable Canadians, who do not belong to labor unions, the penalty of ranking as a profession. About all that he gets in return is dignity, and independence, and if Parliament is going to make him a ward of the Dominion he will not have much of either. Anyhow his work is being more and more taken over by machines, and the bank clerk as he exists at present will probably disappear in the near future, giving place to two distinct classes, the executive officers who decide what shall be done with the money, and the mechanical operatives, who will do all the actual handling, counting and recording of it by inerrant and incorruptible machinery. And the latter will be unionised.

HOLIDAYS AND SICKNESS

The approach of June brings to the front the hardy perennial, "What about my holidays?" "Where shall I go and what shall I do?" have to be answered within the next month or two months for most people, for the average worker nowadays figures out that he is entitled to a rest of two weeks to recuperate his energies, and wind up his clock of energy for another year's run.

It is interesting to note that the Glasgow Herald says that holidays produce disease, and that many depart on their vacations strong and well, but come back with the fatal germ planted deeply into the system. It is all a question of lodgings, apartments and board and perhaps water. No one on a holiday thinks of inquiring about the previous history of an apartment, because that takes the edge off the keen enjoyment of the care-free romp. Of course there are some morbid people who are hunting everlastingly for germs, wherever they may be. There are some people who would refuse to enter heaven unless assured in advance that it had been thoroughly sprayed with formaldehyde, and disinfected according to latest fads and furbelows.

While it is true that the holiday season, bringing change to many people, does give the insidious germ a chance to insert his microbism into the bodies of some unfortunate people, yet the fact remains that most people get great benefit from a change, and it is a medical fact that while enjoying strange diet and living in strange environment, many people seem to be immune from disease who would only too readily catch it if under the same conditions in their eleven months and two weeks routine of life.

This Scotch newspaper considers it folly for any head of a family to engage rooms for his family for a two weeks' outing without having first-class assurance that everything is as it should be. That may be. A couple of years ago some young ladies went to a popular summer resort not more than a thousand miles from Peterborough, and one contracted typhoid fever, and others had a narrow escape from the water there.

But that is a long chance, and when one goes away, to throw off the ordinary cares that harass a man's existence, or a woman's, also, he or she does not want to have to take a medical handbook on Germs I have Known, and How to Side-step Them. The holiday time for the tired and worn-out business man, or the woman who is kept indoors by family cares, is a time of joy and relief, and the change reinvigorates the whole system. It is safe to say that if everybody stayed home for fear that a change might bring in its wake some modern affliction, infinitely more people would become sick for lack of the change.

THE CEMENT MERGER

The story of the cement merger is one that should make Canadians realise very keenly what is going on under their very noses in regard to these combinations of business. There can be no better example of the modern mergering methods than is provided by this cement concern, which has paid, according to charges laid by Sir Sandford Fleming, but partially denied by those charged $13,000,000 to an intermediary crowd for the flotation of the merger.

In the cement merger eleven properties were purchased for a trifle over $14,000,000. Probably liberal figures were paid for the properties. The merger was capitalised at $30,000,000 composed of cumulative preference shares, and preference shares and common stock, etc. It is admitted that in the case of the cement merger, the promoters got a good sized block of stock, and in this connection thirty year old Max Aitkin, a Canadian sitting in the British House of Commons, is said to have been the prime moving figure. The matter has come to the attention of the public through the application to Parliament of the company to change its seven per cent. preference shares into five per cent. debenture stock.

It is a fact apparent to any man that eleven properties generously valued at $14,000,000 do not represent a value of $30,000,000 in physical assets and from a financial standpoint, unless advantage is taken of the combination to squeeze the public to provide earning power for the extra $16,000,000. The intrinsic value is not there. It is the same old story of watered stock on which the public is supposed to pay the dividends or at least a fair margin of interest. These big combinations of business are represented as tending to eliminate waste and over-lapping and to reduce prices through the savings effected. But in this case, does it look as if the eleven concerns in the combination with a capitalisation of $30,000,000 would require less earnings to make a dividend showing than under the old system of competition, where the aggregate capital would be very much less than $14,000,000?

We, in Canada have been looking complacently on at the giant mergers and trusts of the United States—business combinations that control the prices and bleed the public—thinking that we have not been cursed with such evils. But the modern group of financiers in Montreal and Toronto are doing the same to our industries as has been done in the United States. Ten years ago there were 75,000 manufacturing concerns in Canada. To-day there are under 15,000. Where have the 60,000 gone? Eliminated. It is time that some action was taken to control this merger business.

RAISING $117,000

The success of the campaign of the Brantford Y.M.C.A. in raising $117,000 in a three days' campaign is eliciting much favorable comment from the newspapers. Brantford has certainly shown itself to be a live and generous spirited city by its action. A comparison naturally follows in the case of Peterborough. How near $117,000 could the local Y.M.C.A. raise in ten days?

Says the London Free Press in regard to the Brantford matter;—An association that within three days in the city of Brantford succeeded in gaining financial assistance to the extent of $177,000 must in the belief of the people be accomplishing a work that is worth while. The Young Men's Christian Association has received this splendid endorsation not alone in Brantford but in many cities in Canada and the United States. A few months ago the city of Toronto subscribed upwards of half a million dollars, a magnificent achievement that is even eclipsed in the Brantford campaign, the relative size of the two cities considered.

The Y.M.C.A. forms a link between the world and the church. This is the reason for its existence; it is the explanation of its success. It is a Christian association, but it is not an association bounded and hemmed in by creeds. The sphere of its work is practical as well as spiritual. That is to say, it believes in practical Christianity. Its scope is wide enough to embrace all the creeds.

The influence of the association upon the young men of Canaad will yield large interest for good. Brantford will get in return for her $117,000 a type of clean-lived, clear-headed, keen-witted, healthy Christian youths that will pay larger cash dividends than an investment in C.P.R. stock. The association has long passed the experimental stage. Its impress is upon the lives of hundreds of thousands of citizens who in their youth experienced its beneficent direction.

The Washington supreme court decision holding that Samuel Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison, were not guilty of contempt of court of a criminal nature, and dismissing all action against them, is a victory for labor unionism. But in Canada when a man is guilty of contempt of court, if it be a serious, deliberate attempt to thwart or disobey the order of the law, a man is sent to jail. There is much more respect for the law and its decrees in Canada, because it is administered with more wisdom, and backed up with full power when established.

Rev. Father Kidd In Charge.

Toronto, May 16.—By the unanimous vote of Bishop Dowling of Hamilton, and His Excellency Monsignor Stagni, Rev. Father John T. Kidd has been appointed administrator of the archdiocese of Toronto, until the appointment of a successor to the late Archbishop McEvay is made.

The rumor that Rt. Rev. Mgr. McCann had been appointed was emphatically denied by all concerned last night. Father Kidd is sole administrator.

Local Catholics are inclined to think that Bishop Fallon of London will be the new archbishop.

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson

Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE AINSLEE MAGAZINE COMPANY

"Not exactly, suh, foh he shot himself in his stateroom. However hard to bear, I think yoh should know who and what prompted his death. The scoundrel, suh, was the notorious Cameo Kirby, of whom, perhaps, yoh have heard."

Young Randall nodded dully, and Moreau, entering into the spirit of the tale, continued: "I fohmed an acquaintance, suh, with yoh poh father when he came aboard at New Orleans. He confided to every one that he had sold his sugar crop foh ten thousand and had the cash with him, and he was in mighty high spirits because he was on his way back home to see his children. Poh gentleman! As delicately as I can I must state that he was not quite himself, and by that, suh, I mean that he had been imbibing a little too freely. I don't have to tell yoh, suh, that there are certain characters on all the big boats who keep a pretty sharp lookout foh gentlemen with money who are in the condition yoh poh father, suh, was in tonight, and I expect there was more than one river gambler on board who would have liked to get his hands on Mr. Randall. But the one who got him was the slickest and cleverest of the lot, the Cameo Kirby whom I have mentioned. This rascal, suh, inveigled yoh poh father into a private stateroom, plied him with moh liquor and won from him not only all his money and personal effects—even including a miniature of yoh dead mother, suh—but also a deed to his entire plantation and all his slaves, everything which he owned. I was too late to save Mr. Randall, but I knew Kirby by repute, and I was so screamingly outraged by the whole affair that I denounced him foh the low scoundrel he was. Thereupon he drew on me, but I was the quicker and shot him down like a dog. They carried him ashore, suh, at the landing below this, and the river is cleaner foh his death."

"You have taken vengeance out of my hands," said young Randall unsteadily. "The coward and villain! For a stranger, sir, the attitude which you have displayed toward my family has been most considerate, and I will never forget it. The—the hospitality of a house in mourning"—

"No, no, my boy," interrupted Moreau, again employing his fatherly hand. "I am sensible of the honor, but I couldn't think of it. This is a time when yoh all must wish to be alone, and business calls me north. I merely stepped ashore in yoh interests as any gentleman would have done. There goes the bell, and I must run for it. Honored, suh, to have made yoh acquaintance, though of co'se I deeply deplore the necessity which occasioned it. I will venture to pay my respects to yoh family when I return south, and pray command me in any occasion yoh may have. Yoh servant, suh." And with a magnificent bow the colonel turned and raced for the gangplank, boarding the Shotwell with a leap that shamed his fifty odd years.

Meanwhile Cameo Kirby, a bullet through his right lung, was making a desperate battle against death, fighting for the life which he had considered little better than worthless. In his efforts he was materially assisted by the crude but faithful Bunce, his gambling partner, with whom he had played up and down the Mississippi for years. For two weeks this combat raged, Kirby hovering between life and death, but at the end he emerged triumphant as, over the gaming table when the odds were as heavily against him, he had emerged from many a hotly contested conflict.

To those who judged Kirby's character from the evil reports which gossip had spread concerning him and to others who, in their righteous ignorance, considered all gamblers legitimate children of the devil his remarkable recovery would have been accepted merely as another proof that the evil one favors his own, that the mills of the gods grind slowly, that justice is blind and that a scoundrel is difficult to kill, together with many similar ancient and redoubtable maxims which ignorance and self righteousness love to distribute on every fitting occasion.

Among possessors of the last mentioned attribute Eugene Kirby was regarded as a black sheep who, religiously avoiding the whitewash brush, was deemed beyond redemption, for what man worthy of the name would have acted as had the last of the Kirbys? What if he had been but fifteen when his father died a bankrupt? What if he had been left an orphan, a pauper, with no immediate relative to care how he acted? Wasn't the heritage of an ancient and honorable name, the knowledge that some of the oldest and best blood in all the south flowed in his veins, enough to keep him straight? Most assuredly it was. There was absolutely no excuse for his drifting in with wild and dissolute companions, becoming a common river gambler and rendering notorious and obnoxious a name which had hitherto been the synonym for honor and integrity.

Kirby had been kept in ignorance of Mr. Randall's suicide, but when at length he became convalescent Larkin Bunce, harking back to the events of that memorable night, informed him, and the invalid, on his part, recounted the occurrences preceding Colonel Moreau's precipitation of the "honorable" combat.

"The news of Mr. Randall's death is a great shock," he added, greatly moved. "He was my father's friend, Bunce, and when the devil played havoc with our affairs did all in his power to be of assistance. But for my great pride I would have accepted his offer of guardian and, under his supervision, I hope, would have been a credit to the name instead of the disgrace I am."

"Now, you quit these here postmortems," remonstrated Bunce good naturedly, but firmly. "You don't call me a disgrace, do you? And ain't I your old side partner? Bosh, if you play the game straight I guess there's lots of worse ways of making a living than gambling. The sawbones said a lot of rest was coming your way, so just turn over on the other side and forget it."

"No, I can't, Bunce. Don't you realize the position in which I am placed by Mr. Randall's death? I hold a deed to his entire plantation, and I must sign a release without delay. What if it should ever be thought that I entered the game in earnest, with the deliberate intention of robbing Mr. Randall? You know my reputation," he added bitterly, "and how easy it is for a dog to earn a bad name. Bring me pen and ink at once, Larkin, if you please, for I won't have a moment's peace until I sign that paper."

Propped up on the pillows and supported by the still grumbling Bunce, he wrote the following:

I hereby surrender the absolute possession of all the property herein described to the child or children of John Randall.
EUGENE KIRBY.

"There!" he exclaimed. "Now I feel better, and there is no chance of my old neighbor's children being defrauded out of their inheritance."

"You worry a heap more about them than yourself," observed Bunce, "and there's no call for it. Even if they knew you had got this deed you're reckoned as a dead man by everybody. I heard from one of the boys that Moreau had skipped to Mexico, but you know how the river calls, and he'll answer sooner or later. When the fine old bucko does return don't be fool enough to give him another chance at your back, for he's a painfully modest cuss and prefers to stay in the rear. By rights he ought to get the same dose he gave you, and I'd do it for the asking."

"You know you wouldn't," said Kirby simply. "The moment I learn that Moreau has returned you may arrange a meeting for us. You can leave the rest to me."

Bunce nodded. "I guess there ain't any one who could get the better of you, Gene, face to face. I ain't much of a hand at the gospel, but I'll scare up a prayer or two for Jack Moreau's soul."

Tercentenary of Baronetcy.

Among the celebrations to be held this year is the tercentenary of the institution of baronetcy. This is a rank which the country owes to the first Stuart sovereign of Great Britain, but it is denied that it was created in order to provide the British Solomon with money.

The celebration is a function in which the public generally will feel very little interest, but on the other hand those most interested are preparing to celebrate the occasion with befitting solemnity, for the baronets are very proud of their order and have recently taken steps to clear its ranks of unlawful intruders. There are over 1,200 baronets altogether, but even if they decided to have a grand procession of the order to call public attention to their existence the public, in the light of recent events, it is to be feared, would be found more inclined to scoff than to admire.

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

This Woman Had to Insist Strongly, but it Paid

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me.

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANETZKI, 2963 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

CENSUS ENUMERATORS

amend the Customs Tariff act of 1907 to provide as follows:

(1) "The Governor-in-Council may by order-in-council extend to Japan for a period not exceeding two years from July 17, 1191, the benefit of the tariff advantages at present enjoyed by that country on its exports to Canada as expressed by and contained in article V. of the treaty of commerce and navigation between Great Britain and Japan, signed July 16, 1894, which treaty was made applicable to Canada by the convention between the United Kingdom and Japan respecting commercial relation between Canada and Japan signed at Tokio on Jan. 31, 1906; provided, however, that such advantages shall only be extended to Japan when and so long as the Governor-in-Council is satisfied that Canada will receive and is receiving during such period the reciprocal tariff advantages enjoyed by Canada at present on its exports to Japan under the provisions of the said article and the said convention.

W. O. Seeley (Wentworth) made a plea for a branch experimental farm station and better facilities for the handling of fruit.

Hon. Mr. Fisher said that there was a sum in the supplementaries for the construction of a free cold storage cooling plant for fruit in the Niagara district.

G. H. Barnard said this was a somewhat labored attempt of the Minister of Agriculture to pull Mr. Seeley out of the hole he had got into over the reciprocity agreement.

Young Lady a Heroine.

Toronto, May 16.—The courageous conduct of a young woman, Miss Dora McGillivray, 124 Yorkville avenue, was brought to the attention of Inspector Charlton yesterday morning by a Hamilton woman, who had offered Miss McGillivray a reward for her courage and had been refused.

The woman was Mrs. Thomas Durant, who on April 30, was crossing Queen street with her baby carriage, when a street car was upon her before she realized it. Miss McGillivray bravely rushed from the sidewalk and picked the infant from the carriage, just before the carriage was crushed by the car.

Rosselli Committed For Trial.

Toronto, May 16.—Frank Rosselli, charged with the murder of Giacchina Ceoe, another Italian, in a row at 40 Agnes street, Good Friday night, was committed for trial from the Police Court yesterday morning upon consent of counsel. The other Italians held in the same matter upon charges of wounding and vagrancy, were also committed for trial.

It is likely that the grand jury of the assizes will at once commence the sifting of the tangled evidence. The charges against the men may be altered.

Bookseller Will Appeal.

Toronto, May 16.—Albert Britnell, the Yonge street bookseller, yesterday secured leave from Magistrate Kingsford to appeal against his decision in the case where he fined Mr. Britnell for the sale of obscene books. The grounds for the appeal are that the books do not properly come under the statute, and that there was no evidence that the defendant had knowledge of the sale as required by the statute.

Want Garbage Collection System.

Brockville, May 16.—At a special meeting the Board of Health recommended that the Town Council complete and put into force without delay a bylaw for the collection and removal of garbage.

When Judge Sutherland came to Brockville yesterday afternoon to open the non-jury spring assizes for these united counties he found a blank docket. His lordship [illegible] to Toronto.

GOSSIP WAS CAUSE OF IT

Foundationless Charge Laid Against Undertaker

Peculiar Case is Aired in Court—An Honorable Acquittal

A case of very unusual interest was aired at police court this morning before his Worship Magistrate Dumble, when John Comstock, of the firm of Comstock Bros., undertakers, was charged with unlawfully interfering with the dead body of Arthur Greenwood, son of Thomas Greenwood, 104 Lansdowne avenue, who died on May 8th, and was interred in Little Lake cemetery on the 10th. The defendant was completely and honorably exonerated from any criminal action in connection with the affair, and the case dismissed. Mr. R. E. Wood, Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution, and F. D. Kerr, was counsel for the defendant. Briefly stated the facts of the case are as follows;

Arthur Greenwood died on the day mentioned and was buried two days later in Little Lake cemetery by John Comstock. Death, it is alleged, was caused by appendicitis after an operation. The medical men who attended him had inserted two tubes in the stomach previous to death, in the endeavor to relieve him. At his death the tubes remained in the body and he was buried with them still in his body. After the funeral was over and the people had departed, except the cemetery employees and a young man named Fred Batterson, who remained to take a photo of the grave, the defendant removed the lid from the grave and went down into the grave to look fo r the tubes, acting under the instructions of the doctors. He secured one which was about an inch in diameter, but could not discover the other. The earth was then filled in and the grave put in proper shape.

Fred Batterson was called. He had known Arthur Greenwood well and was present at the funeral. He remained at the graveside after the others had dispersed to secure a photograph of it.

"It was not filled in immediately only the lid being left on the grave with the flowers placed on it." He had asked how long it would be before it was filled in and was told in about half an hour. He saw Mr. Comstock go down into the grave, "to remove some tubes," as he remarked to witness. When Mr. Comstock had secured what he was after, he came up out of the grave, the clothing was replaced on the part of the body that had been exposed during the operation, the lid of the grave replaced, the earth filled in and the flowers put on again. Two of the cemetery employees were waiting by the side of the excavation in readiness to throw in the earth when Mr. Comstock had completed his work.

Mrs Susannah Price was the next witness. She told in court how the defendant had rolled up his sleeves and gone down into the grave. The defendant, however, had told her he was looking for tubes.

Mr. Frank Wise, the superintendent of the cemetery also gave evidence. Mr. Wood told him that there was a great deal of indignity felt over this cemetery business among the public. Mr. Wise said that the defendant had mentioned to him that the doctors wanted to obtain possession of the instruments that had been left in the boy's body. The witness had consented to allow him to do it on the understanding, however, that the parents of the dead boy were apprised of the wish. Through some delay, however, this consent was not obtained, and witness was aware of it at the time the recovery of the instruments was made.

Magistrate Dumble summed up the case at some length and very clearly.

"I cannot see," he said, "where there has been any indictable offence committed in regard to the affair at all. By inadvertence some valuable instruments had been placed in the body and left there by the doctors. The only opportunity of getting them was at the grave. The tubes were useful and would be of more use to the doctor than they would be by being left in the body. Yet this was thought by some to be an indignity, but it was quite plain that there was no attempt to do injury to the body and nothing improper or indecent was committed upon it. Neither had there been any intention to do harm. Unfortunately there had been some people there who had not known enough to hold their tongues and which caused all the trouble. If they had let well enough alone the parents would have been spared all the worry and trouble." He was very sorry that the thing had got the publicity that it had, and could find nothing no which to convict the undertaker, who had acted rightly.

LAID TO REST

A large number of citizens turned out this afternoon to pay their last respects to the remains of the late Robert Sheridan.

The funeral cortege left the house at 2.45 o'clock and proceeded to Little Lake cemetery where the remains were laid in their last resting place.

Among the exceptionally large number of beautiful floral designs were those from the C.O.F., Trent Valley Canal office staff, fellow employees on the Lift Lock, Trustee Board of the Mark street church, Ladies Aid, choir and League of Mark street church.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. R. Hamilton, John Kerr, H. Gillespie, H. C. Smith, J. Craig and Ald. H. Morgan.

Rev. H. C. Coon officiated at the house and at the grave.

It's Different Since

¶ It may be that you have visited the Semi-ready store in the past, and that you went away with the idea that we could not fit you—either physically, fancily or financially.

¶ Now it's all changed!

¶ It's a different Semi-ready Tailoring to what you knew before.

¶ Every year we've made progress, but in the last few years we have been a conquering force of irresistible power in the tailoring of good clothes.

¶ Years ago we started out to make clothes "just as good" as retail tailoring. To-day we can proudly prove that Semi-ready garments are tailored "better than the tailor's best."

¶ If you are one of the men who came, who saw, and went away, it's worth money to you to come again now.

¶ The man we want to see is the man who can say "I have always had my clothes made to order by a tailor."

¶ If you cannot surmount that idea at one jump then I can make you to order a special order Semi-ready garment from any one of 350 samples which I can show you.

VISIT OF WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

Large Audiences are Hearing the Great Orator

There promises to be one of the largest audiences in the history of the local Grand Opera House on Thursday evening of this week, when Mr. William Jennings Bryan, the greatest American orator of the present day, will deliver his lecture "The Prince of Peace."

Colonel Bryan has been making a tour of the cities of Ontario, and has been speaking to crowded houses in almost every city. He has been addressing luncheons at which there have been gathered large numbers of representative business men.

It is not often that the people of Peterborough have an opportunity to hear such a distinguished man as Mr. Bryan. He is distinguished not merely as an aspirant to Presidential honors, but as a great orator, a leading journalist, and a farmer of no mean worth.

Mr. Bryan's lecture, "The Prince of Peace," is one of his very best efforts. In it he takes his place as a man who has a simple faith in the fundamentals of religion. In his lecture in the city of St. Thomas he said, "While to me the science of Government is intensely absorbing, I recognize that the most important things in life lie outside of the realm of government." And from this he went on for an hour and a half to instruct his audience in the things that make for sound faith and safe thinking.

In Brantford Mr. Bryan spoke to four hundred men at the luncheon. In St. Thomas the house was packed to the doors. He will be in Toronto to-day and will speak in Massey Hall to-night. The cost to hear him in most places is 50 to 100 per cent. in excess of that charged in Peterborough.

Hamilton bosses refuse to concede the demands of the striking carpenters.

THE MISS HALLIHAN RECITAL

The warm and loyal reception given Miss Lavina Hallihan last evening, at her vocal recital in the conservatory of Music Hall, assisted by Miss Julia G. Choate, violiniste; Mr. Frank Bemrose, tenor of Toronto; and Mr. J. Dennis Hayes, baritone, of Toronto, must have been extremely gratifying and indicative of the high regard which Miss Hallihan occupies in the hearts of the people of her home city. The audience was very large and representative and the spontaneous applause which greeted every number of the high class program, left no room for doubt, but what the concert was greatly appreciated and enjoyed.

Miss Hallihan was the popular performer of the evening, and her delicate and expressive voice was given every opportunity last evening and won approval and praise from the commencement. Since her last appearance before local audiences, the flexibility and range of her vocalism has broadened wonderfully and her vocal control is remarkable. Especially in her descriptive numbers was this ability and skill demonstrated. She was encored at every appearance and was presented with two beautiful bouquets.

Mr. Frank Bemrose, the talented tenor of Toronto, also afforded the audience great pleasure by his masterly and skilful singing, and came in for much favorable criticism. His voice is strong, clear and resonant, and under perfect control. He sang with expression and power and was forced to respond to encores.

Miss Julia Choate's conspicuous ability and talents as a violiniste have long been recognized, and it is sufficient to state that she was at her best last evening. Miss Choate delighted all by her work and her selections while very difficult and complicated, were given with rare feeling and delicate interpretation. Beautiful floral bouquets were also presenced to her.

J. Dennie Hayes, baritone, is a stranger to Peterboro, but his splendid and well trained voice as revealed last night made him an instant favorite and assured for him a hearty welcome on any future appearance before local audiences.

The program consisted of mostly classical numbers and ballads, and was evidently of pleasure to all. Much of the success of the entire concert is attributable to the able and skillful accompaniments as played by Mr. R. J. Devey, whose piano selection, at the opening of the program was given with much technical skill and feeling.

MARKS' BROS. HAVE GOOD SHOW

The Joe and Ernie Marks Co. in the initial performance at the Grand Opera House last night, scored a big hit. The large company gave an excellent performance of the rural comedy, "For His Sister's Sake," and Ernie Marks as the big fun producer, was given a good reception. Marks Bros.' reputation for an up-to-the-minute show at popular prices was well sustained in the offering last night. The specialty artists were particularly good, and the company is well worthy of a large house. To-night "Brother Against Brother" will be the offering.

PICTURE FOR THE FIRST HOME RUN

Gerald McFadden Has a Classy Prize for Local Biffers

A large weathered oak frame baseball picture has been offered by Mr. Gerald McFadden, of McFadden's furniture establishment for the first home run at Riverside Park by a player of the Peterborough Midland League team. The picture, which is 36x12 inches, shows two teams in action, and a player sliding into the counting station. A miniature bat, ball, glove and mask is mounted on the frame, and the prize is a particularly appropriate one, and the kindness of "Doc" will be appreciated by the officers and players of the club.

SIGNALS USED BY BALL PLAYERS

Many Different Signs Used for Benefit of Batter or Runner

During a recent fanfest in Brooklyn one ball player figured there must be at least 500 different signs used in the major leagues. Since there is such a quantity it is the hardest thing in the game to distinguish them.

Every natural move may be a hit and run sign when an experienced player is at bat. For instance, for seven years Hughie Jennings had a hit and run sign that was never solved and as far as known not used by any other player during the seven seasons.

Jennings always brought his bat over his shoulder if he intended to give the sign and raised the two thumbs as he brought up the bat. Few players on his club, outside of the men with whom Jennings worked the signal, knew of its existence.

Steve Brodie of the Baltimore team had an odd one. Steve would pull his shirt. It did not have a long life. Bush and Cobb had one of the best in the game. Cobb nearly always indulges in chewing gum in the game. When the Georgian was working the gum it meant that he would hit the next ball.

"Wee Willie" Keeler used to brush his hand across his shirt front. Hal Chase, thought it was a good one and also employed that signal, although several clubs were "wise to it."

A good way to keep the hit and run signs secret is to use them with nobody on. A player like Cobb who is always in motion at bat, has the easiest time in getting away with a hit and run sign. Cobb makes about thirty different moves, any of which might be a signal to a man on base.

Here are a few others that have been used in the major.

Bringing up the knees.

Spreading the hands on the bat.

Touching the cap with the fingers. Two fingers might be a signal, but the player would touch his cap at other times with one, three or four fingers to protect his signal.

Lifting right or left foot.

Hitting the plate with the bat a number of times.

Jerk the shoulder.

Turn one foot.

Throw the head back.

A good hitter will generally look at the man on first before the pitcher winds up. This is probably the best of all the hit and run signals employ- It is one that defies detection. Nearly every club can show a few players who employ it.

WORKING WITH GOLD.

Factories in Which Dark Colored Clothes Must Be Worn.

Light suits of clothes are not favored in factories where work is done on gold. In fact, in many such factories a dark suit of clothes is absolutely required, and even a light waistcoat may lose a man a job. The reason for this is that any stray grains of gold that may get on the clothing can easily be caught on a dark suit, while they might get away from the establishment if light clothes were worn.

That such a rule was enforced among gold workers one man learned recently when a Bohemian gold beater applied to him for a helping hand. The Bohemian said that he had only recently come to this country, that he had had a chance to obtain a good job at his trade, but that the place had been refused him because he turned up with a light coat and waistcoat on, and they were the only clothes he had.

The man whom he approached was struck by the story and offered to help him out if it proved true. He went to a downtown factory with him and found out that the man could have the job if he presented himself within an hour with the proper clothes on. Two dollars enabled the man to rig himself out in the dark coat and waistcoat to go with his dark trousers, and, sure enough, he got the job.

"You may think this strange," said the man at the factory, "but it means quite a little to us. Every man's clothing is carefully examined when he leaves here at night and the gold brushed off whenever we see any on his clothing.

"It is impossible to hide even tiny grains on a dark background, but take a mixed or a light suit and we might easily lose quite an amount of gold, and gold isn't anything you want to lose even in small quantities."—New York Sun.

REFUSED TO OBEY.

Major Butler Carried His Obstinacy Right Into His Coffin.

Many amusing stories are told of the great formality blended with a humorous brusqueness and independence which characterized early Revolutionary days. An incident of camp life is related by the author of "Romance and Realism of the Southern Gulf Coast."

In 1798 the first United States troops that came down the Mississippi were quartered at Fort Adams. General Wilkinson, Colonel Hamtramck, Major Butler, Captain Green and other officers were merry over their punch one night, and the general by some accident got his cue burned off. Angry at the laugh which followed his mishap, he next day issued an order forbidding any officer to appear with a cue. Obedient to orders, all the officers but Major Butler cut off their cues.

"The vain old prig!" said the major. "I'll see him hanged before I cut off my cue to gratify him!" And he boldly appeared without changing the style of his hairdressing.

The major was put under arrest, but he declared obstinately that he would spend the rest of his life in prison before he would comply with such a silly command. Soon afterward he was taken very ill, and, realizing that he was at the point of death, he gave instructions for his burial, which he knew would be witnessed by the whole command.

"Bore a hole," said he, "through the bottom of my coffin, right under my head, and let my cue come through it, that the old general may see that even when dead I refuse to obey his order."

And these directions were literally carried out.

Where Waltzing Is Barred.

German court regulations forbid waltzing. This veto dates back to 1859, when the Empress Frederick, then crown princess, was tripped up by her partner in a waltz and fell at the feet of her mother-in-law. The Empress Augusta, a despot on the score of etiquette, forbade the inclusion of waltzes thenceforth in all balls at the New palace. So far the kaiser has resisted the pressure brought to bear on him to revive the waltz. Dancing at the Berlin court always opens with a polonaise, and the rest of the program is filled with quadrilles and polkas, the schottishes and the mazurkas.

Truth a Trouble Maker.

A West Philadelphia man and his wife have separated. None of their friends know why, but one, being curious, asked the husband:

"What was the trouble between you and your wife?"

"Oh, nothing much. She bought a new hat for $20 and asked me what I thought of it, and I told her; that's all."—Philadelphia Times.

Enterprise.

"What would you do if I should shoot myself?" demanded the ardent suitor.

"I'd sign up in vaudeville immediately," replied the actress. "I wouldn't have time to get a play written. These shooting sensations soon fizzle out."—Kansas City Journal.

In Later Life.

"I see you are doing a good many things now that once you would have been shocked at."

"Well, I make up for it by being shocked at a good many things that I once did."—Pittsburg Post.

Two Sides to It.

"So she refused you."

"Yes. It certainly puzzles me."

"Oh, well, if she had accepted you the whole world would have been puzzled."—Houston Post.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 15.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 13 were 3080 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 2275 hogs and 1910 calves. The offerings on the market this morning amounted to 1100 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 425 calves.

Altho the run of cattle was somewhat larger than a week ago, there was no further depression in the condition of the market, as the fact was more than offset by the improved quality of the stock and the increased demand for beef for local consumption, and in consequence a stronger feeling developed. Prices showed an advance of 10c per cwt., which, according to drovers and dealers let them out with a small profit on their day's trading. The market was more active than it has been of late, owing to the fact that butchers generally were pretty well cleaned out of stock and operated more freely.

Choice steers sold at $6.35; good, at $5.85 to $6.10; fairly good, at $5.35 to $5.60; fair, at $4.85 to $5.10, and common, at $4.25 to $4.50 per cwt.

A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for hogs this morning on account of increased supplies. The advance in prices noted at the end of last week was all lost, but at the reduction the demand was good from packers and an active trade was done, sales of selected lots being made at $6.70 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

The trade in small meats was quiet, but the tone of the market was steady and prices show no important change. Old sheep sold at $4 to $5 each; spring lambs, at $4 to $7 each, and calves, at from $2 to $5 each, as to size and quality.

Earl Nelson, who has done so much to promote home re-union among English Protestants has seen his wife and three sons pass over to Rome, says Scannell O'Neill. His heir, the Viscount Merton, is a devout Catholic. Earl Nelson himself seems to draw nearer the Church as he grows older, as is noticeable in his article in a recent number of The Re-Union Magazine, in which he takes occasion to set his Protestant hearers right on the attitude of the Catholic Church toward the reading of the Bible.

The Rev. Kenelm Dale Roberts, who is the son of Canon Dale Roberts of St. Paul's Anglican church in Lozells Handsworth, Birmingham, England, has been ordained priest in the Basilica of St. John Lateran at Rome. His father and mother both journeyed to Rome in order to be present at the ordination.

Alice Mary, wife of Major General E. A. H. Alderson, C.B. Commanding the 6th Poona Division, India, was received into the Catholic Church by His Lorship the Bishop of Poona in the Chapel of the Convent of Jesus and Mary, Poona. She was confirmed by His Grace the Archbishop of Bombay on March 21st.

FRANTIC WITH NEURALGIA

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" WILL ALWAYS CURE THIS TROUBLE

Neuralgia is really blood poisoning. To treat it with opium, morphine, cocaine, "headache powders" and other "pain-killers" is a crime.

The only possible way to cure Neuralgia is to purify the blood by making the Kidneys, Bowels and Skin do their proper work in nature's own way.

This is the way "Fruit-a-tives" cures Neuralgia. "Fruit-a-tives" prevents the formation of Uric Acid—keeps the whole system strong and active—and will always cure Neuralgia, Rheumatism and Headaches due to poisoned blood.

ROUGE AND FACE PAINTS BARRED

Have no Part in First Court by Order of Queen Mary

A despatch from London says—The restraining hand of Queen Mary was felt again in last night's court, the first of King George's reign. The lord chamberlain, acting for the austere sovereign, had notified the great dressmakers of London that they were to reform their customers. It was the Queen's wish that hobble dresses and clinging skirts should not be worn at state functions. It dismayed society, yet was accepted as the last word. Yesterday the quiet "suggestion" by the Queen was swiftly sent abroad that lip salve and rouge should be dispensed with by women who were to attend last night's and to-night's courts. With the suggestion went a royal concession permitting the use of face powder in moderate quantities.

Last night facial pigments were noticeably absent and even rice powder was seen to have been "puffed" on with gentle hands. Still another suggestion has been promulgated, and this, in the opinion of many, outcaps the restrictive climax. It is that the royal ban be accepted as lying against women wearing elbow length sleeves and uncolored afternoon dresses in the royal enclosure at Ascot and that large hats are forbidden in all sacred precincts.

ADDRESSES AND TEA AT PARK ST.

Anniversary Rejoicings Continued—An Enjoyable Program

The annual congregational supper in connection with the anniversary of the Park street Baptist church was given last night in the banquet hall of the church.

After a delightful dinner a splendid platform program was given in the church at which messages were heard from Rev. Wm. Gregory, Lakefield; Mr. Oiiles, representing Knox church; Rev. J. R. Webb, Murray street Baptist, and Hon. J. R. Stratton.

REV. MR. RIDDIFORD.

The pastor, as chairman, referred to the back history of the Park street church, and of the rapid development. He was sorry that Rev. Dr. Sowerby was unable to be present. He called upon Mr. Steer, an old choir leader of the Park street Baptist church, for a selection, and he rendered "O Canada."

REV. WM. GREGORY.

Rev. Wm. Gregory, of the Lakefield Baptist church, spoke of the pleasant relationship of the Lakefield church and the local churches. Continuing his remarks, he referred to the minister who had spoken at the church on Sunday, Rev. Dr. A. T. Sowerby, Ph.D., of Toronto, whom he considered it a great treat to hear.

Mr. Oiiles spoke on behalf of Knox church in the absence of Rev. H. Q. Keith.

HON. J. R. STRATTON.

Mr. Stratton said he was glad to be present to congratulate the congregation and pastor upon the successes achieved. He was also pleased to see the Baptists of Peterborough, along with the sister churches, adapt themselves to greater Peterborough.

There had been a great change in Peterborough the past few years. Formerly there were twenty hotels and fourteen churches. Now the numbers were reversed.

The church was necessary and essential but were it not for the ladies of the congregation there would not have been so many successes.

"You have the three elements necessary for growth, the speaker concluded. First, the divine element; second, the element in the working and energy of the pastor; and, third, the element in the members of the Church Board, who are giving up their time for the welfare of the church.

Mrs. L. J. Pettit, the well-known elocutionist, who has been heard on several occasions by Peterborough people, rendered one of her selections and was called upon for an encore.

REV. J. R. WEBB.

Rev. J. R. Webb brought his message from the mother church, Murray street Baptist church.

In reply to Hon. Mr. Stratton's remarks about the ladies, he stated that there never was a time when the men were more interested in the work of the church than at the present time. There was no task so noble as that of seeking to spread the gospel.

PASTORAL LETTER SENT OUT BY THE HOUSE OF BISHOPS

Mixed Marriages Valid If Performed by Authorized Clergymen

To be Read in All Anglican Churches Next Sunday

Following the controversies on the question of mixed marriages, the House of Bishops of the Anglican Church in Canada has expressed itself and copies of the pastoral have been sent to the Anglican clergy throughout Canada, who will read them to their congregations next Sunday.

The pastoral letter is as follows—

"We, the Archbishops and Bishops of that branch of the Catholic Church, known as the Church of England in Canada, to the faithful in Christ Jesus: Greeting.

"Whereas, the minds of many have been greatly disturbed by a decision in the courts of the Province of Quebec annulling a marriage between two members of the Roman Church, solemnized by one authorized by the State to officiate at marriages and by enforcement of the decree known as the 'ne temere' decree by the Bishop of Rome, and GRAVE CIVIL INJUSTICE.

"Whereas we believe the said decision to be contrary to the Christian ideal of marriage, to involve grave civil injustice and to be in its consequence destructive to the home life of the people;

"We deem it our duty to address you upon this subject.

"We desire to remind you that the Anglican Church in Canada has ever taken the strictest view regarding the sanctity of marriage. It is a holy ordinance, instituted by God, and is the foundation of our social and familiar life. The Church and State must unite to guard the marriage bond, and to preserve its indissolubility. To this end our General Synod has decreed that no clergyman of our church shall officiate at the marriage of any divorced person during the lifetime of the former partner in the marriage.

SOLEMNITY OF MARRIAGE.

"It is most desirable that those who enter the holy estate of matrimony should realize its solemnity, and have due regard to its blessings and mutual responsibilities. We greatly deplore the lowering of the ideals and purposes of marriage which is so common in many quarters. It is of the greatest moment that those who enter into this estate should be married by a clergyman of the Church before proper witnesses, and, whenever possible, in the church building, and that they should be in agreement concerning their religious convictions. Mixed marriages are ever to be deprecated, as they deprive husband and wife of that mutual help which the one should be to the other in life, and make the religious training of the children in the homes most difficult.

"Nevertheless, we emphatically assert the validity of such marriages when duly solemnized, and we maintain that once consummated they are indissoluble.

"No marriage should be annulled because of the divergent religious convictions of the parties; nor because of the ecclesiastical connection of the one solemnizing the marriage.

CHURCH AND STATE MUST UNITE

"The Church and State, though separated by law, must unite in protecting those who have been married by a duly competent officer, authorized by the State for the solemnization of marriages, and in upholding their civil status and rights. Nor should the State permit marriage to be annulled for an ecclesiastical offence, or because it is contrary to the Canon law of the Church of Rome, or contrary to the laws, rules, and regulations of any religious organization whatsoever.

"At the same time, we fully admit the right of any ecclesiastical or religious body to make and enforce such spiritual penalties as may be in accordance with its own rules; but without impeaching or interfering with the civil status of the parties concerned.

"We do not desire to express any opinion upon the civil law. We leave that to our final court of justice. But we would remind you that decisions of various judges have differed upon this question in the Province of Quebec. It is in the interest of all our citizens to have the law clearly defined.

"Whatever may be the proper interpretation of the existing law, it is of the greatest importance that there should be one uniform marriage law for the whole Dominion.

FORMER PASTOR WILL BE HERE

For Epworth League Convention at George St. Church

On Wednesday night next at the Epworth League convention at the George street Methodist church addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. S. P. Rose and others. The older people will remember the young minister who was assistant pastor in Peterborough with the Rev. Charles Fish in the year 1872-3. Since then Dr. Rose has held the pastorates of leading Methodist churches, including Montreal, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Toronto. He is the son of the Rev. Dr. Rose, an eminent Methodist minister of an earlier day, and a brother of the late Judge Rose, of the High Court of Justice.

Dr. Rose's high standing and marked ability will no doubt ensure a crowded house.

PURSE OF GOLD FOR J. H. RENWICK

Port Hope Friends Made Presentation—New Organist at George St. Church

Port Hope Guide.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Renwick, who have been staying the past few days with Mr. and Mrs. R. Grandy, were pleasantly surprised on Saturday evening. A number of their friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grandy and presented Mr. Renwick with a well-filled purse and the following address:

Respected Sir.—On behalf of your many friends in Port Hope, whose personal regards, sympathy and respect you have merited by the very satisfactory discharge of all the duties devolving upon you, not only as organist and choirmaster of the Methodist church, and the efficient leader of our Citizens' band, but in the exercise of the best of moral qualities so characteristic of you as a man, that have stamped you as a good citizen of our town for a period of nearly twelve years, that we thus present to you this address.

Now, sir, we may say that since your advent among us as time has rolled on you have left a marked impression on the minds of all for good. By your gentlemanly deportment, calm demeanor and uprightness you have been a pattern for the youth, the worthy associate of those of your own years and have lent inspiration to men of maturity.

And as this is the eve of your departure, many are our regrets that you are leaving us, and fervent are our prayers for your success in life.

In order to more fully manifest our appreciation, we ask you to be good enough to accept this small token of our favor as a memento of our esteem for your worth as a man of honor.

We therefore bid you, Mrs. Renwick and Jock, an affectionate farewell, and may your mantle fall on your successor here.

Mrs. Renwick was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses.

A very enjoyable time was spent in music and games and a dainty lunch served at the close.

Mr. and Mrs. Renwick leave tomorrow for Peterborough.

ROCHESTER RUSTLERS INSURED FOR $30,000

Rochester, May 15—Harry Pattee ex-ballplayer, scored when he visited Rochester yesterday in search of insurance business. Pattee had quite a talk with Manager Ganzel a few days ago in Providence and will draw down a neat commission on $70,000 worth of insurance written for the Rochester baseball team. The policies cover accidents off the field. Ganzel, it is understood, is insured for $20,000 and the rest of the team for $50,000. Pattee intended to report to Buffalo in June, but says he is building up such a business in Providence that it isn't likely that he will return to the diamond.

WESTERN FARMER AND HIS PROFITS

A Typical Instance of the Receipts and Expenditures on 640 Acres in Ten Years

A farmer writing to a Toronto daily paper from Indian Head, Saskatchewan, under the nom de plume, Saskatchewan Farmer, refutes the statement made by many Westerners, that the farmers of the West have been ill-used by the Dominion Government, which is identified largely with Eastern interests. This Saskatchewan Farmer gives a typical instance of the expenditure and revenue connected with a section of land, 640 acres, from the year 1900 to 1910. He says:

"I will give you an idea of what a section of land, 640 acres, will earn, and how it will increase in value, in the most favored wheat producing districts of Saskatchewan under normal conditions, management and price of land, from 1900 to 1910, allowing the average price of land to be $10 per acre for that period. In so doing it should be borne in mind that 30 per cent. of the land in this Province was Free Grant.

Capital Expenditure.

1900.
Land, 640 acres at $10 per acre		$6,400.00
Cultivation, 440 acres at $6 per acre		2,640.00
Dwelling house		2,000.00
Stable for 12 horses, granary and implement shed		1,500.00
1901
12 horses and harness		3,000.00
Implements.	Duty.
3 seed drills	$33.00	330.00
3 plows	30.50	210.00
2 disc harrows	10.00	80.00
2 six-section harrows	6.50	60.00
3 7-ft. binders	53.00	465.00
4 wagons complete	72.00	360.00
One-sixth interest in thresher	125.00	500.00
Extras, say	20.00	455.00
	$350.00	$18,000.00
Crop for 10 years, from 400 acres at 25 bush. to the acre, at 75 cents		$75,000.00
Working expenses for 10 years at $5 per acre	$32,000.00
Interest on capital for 10 years at 6 per cent	10,800.00
		42,800.00
Surplus (not taking into account increase in value of land, which may be figured at $18,000)		32,200.00

Duty on Implements.

"Now note right here, that all a farmer working a section of land under these conditions would pay in duty on the implements required to earn this large profit, assuming the average life of same to be 10 years, comes out at approximately $35 per annum. This is no exaggerated statement of profits and increase in value of land, as thousands of farmers in Saskatchewan can testify, and hundreds who have specially applied themselves and taken advantage of the opportunities at hand, have realized far greater profits than are here shown. How, then, can the farmers of the West claim that they have been ill-used, or not given a fair deal?

"Of course we have had, and have, grievances, such as elevator monopolies, grain blockades, and grievances connected with grading and marketing of grain, and they are not altogether remedied yet, but what great industry has not had minor difficulties equal to or greater than these to overcome.

"In conclusion, I may say that many farms in the Indian Head district, which have been well cultivated, and have been cropped continually with a one-third summer fallow each year since the early 80's, last season produced 30, 35, 40 and even more bushels to the acre, in quality almost if not quite equal to the first crop; at all events not more than one per cent. lower."

AMERICAN CAPITAL

Senator Beveridge Says This Must be Kept Out of Canada

As the result of some investigations conducted by The Monetary Times, Toronto, it is known that at the present time at least 200 United States manufacturing companies are operating branch factories in Canada, representing an aggregate investment of $226,000,000. For this influx of capital, with all the benefits accruing to the Dominion therefrom, the country must thank a tariff which made it worth while for those who hoped to sell Canada goods to come over the line to manufacture. Had that tariff not been a protective one, those United States manufacturers would probably have enlarged their home factories to take care of Canadian business instead of building on the Canadian side, in which case Canada would now be using goods made from United States material with United States labor, instead of goods made from Canadian material with Canadian labor.

That the States look upon this movement as a distinct loss to be remedied by Reciprocity with Canada is shown in the following extract from a speech recently delivered by Senator Beveridge, of Indiana:

"There must be reciprocity with Canada. Our tariff with the rest of the world does not apply to our northern neighbor. That policy already has driven American manufacturers across the Canadian borders, built vast plants with American capital on Canadian soil, employing Canadian workingmen to supply trade. That capital should be kept at home to employ American workingmen to supply Canadian demand. We should admit Canadian wood pulp and Canadian paper free in return for Canada's admitting our agricultural implements, our engines, pumps and other machinery free. We should freely admit Canadian lumber to American planing mills in return for Canada's freely admitting other American manufactured products to Canadian markets."

MR. O'CONNELL REPLIES TO MAYOR MORROW'S LETTER

city and that company is a letter written on the 4th day of February, 1910, and then the matter was apparently allowed to lie dormant, and nothing done until the commissioner took it up on the 25th day of May, 10 days after taking office. That the matter was not finally concluded before Mr. Duggan came here, appears from the correspondence between the industrial commissioner and the company, by which it is shown that an ultimate conclusion had not been arrived at by the company until the 26th day of January, 1911 as appears by a letter of that date, and which is on the commissioner's file and open to inspection. The mayor, while citing these two instances with which the industrial commissioner was connected, makes no mention whatever of the great volume of other work done by that gentleman. It is evidently a difficult matter to satisfy His Worship as to the efficiency of the commissioner's work, and in my attempt to do so I cannot do better than call as a witness on Mr. Duggan's behalf the mayor himself. Let me cite from his inaugural address delivered to the council on the 9th day of January, 1911, as reported in the public press. "I would like to emphasize a statement made in my address to the council a year ago, in which I stated that the continued growth of the city depended to a very large extent on the securing and locating of new manufacturing industries. The council of 1910 made a grant of $2,000 to the Board of Trade for the purpose of engaging an industrial commissioner. An official namely Mr. H. V. Duggan, was engaged about the 1st of June last, who has been devoting his time to this work, and as mayor I have been kept in close touch with Mr. Duggan, and know that he has been doing his work in a very systematic manner, and I am strongly of the opinion that good results will accrue to the city from the expenditure of the above sum." Not a word of condemnation is said here, and the commissioner was then in office practically eight months. Such was the statement of the mayor, and I presume his opinion in the month of January last. In my previous communication I had the hardihood to say that sometimes public matters are discussed by the members of the City Council without full information. No better justification of that remark could be had than the apparent contradiction between the statement contained in the inaugural address of the mayor and the statement contained in his letter to the public press of the 13th inst.

There is a direct conflict between the mayor and Mr. Duggan as to the circumstances under which the application was made to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for a report by the engineers of the commission.

Mr. Duggan informs me that he requested the mayor to apply for a report respecting Dams 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, and to put an application in for Healey Falls. The commissioner had been previously informed that an application by the city for this electric-power would be likely to be favorably entertained. Mr. Duggan states that in his interview with the mayor respecting these matters that his proposition was not favorably entertained, and that the mayor stated to him that it would antagonize the present power companies, that the present price was not too high, and that the power would be given away in any event in the same manner that it had been previously given to the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited. Mr. Duggan says he left the mayor's office under the impression that his request that the application be made would not be entertained. However, some days afterwards he learned that the mayor had caused the application to be made to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for a report on the several powers in the vicinity of Peterborough that might be suitable, mentioning Dams Nos. 3, 4, and 5 on the Peterborough-Lakefield section, the dams at Hastings and the dam at Lakefield, nothing was said in this letter respecting Healey Falls.

The commissioner, as he says, recognizing the difficulty of having the mayor make the application for Healey Falls, induced the members of the Council to have a resolution passed in Council authorizing the application to be made, and in this way apparently acted contrary to the wishes of the mayor, who, in Mr. Duggan's opinion, seemed to be opposed to anything being done in regard to Healey Falls.

Mr. Duggan further informs me that he induced Mr. R. R. Hall, representing the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, and Mr. Shook, representing the Dickson Company, of Peterborough, Limited, to interview Mr. Beck and be assured by him of the practicability of the scheme. After this interview Mr. Duggan obtained from Mr. Hall, again representing the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, and Mr. Shook, again representing the Dickson Company, of Peterborough, Limited, letters intimating the willingness of these companies to give options upon the respective powers, at the prices mentioned in these letters. From the circumstantial detail with which Mr. Duggan states his relations with the mayor in respect to this matter, I am of the opinion that in this case, as in the others, the mayor's memory is again at fault.

However this may be, certain it is that Mr. Duggan had extensive communications with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission before the mayor's application had been sent.

The mayor censures Mr. Duggan for having the report of the Hydro Electric Power Commission read before the citizens of Peterborough, but the chairman of the commission exonerates Mr. Duggan in the matter.

The mayor cites an instance, in which the city had a report made of the water works power, at the time it was contemplating the purchase of the same, and makes comparison between the methods adopted then and in the case under discussion. Without any animadverting upon the morality of with-holding information for the purpose of driving an inequitable bargain and procuring property at less than its value, let me say that the circumstances surrounding each case are entirely different. When the city contemplated purchasing the water works it had the report made by an engineer engaged by it and for whose services it alone paid. In the case under discussion the report was made, not at the instance of the city, but made by the Hydro Electric Commission and it was open to inspection of any official, as stated by Mr. Beck in his address at Peterborough, and the information therein contained was as equally accessible to the officers of the company as to the officials of the city. In addition to this both companies have had reports made by engineers and I am informed that the report of the Hydro Electric Power Commission's engineers of the Otonabee Power Company power was practically the confirmation of the report previously made by the engineers of that company. So there was no information in this matter obtained by the Hydro Electric Commission of a secret character, and that could have been witheld from the companies had not publication been made of the report.

The mayor states in his letter that he was told by a deputation of the Board of Trade that Mr. Duggan did not know that Mr. Beck was bringing the report, although Mr. Duggan had informed citizens that it would be at the meeting several days before it was held. The mayor makes two mistakes herein. In the first place he was not informed by a deputation that Mr. Duggan did not know that Mr. Beck was bringing the report. What occurred at the meeting was that the mayor asked me, after I concluded speaking, if Mr. Duggan had sent out notices saying that the report would be given at the meeting, and I replied, "Not as far as I know." In fact I do not think it was known that Mr. Beck was coming until the day he was here, and again Mr. Duggan informs me that he never made the statement to any citizens that the report would be read at the meeting, nor did he in fact know that it would be.

Permit me to again repeat that in my opinion the Industrial Commissioner is being harshly and unfairly dealt with. I am firmly of the opinion that the members of the council in dealing with this case were not fully informed. Alderman Morgan, animated by a desire to have justice done in the matter suggested at the council meeting at which the report was brought in recommending the retaining of the Industrial Commissioner's services asked that the Commissioner be afforded an opportunity of meeting the City Council and of discussing the matter with its members. For some reason or another this request was not acceded to. Again at a Committee meeting of the Council at which it was decided not to engage Mr. Duggan, Alderman Duncan, no doubt wishing to be fair to this officer asked that no action be taken until the chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission was heard from, and according to the public press he was informed by the mayor that nothing more would be obtained from that source than that already before the meeting and prompt decapitation was suggested. Unfortunately Alderman Duncan's request was not complied with as when the chairman of the Hydro Electric Commission came he informed the public that Mr. Duggan was not to blame in the matter. If Mr. Duggan has incurred displeasure, because he had the backbone to stand by what he conceived to be the city's interests, it is all the more reason for retaining his services.

A resolution has been passed by the representatives of the manufacturers retail merchants and members of professions requesting that a meeting of the City Council be called for the purpose of discussing the matter with that Committee with a view of reconsidering the Council's decision. This request will no doubt be complied with. Mr. Duggan will be present at that meeting and I have no hesitation in leaving the merits of the case to the members of the City Council and of this committee. The facts in dispute between the mayor and Mr. Duggan can then be investigated and the attitude of both these gentlemen upon the questions now being discussed can be fully ventilated and the City Council and citizens have an opportunity of deciding upon the merits of the case.

Yours truly,

D. O'CONNELL.

NEARLY KILLED THIS AFTERNOON

Patrick Fitzgerald Fell Down Elevator—His Back Injured

Patrick Fitzgerald, of Douro, was nearly killed this afternoon about 3.15 by accidentally falling down the elevator shaft into the cellar of the Peterborough Hardware Co. In some manner he failed to notice the space on the floor where the elevator went down into the cellar, and must have dropped down. No person was aware that he was there until the boy who runs the elevator heard groans below him when he was descending on the elevator.

He immediately stopped, and discovered the injured man.

Comstock's ambulance was called. Mr. Spencely and Walter Fitzgerald helped to bring him up, and Dr. Greer was called and attended him. His back was badly injured and a severe cut was found on his scalp. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

CANADIAN WATERWAYS COMMISSIONERS IGNORANCE MAY RUIN FARMS IN ALBERTA

Advice of Their Expert Was Disregarded—Severe Criticism From C. A. Magrath of Alberta

Ottawa, May 17.—Since the early forenoon yesterday until late last night the House had under discussion the bill relating to the establishment of the International Joint Commission under the waterways treaty.

The case of the critics of the Government was in the hands of C. A. Magrath of Medicine Hat, whose abundance of grey matter and knowledge of irrigation problems made the task of defence extremely difficult, and, so far as a layman could judge, exceedingly "lame."

Mr. Magrath says that under the agreement entered into between the representatives of the two countries a situation has arisen in Southern Alberta which, it is claimed, may do everlasting harm to the Canadian farmers in that territory, and may turn prospective smiling farms into arid wastes. In other words their supply of water is threatened. He contends that the Canadian representatives who agreed upon the waterways treaty have jeopardized Canadian interests through absolute ignorance and neglect of ordinary precaution, and so apparently have the interests of Alberta been sacrificed that one of the experts employed by the United States Government has publicly stated that this is so.

The chief argument of Mr. Magrath was in connection with the Milk and Mary rivers, which flow from the United States into Alberta. The former of these, after traversing one hundred miles of Canadian territory, returns to the United States and empties into the Missouri system. By the arrangement come to, water can be diverted from the Mary River into the United States to the Milk River. Mr. Magrath pointed out that the whole water of the Mary River was necessary for irrigation in Alberta. Mr. Oliver claimed that Canada had no choice in the matter, and that the United States, if so minded, could divert the whole of the water of the two rivers, so that none would enter Canada at all. The Opposition constitutional lawyers argued that this could not be done.

Another statement made by Magrath was that the advice of the only expert appointed by the Canadian Government had been set aside, and that there was "not an expert within one thousand miles of the negotiators on the part of Canada," whereas the United States negotiators, as usual, had a number of experts at their elbow. Canada, by slipshod methods, had undertaken to manufacture experts.

He declared that no parallel was to be found in the history of any business in the wide world.

Hon. Mr. Oliver complimented the previous speaker on his knowledge of the situation. He agreed with him in many respects, in most respects. Mr. Oliver explained that Canada was to get half the flow of the St. Mary's River in high water and three quarters of the flow in low water. Two international rivers flowed from the United States into Canada; one of those remained in Canada, while the other, the smaller, turned back again into the United States. But the alternative of Canada was not as between getting half or three-quarters of the flow of the river, but between getting what we did get and nothing at all. The United States proposed to divert the St. Mary's River into the Milk River and so take the flow to Montana irrigation works.

Mr. Borden asked what right the United States had to do this. He could not find that they had any authority for the proposed diversion.

Mr. Oliver said he agreed with Mr. Borden as to the question of the abstract right. The Unted States, however, had the power, as the river where the diversion was proposed was entirely in United States territory.

Major Currie asked if Canada could not divert back the water to the St. Mary's River, from the Milk River, after the United States had diverted it, as the Milk River ran through Canada, after the point where the work was to have been done.

Mr. Oliver said this was undoubtedly the case. But although this could be done, the fact was that Canada by this rediversion could not use the water for the lands it was proposed to irrigate directly from the St. Mary's River, and without the double diversion.

PARLIAMENTARY INVESTIGATION

Semi-Official Statement Regarding Cement Merger

Special to The Review.

Ottawa, May 17.—It is semi-officially stated to-day that there will be a parliamentary investigation into the cement merger.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTION MAY COME

Washington, May 17.—Criminal prosecution of the officials of the Standard Oil Company may follow the decision of the Supreme Court, it was stated to-day by a high government official. The matter will be taken up by the Attorney-General within the next few days. Possible obstacles to prosecution confront the government, it was stated, in the statute of limitation, under which the oil trust officials are expected to claim immunity. The government, however, takes the position that the combination was a continuing offence up to the time it was ordered dissolved.

MR. W. H. DENHAM DEFINES HIS POSITION IN SUPPORT OF INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER

Mr. Denham Believes That Mr. Duggan Should be Re-engaged Because of the Work He Did Under Direction of Board of Trade—The Power Report.

To The Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir—While I am averse to continuing the newspaper controversy, regarding the Industrial Commissioner, Mr. Duggan, I feel that in justice to the Board of Trade and to myself it might be well to define my position in the matter, as a reason for the activity I have shown in endeavoring to have the re-appointment of Mr. Duggan reconsidered by the council.

I wish to state in the first place, that I have not advocated the re-appointment of Mr. Duggan for reasons of personal friendship, although I have no reason to count Mr. Duggan as anything but a friend. At the beginning of last year, the Board of Trade appointed a committee, consisting of Mr. D. Hughes Charles, Mr. J. H. Larmonth, Mr. W.H. Moore, Mr. Daniel O'Connell, Mr. Peter Campbell and myself to engage an Industrial Commissioner, to outline and supervise his duties, and to also supervise the expenditure of the money appropriated by the City Council and collected from the citizens. The fact that I was appointed on this committee led me to use my best efforts and interests towards a beneficial result for the city of Peterborough, and in doing this, I have spent considerable time and effort and I feel that I have worked as hard to accomplish satisfactory results as any committee of the council has worked on any other subject in the line of work they had taken up, and towards the close of the Industrial Commissioner's year, we felt that Mr. Duggan had proved himself competent, that he had done a great amount of good work and that while only two industries had been located in Peterborough, still the preliminary work he had done and the prospective propositions, which are still in the course of correspondence, would result in several industries for Peterborough the coming year. This opinion was reached from the fact that we were actively engaged in looking after the office and were well posted on just what Mr. Duggan had done, and therefore, our recommendation to the council to re-appoint Mr. Duggan was in absolute good faith, believing first, that it would be difficult to obtain a better man, secondly that the preliminary education which Mr. Duggan has received would be saved to the city. I, therefore, felt that the recommendation of this committee should have been recognized in some form, as should also have been the recommendation by the Merchants' Association, the recommendation of the number of citizens, who appeared at a meeting held in the Council Chamber Tuesday May 8., and the recommendation from the profession and the manufacturers.

DEAD INSPECTOR WROTE HIS WILL WITH A BURNED TWIG

Story of Struggle Against Starvation is Confirmed by Report at Ottawa

Ottawa, May 17.—A pathetic tale of suffering, borne with fortitude and patience, culminating in the death from starvation in the northern wilds, of Inspector Fitzgerald and three other members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police force, was received by Col. Wm. White, comptroller, in the form of a report from Corpl. Dempster of Dawson, Yukon, who was sent out to investigate the tragedy.

There is no little pathos in the report, which includes a diary of Inspector Fitzgerald for the ten days preceding the slowly and grimly approaching death. In a will of 22 words, written with a burnt twig, the inspector left all his possessions to his mother, ending the document with the words "God bless all."

The theory that the party lost their trail and were compelled to eat their dogs and eventually starved was all too true. The official diary discloses the whole story. It is heart-rending in the extreme. Inspector Fitzgerald's last words were written Sunday, Feb. 5, stating that the men were forced to eat their dogs while staring death and starvation in the face, reveals some conception of the awful outlook confronting the party on the last day.

STABS INSTEAD OF 400 FRANCS

Viterbo Trial Proceeds With Camorrist Leader's Evidence

Viterbo, Italy, May 17.—Enrico Alfano, reputed head of the Neapolitan Camorra, was again confronted yesterday by Abbatemaggio, the informer, when the trial of the thirty-six Camorrists for murder resumed.

"To-day," he began, "is the anniversary of the death of my beloved brother Ciro, who died in prison. I must make a superhuman effort to overcome the emotion that possesses me. Still in my ears is the echo of the last desperate lamentations of my brother. In the agony of death he continued to deny the assertion of this man Abbatemaggio."

Attacking the informer, Alfano said: "It is absurd to say that 400 francs ($80) was given to Abbatemaggio, who took no part in the affair, and only 150 francs to the real murderers."

Here Abbatemaggio interrupted: "Alfano intended to buy my silence."

Alfano, infuriated, replied: "If I had been in a position to fear your revelations I would have given you 400 stabs instead of 400 francs."

DIAZ SOON TO GO UNDER IT

Wave of Insurrection Will Force His Resignation

Rebel Army Numbers 27,000 Men—Federal Only 23,000

Washington, May 17.—President Diaz of Mexico probably will resign in two months according to a telegram received at the White House last night, from Col. Steever, in command of the United States troops at El Paso. The telegram reads:

"Prospects for peace brighter to-day and armistice will probably be agreed upon in twenty-four hours. Madero demands four places in Cabinet, one of them Secretary of War, and fourteen governorships. Mexican Government agrees to give him Gobernacion and Justice and possibly one other, while the Secretary of War is to be chosen jointly by the two parties. Madero will likely get ten governorships, Diaz to resign after new governors appointed, probably in two months. This is the latest fairly reliable information I can procure."

The minor conditions of peace include the pensioning of soldiers, the payment of indemnities out of the public treasury and arrangements for the reconstruction and repair of public utilities.

The question of the resignation of Diaz has been diplomatically avoided in the peace terms. The revolutionists obtained their demand that soon public announcement be forthcoming from the President as to his intention to resign when peace should be restored.

The feeling is that Gen. Diaz will give way to Senor de la Barr as Provisional President within two or three months, and that a general election will follow within a month or two later. The provisional governors will hold office until state elections shall have been arranged.

The President's advices indicate that the insurrecto army in Mexico now numbers 27,000 men, while the federal army is only 23,000.

FIRE IN PEEL, N.B.; SCORE OF PEOPLE HOMELESS; MUCH LOSS

PRESIDENT DIAZ.
Rumors of his resignation are growing like dandelions on a fine new lawn—but he doesn't resign.

A Score of Persons Are Homeless as a Result of a Disastrous Blaze That Broke Out as a Gale Was Raging—One Man Called From Destruction of Goods to a Fire Which Endangered Property Elsewhere.

Peel, N.B., May 17.—With the wind blowing a hurricane and everything dry as a tinder from the prolonged drought, a fire caught on the roof of the house yesterday owned by Herbert Clark, and occupied by himself and Howard Boyd, and after an hour's hard fighting some twenty buildings are in ashes, a score are homeless and there is a monetary loss of nearly $25,000. The fire is supposed to have caught from a burning flue, and the beautiful residence with contents and the buildings adjoining were swept away, entailing a loss of $5,000 with only $700 insurance.

W. W. Melville lost a barn and contents with small insurance. Harry Carr's building and contents were wiped out with a loss of $1,000 or $1,200 with small insurance.

The buildings owned by Mr. Ross were saved with difficulty, but a large barn owned by Manzar Clark was burned with its contents. His house was also damaged to the extent of about $2,500.

Aldrich Hatfield lost his house and everything he owned, entailing a loss of about $1,500.

The fire leaped from these buildings to the McIntosh house occupied by John Thomas. The buildings are a total loss. Some furniture was saved. The fire worked back and caught in Thomas McRae's fine new farm building and as a result his house, two sheds, three barns, machinery and furniture were burned. The loss is $5,000 with $600 insurance.

Clarke Craig had 500,000 lath stored at the C.P.R. tracks, which were wiped out with no insurance. Mr. Craig was called from this fire to one at Charleston, where his mill was threatened.

Many other buildings were endangered in the conflagration, but the river was close at hand and the telephone brought crowds from every quarter and the fire was soon stopped.

DRAFT READY

Tentative Agreement in Arbitration is Reached

Washington, May 17.—The proposed treaty of arbitration between the United States and Great Britain has at last reached the stage where it is to be presented to the British Government for its approval.

Ambassador Bryce of Great Britain, before the Cabinet met yesterday, had a half-hour conference with President Taft, during which certain points in the treaty was thoroughly discussed. This was the first conference which these two advocates of permanent peace have had since the President announced his intention of negotiating with Great Britain for such treaty.

State Department officials have been constantly at work upon the treaty and yesterday Secretary Knox presented to the Cabinet for its approval a tentative draft. Apparently it was most satisfactory to the President and his official family as a whole.

Secretary Knox, after the Cabinet meeting, announced that the tentative draft probably would be submitted to-day to Ambassador Bryce for transmission to the British foreign Office.

Exchange of dates between the two nations will follow. When the draft is accepted by both countries, the treaty will be signed and submitted to the United States Senate for approval and ratification.

Sarnia, May 17.—Nathaniel H. Williams of Toledo, charged with the theft of a team of horses and buggy from Charles McFee's livery, appeared before the magistrate yesterday. LLOYD-GEORGE WOULD PAY MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Only Novelty In Latest Report of the Chancellor Is a Proposal to Pay a Salary to Members of Commons—He Has a Surplus of $28,035,000, of Which Seven Millions and a Half Are to Be Given to Sanitariums.

London, May 17.—Chancellor Lloyd-George presented the budget in the House of Commons yesterday.

About the only novelty it contains is a proposal to pay members of the House of Commons a salary of $2,000 a year. The Chancellor declined to give members traveling allowances or pensions, and excluded from the salary benefit all Ministers already drawing salaries.

The Chancellor's realized surplus, including payments delayed in 1909-10 by the action of the Lords in throwing out the budget of that year, totalled $28,035,000, of which he proposes to donate $7,500,000 to the support of sanitariums for consumptives. His estimated expenditure for the current year is $906,170,000, which is $37,750,000 more than last year.

The Chancellor's estimated revenue for the current year is $908,580,000. There is no fresh taxation provided.

Of the increased expenditure of $38,750,000 over that of last year's budget the navy, civil service and old age pensions account for most of this enhancement. The payment of members of the House of Commons will absorb a further sum of $1,250,000, while the coronation will add another $1,500,000 to the demands of the Treasury.

Mr. Lloyd-George claimed that the British fiscal system had passed through an exceptional strain with added lustre. During his three years' tenure of office, the Chancellor declared, he had paid off $130,000,000 of the national debt, while it has been reduced $350,000,000 since the Liberals had assumed power. The Chancellor said he had reached the conclusion that the prospects of a continuance of good trade were excellent, as the trade barometer stood set "fair." Of the estimated revenue of $908,580,00 the big items are the customs and excise duties, which are depended on to bring in $348,000,000, death duties of $125,750,000, income tax and supertax of $221,500,000 and the postoffice revenue of $128,700,000.

The Chancellor, as was anticipated, announced the revision of the cocoa import duties, from which the protective effect is removed. This involves the small loss of $225,000.

The Opposition criticism on the budget centered in the provision for the payment of members of the House of Commons, to which Austen Chamberlain declared he was unalterably opposed, as it would deprive members of the British House of the unique distinction of serving without pay. He predicted that it would flood the House with money-grabbing politicians seeking an easy livelihood.

A. J. Balfour, the Opposition leader, obtained the promise of the Government that an opportunity would be afforded later to debate the question fully.

CANNOT APPEAL FROM ORDER OF JUDGE ON COMBINE PROBE

Interesting Decision in Shoe Case—Appeal to Privy Council

Montreal, May 17.—That there is no appeal from an order of a judge directing an investigation under the Combines Investigation Act of Canada, is the effect of a judgment given in the Court of Appeal yesterday by Mr. Justice Cross, and supported by the other judges on the bench.

It was in the case of the United Shoe Machinery Co. v. Drouin Metal, and on account of the precedent which it establishes it was awaited with interest by a host of lawyers and industrial interests.

The result of the judgment is that the investigation into the United Shoe Machinery Co.'s alleged combined "combine" may be continued, as originally ordered by a judge of the Superior Court.

It was announced later, however, that the United Shoe Machinery Co. would immediately carry the case to the Privy Council. This will mean that the three commissioners appointed to carry out the investigation into the so-called combine will not be able to make a move for some time, in any event.

London, May 17.—Three hundred and fifty pupils marched in orderly manner from the Rectory street public school, when a fire started in the building this morning. The school was cleared in less than one minute. The damage amounted to five hundred dollars.

The threatened massacre of Jews at Kiev, Russia, did not materialize yesterday.

HORSE'S LEG SWELLED

Animal Was Too Sore and Lame to Work—Quickly Cured by "Nerviline."

"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for strains, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. Joshua E. Murchison, from his home, Crofts Hill P. O. I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right fore leg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

Nerviline is a Trusty Liniment

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

We have received nearly five thousand letters, recommending Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. One million bottles used each year. Try it yourself. Large bottles of Nerviline 50c; trial size, 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

NERVILINE FOR MAN OR BEAST

The Daily Review

WEDNESDAY, MAY 17, 1911.

UNION LABEL

THE STANDARD OIL CO.

The Standard Oil decision of the supreme court of the United States is a triumph for Theodore Roosevelt, under whose big-stick administration the United States government started the work of restraining the giant corporations. The Standard Oil magnates say that they will obey the mandate of the court, and dissolve the big trust, the company going back to the stage of two dozen or so subsidiary companies, one in each state. The actual working of the Rockefeller oil business will not be interfered with, and it is to be very much doubted if the dissolution of the big holding company will present any of the abuses that have crept in after the wake of monopoly. The work of book-keeping, of organization in connection with each of the subsidiary companies will be greatly increased, but as they are all controlled from the same source, the working will not be damaged or benefited. The fight of the Government against the Standard Oil Company, taken right up to the highest court in the United States, has been most spectacular, but it simply emphasizes the impotence of the government to actually alter the status of a big concern, backed by countless millions. Such companies are able to take refuge in law, behind the rocks of technical objection on every hand, and it seems to be impossible to pot them in the open. This Standard Oil business is a lesson to Canada to step in and do what she can to prevent such industrial combinations, while yet there is time, for only in prevention is there safety. The regard of the law for vested rights gives capitalists a hold on the community apparently impossible to loosen, no matter how those vested rights were acquired or are being used. The operation of the decision will be watched with interest, as this is the first big victory of this nature over the trusts.

PUGSLEYFIED

If the forecasts of the political prophets come true and there is an election this fall, the Laurier government will be appealing to the country with a record by far the most corrupt in the history of the Dominion. Never since the birth of the Dominion forty-four years ago has graft and misappropriation of money run so rampant as at Ottawa to-day. Pugsleyism is rampant in its most aggravated form. In this present session of parliament we have had two or three very glaring samples, which would be enough in the old days to overthrow an administration. Are they tolerated now because the public conscience is chloroformed by business prosperity, or because the corrupt acts of the Laurier administration have been so many and so startling that each one is merely a question of degree?

Scandals such as the Lanctot whitewashing, the Quebec bridge, the printing bureau thefts which went on while the Secretary of State was investigating conditions; Marine Department crookedness, the $60,000 "Where-did-it-come-from" transaction, the Arctic scandal, the Farmers' Bank charter granting, etc., all indicate the way the government is breaking. A party old in office is a party to which the leeches have fastened, and it is hopeless to pry them loose without throwing the whole party out into the cold where the leeches freeze and fall off. This is the history of every party, and the Laurier government is easily the most brilliant exponent of this fact Canadians have seen. The barnacles that accumulated in the Ross regime at length caused an upheaval of vast proportions, and the day is rapidly coming when the Nemesis of the Dominion Liberal party will seek it out, and cut it down in the distribution of the spoils of office.

The reciprocity pact was brought on in the hope that it would be the herring across the slimy trail of misdoing. It looks as if the move would be successful in blinding the electorate to much of the boodling that has made Ottawa a by-word for corruption and graft; but reciprocity is going to prove the biggest boomerang of Canadian political history. What the Laurier Government expected to sweep the country with will be the very means of sending it where it belongs, and where it will not have the same opportunity of diverting public property and public money from their rightful uses.

The latest political sensation, the receiving of $69,009 by Hon. Frank Oliver, in the last campaign from some source, and the disbursing of it in the same campaign—evidently to use on the electorate—is worse by far than the Pacific scandal that cost Sir John Macdonald power for a few years. The amount in question then was only $10,000 or $20,000. This is $70,000 and it was only a small portion of the fund so successfully and cunningly used. The government proposes to block all investigation as to where the money came from, beyond proving that it did not come from the C.N.R. Such trickery and defiance of decent moral principle shows to what length the Laurier administration is prepared to go. Both parties have campaign funds, it is true, but a government that refuses to allow a specific investigation of charges made by members of its own party, is certainly not a government to be entrusted with the expenditure of $100,000,000 a year.

The Laurier government has much to answer for. If the public is not aroused in this campaign against the iniquitous administration, there is small hope until Sir Wilfrid Laurier lets go the helm, and his merry crew start wrecking the ship—until there is another "nest of traitors."

W. J. BRYAN

William J. Bryan is a native of Salem, Ill., where he was born in 1860. His favorite theme as an orator is Peace. It is fitting that this apostle of peace on earth should hail from Salem, the meaning of which is peace. He graduated at the Illinois College, Jacksonville, at the head of his class in 1881, and at the Union College of Law, Chicago, in 1883. After practicing law in Jacksonville for four years, he settled in Lincoln, Neb., where he soon rose to prominence as a lawyer and politician, and where he still resides. From 1891 to 1895 he served as a Democratic representative in Congress. Then the free silver movement began, and Mr. Bryan came to the front as one of its leaders. He drafted the platform of the Democratic party for the presidential campaign of 1896, and was a delegate to the Democratic national convention at at Chicago in the summer of that year, says the Hamilton Herald. Nobody had thought of him as a candidate for the presidency, but a speech of fiery eloquence delivered by him took the convention by storm; he was promptly recognized as the inevitable leader in the free silver cause which the Democratic party had made its own, and was made the party's choice for the presidency. He fought a splendid fight; but it proved to be a losing one. William McKinley and the cause of "honest money" triumphed.

In 1898 when the war with Spain broke out, Mr. Bryan raised a regiment of infantry, of which he was made colonel, and went to the front with it, but the war was over before he had an opportunity to fight for his country.

In 1900 he was again the candidate of his party for the presidency, and again his opponent was Mr. McKinley. In this campaign Mr. Bryan made his fight against imperialism and in favor of free silver. Again he went down to defeat.

Then Mr. Bryan entered the field of journalism, establishing The Commoner, a weekly organ of Democratic principles, which has obtained a commanding position among political periodicals. About this time he made a tour of the world. Once again—in 1908—he was the presidential candidate of his party; and this time he was defeated by Mr. Taft.

It might be supposed that a thrice-defeated candidate would be shorn of most of his influence and would have shrunken to a figure of comparative insignificance in the political world. As a matter of fact, however, Mr. Bryan is still by far the most potent influence in the Democratic party. The reason is that he is universally recognized as a politician whose honesty is not less real than his ability. Friends and opponents alike believe that even though he may be mistaken, he is always sincere, disinterested and courageous.

Mr. Bryan is the typical reformer. He scorns to compromise with what he believes to be right. If he had been a man of a more flexible integrity he would have been president of the United States. His ideals of public service and political righteousness are unusually pure and lofty, and he has striven as have but few public men to live up to his ideals. Although in one sense he has failed as a politician, his political career has in reality been a splendidly successful as well as a noble one, for he has seen his opponents forced to adopt, one after another, many of the reforms which he fought for and which they opposed. Still in the prime of manhood, there may be triumphs ahead for William Jennings Bryan. Meanwhile he is acknowledged to be the most potent political orator of his time and country, and one of the most influential of those who stand for the righteousness that exalteth nations.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The veto bill has passed the Commons, and the titled gentry will now proceed to grasp the nettle. Whether they get stung in the process depends on the way they handle it.

It is never too late to mend. And it isn't too late for Mr. Oliver to tell where the money came from—that $70,000 that appeared in and disappeared from his bank account so mysteriously.

The regular quarterly dividend of $9 per share was declared yesterday by the Standard Oil Company. Evidently the big company may be dissolved, but the profits will continue to come out of the people just the same.

Count Zeppelin's new airship Deutschland was wrecked yesterday after six weeks. This is the sixth serious accident, all of Zeppelin's airships having come to grief. Count Zeppelin should go to the Sahara for his experiments.

No action will be taken in the cement merger charges, at least until parliament reassembles. The outcome of the matter should be a law like that in Great Britain compelling the publication of details as to where the money goes to in cases of companies selling stock to the public.

At Rheims yesterday an aeroplane travelled one hundred miles an hour. A speed like that would be impossible, with any degree of safety on earth, because of obstructions. It will be only a matter of a few years before auto races will take a back seat to the aeroplane races.

J. R. Stratton, M.P., says he would be sorry to think the board of trade anti-reciprocity resolution was the sober thought of the majority of the members. Mr. Stratton would be inclined to excuse the members if they passed the resolution when not quite sober.

In the west there is a Liberal organizer named Perry, whose reputation is anything but fragrant. He was put in charge of the Manitoba census enumerators, who were instructed to call at his office, and act under his direction. The calibre of the men appointed through Friend Perry indicates that the government regards the census merely as a means of handing out a little loose change to party heelers.

The Toronto Globe says that in the Imperial Conference Sir Wilfrid Laurier will not be stampeded into any position in which he will not be sustained overwhelmingly by Canadian public opinion. In the reciprocity agreement he was stampeded into a deal by Fielding and Paterson, which is not overwhelmingly sustained by Canadian public opinion. Not by a jugful. Which goes to show that even politicians of years and years experience sometimes make mistakes.

CHAPTER IV.

ALMOST one year elapsed before Colonel Moreau, harkening at length to the call of the river, returned to his old haunts in New Orleans. When he did so it was to learn that his supposed victim had entirely recovered from the effects of the "honorable combat" and, in conjunction with his partner, had reoccupied his old niche of fame—premier professional gambler of the Mississippi. Quite aside from all financial reasons—the fact that a more skillful and successful rival was garnering the major spoils of the river—the news of his victim's recovery was seriously disquieting to the honorable colonel, and had he been forewarned he might have indefinitely prolonged his acquaintance with the more healthful climate of Mexico. He knew that Kirby was not the type of man to forget or condone a bullet in the back or the smirching of whatever little remained of his once fair reputation, and had he even remotely suspected that he would recover he (Moreau) would not have prevaricated so cheerfully and with such abandon to young Randall. How much did the boy now know? That was the all important question. Kirby, of course, had learned that he stood accused of the late John Randall's suicide, but had he taken the trouble to refute it? Moreau did not think so, and Moreau was right.

Kirby had but vaguely heard of the unjust accusation and, having been long since casehardened to calumny in all its phases, paid little if any attention. Had any member of the Randall family sought him out he would, as a matter of duty, have proved his innocence. But they, believing him dead, had not done so, and he refused to take the initiative, partly because he could not give absolute credence to the rumor, but in a greater measure because of the demands upon his time. After all, it did not matter. It meant only another tally to the score of Jack Moreau, and all would be wiped out by that gentleman's death, an undertaking upon which he had definitely decided. What stood between them could be eradicated only by the bullet.

Meanwhile the passing year had brought with it many changes for the surviving members of the Randall family. Life is tenacious, and they had persisted in surviving as best they could the shock incident upon their father's suicide. The one small measure of satisfaction in the whole terrible affair was the knowledge that the despoiler of their home had promptly met his death and that in consequence they were at least saved from pauperization, for they were entirely ignorant of Kirby's recovery or the measures he had voluntarily taken for their protection.

To the only girl, Adele, had fallen the brunt of suffering. The General, a child of eight, was too young to fully comprehend his loss, while Tom, a hot headed youth in his early twenties, occupied all his time with the plantation and devoted all spare moments to nursing his hatred against Kirby's memory. While glorying in the latter's supposed death he deplored that his hand had not effected it. Where grief had paralyzed Adele it had but further aroused the boy's militant and aggressive nature, adding, moreover, a sense of youthful and bitter cynicism. He abhorred Kirby's memory with an intensity passing the hatred of man and, even had he been a stranger to the then prevailing and primitive notions of justice, would, had he known the other lived, have immediately sought him out and killed him. If his father's memory demanded that no resistance should be made to the gambler's claim it likewise demanded that the latter should not live overlong to enjoy his newly acquired property.

More than once, as if uneasy intuition sought to prompt the truth, the boy had suggested to his sister the possibility of Kirby having survived Moreau's sincere attentions. Then he would break out in an ungovernable fit of fury and hatred.

"Supposing that scoundrel has lived and intends reaping the reward of his crime!" he would cry. "He gained that deed by the vilest scoundrelism ever practiced. Well, let him make good his claim if he can."

"But who will dispute it?" Adele would lifelessly inquire, plucking at her black dress, while twin patches of scarlet would begin to burn in the dead white of her face. "Do you think we could stoop to ask mercy from a man of that stamp? Whether the deed was gained honestly or not, it does not matter. Father's signature is on the paper, and we must stand by it, Tom. You know that. Anyway," she would finish drearily, "what does it matter? What does it matter where we go, what we become? Let this Mr. Kirby—if that be his name—finish the work he began so well."

"I—I wish you could pluck up a little more spirit, Dele," he would return, solicitous and resentful in the one breath. "Doesn't the thought of that scoundrel's possible recovery make your blood boil? Don't you ever consider the thought of you and the General and me being rendered absolute paupers? Think of what it would mean to leave the only home we have known"—

"I have thought of all that until my brain is sick—sick like my heart," she would interrupt colorlessly. "I have long contemplated the possibility; thought that the deed might, after all, be enforced. I have talked the matter over with Aunt Davezac. We have decided that the moment we learn that this—this gambler is alive we will put the place in order and leave immediately for New Orleans—again quarter ourselves on aunty. After that—well, you and I must learn how to work, Tom. We must provide for the General's schooling, and of course we cannot be a burden on Aunt Davezac one moment longer than is absolutely necessary. Above all, there must on no account be any opposition to this Mr. Kirby's claim, supposing he still lives."

"Yes, I suppose you're right, Dele," he would reluctantly agree. "We could not dishonor father's memory by resisting the scoundrel's claim."

And had sorrow not blurred the girl's perception, rendered her indifferent to everything, she would instantly have suspected her brother's ingenuousness, for, hot headed and impulsive, he was not one to heed advice, accept the passive course that she had outlined.

Ought To Be Careful.

Ottawa, May 17.—At the evening session of the Royal Society of Canada, Prof. Ramsay Wright delivered the presidential address on "The Progress of Biology."

He urged the careful selection of the class of immigrants to be admitted to Canada. Earl Grey and M. J. J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the U. S., were present.

Prof. Wright said it was believed the physical basis of heridity had been discovered in certain particles in the cells of organisms. The problem had been attacked in more than one way; by means of statistics by the principles of the school of eugenics, who sought to show the effects of the introduction of good and bad stock in the race. London, for instance, was slowly becoming decadent. "We ought to be careful in the selection of immigrants into Canada. If we can get a good quality of immigrants from the British Isles, I think that is where we should look for them."

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 17.—Circuit Court Judge McDonald, yesterday rendered an option denying the demurrer of the defendants in the case of the State of Michigan against the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Railway Co. (Grand Trunk).

In this suit the state seeks to collect about $2,000,000 alleged to be due in back taxes.

Attorneys for the company announced an appeal would be taken to the Supreme Court.

Called In the Police.

Kingston, May 17.—The police have been called on to quell a labor disturbance. Masons' laborers on strike endeavored to get a couple of men off a job at Moore's garage, but when the police arrived the men moved off. Union men were also ordered away from another job on a William street house. The strike has not yet been settled. The contractors declare they will not give the laborers an increase of 25 cents. They at present get $2.

Flashed Wireless From Aeroplane.

Bridgeport, Conn., May 15.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the Canadian aviator, was successful in sending a wireless message from his aeroplane during a flight Saturday. He was some 3,000 feet up in the air and over Long Island Sound Station in New York, and through a station which had been set up at the aerodrome the message was caught. Owing to the additional weight of the apparatus, much difficulty was experienced by the aviator on reaching the desired altitude.

Following his first flight when he tried the wireless experiment, McCurdy made another flight, taking up with him Lieut. Fickel of the United States army, who attempted shooting with a rifle from the airship at targets on the earth. Owing to the fact that there was a 25-mile breeze blowing which swayed the craft, accurate aim could not be secured, and the experiments were only partially successful.

There is a split in Emmanuel Church, Brantford, and the pastor, Rev. G. N. North, will establish a new congregation.

"THE RED MILL"

Holland Figures Prominently in the Gay Musical Comedy

A brilliant event is anticipated at the Grand next Wednesday (Victoria Day). The occasion will be notable because it will usher in an engagement of what has been pronounced one of the best musical offerings of the decade, "The Red Mill," which, under the direction of Martin & Emery Co., made an all-year run in New York last season, and has since completed engagements of four months in Chicago, three months in Boston and two months in Philadelphia. Additional importance obtains through the fact that the play is by those necromancers of stage composition, Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert, who gave us that delightful comic opera, "The Prima Donna," with Fritzi Scheff the bright particular star.

In seeking a novel setting for his play Mr. Blossom happily hit upon the country of Holland, which has heretofore not been served up very much by dramatists. The characters in the piece with two exceptions, are all Dutch, and their quaint and brightly colored costumes, exhibited in a framework made up of whirling Dutch mills and Delft decorations form some very novel and pretty stage pictures.

The story revolves around the adventures of two smart, but financially embarrassed Americans, who are "doing" Europe, and who get stranded at Katwyk-aan-Zee. They try to beat their board bill, but are caught by a stern sheriff, prosecuted by an unrelenting tavern keeper and sentenced by a burly Burgomaster to work out their debt. This they do by acting as a waiter and an interpreter. A dainty love story is introduced in the plot, which involves the two Americans, a dashing navy officer, a piquant barmaid and a Burgomaster's charming daughter and flirtatious sister. These various characters are impersonated by a group of exceptionally clever players, which includes a company of over fifty people, including the Dutch Kiddies and the company's orchestra.

THEATRICAL

Miss Margaret Anglin's husband, Howard Hull, was born in Louisville, Ky., where he worked as a messenger boy, then as an usher in Colonel John MacAuley's theatre, and later in a railroad office. After that he got a place in the chorus of one of the Louisville theatrical companies. He is an actor as well as a writer, but has never appeared in any but inconspicuous roles. "I expect to continue my stage work for several years," Miss Anglin said, "and Mr. Hull will work with me. He will not act, but write."

MR. V. EASTWOOD THE NEW PRESIDENT OF BOARD OF TRADE

T. Q. Quartermaine Retires From Secretaryship of 12 Years' Service

Board Passes a Resolution Favoring Retention of Industrial Officer.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Trade held at the City Council chamber last night the president, Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, tendered his resignation, and the choice of the meeting for the vacated position was Mr. V. Eastwood, manager of the local branch of the Royal Bank.

The officers of the Board for the ensuing year are as follows—

President—V. Eastwood.
Vice-President—D. O'Connell.
Treasurer—P. Campbell (re-elected).

The election of a secretary was left over for a future meeting.

The following gentlemen were nominated for the office of president, Messrs. V. Eastwood, D. O'Connell and R. G. Kingan, but the latter two withdrew.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

The retiring president, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, submitted his annual report as follows—

Gentlemen,—I have the honor, as president of the Peterborough Board of Trade, of presenting to you my second annual report of this honorable body.

During the past year we have discussed many important questions relating to the welfare of our city. The discussions and resolutions passed by the Board, have, we hope, to some extent, guided and helped the decisions of our Municipal Council, with whom we hope to work harmoniously for the best interests of our city.

Our membership is not as large as it should be, and I would urge every business and professional man, as well as every labor organization, of this city to join the Board of Trade, attend the meetings and take part in the discussions. This is the privilege of every citizen who becomes a member of the Board of Trade. How much more good can be done by coming together, discussing and listening to the discussions of these important questions—getting the information first-handed and correct—than can be obtained by staying at home and "knocking" afterwards.

Permit me to thank you for the support you have given me during my two years as president.

In closing I wish to assure my successor, whom you will appoint tonight, of my co-operation in making the Peterborough Board of Trade a strong and useful body for the welfare of our city.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The retiring secretary, Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, submitted the following—

Gentlemen,—I have the honor of presenting to you, as secretary, the 22nd annual report of the Board.

The past year we have held seven meetings, viz: 15th March, 5th April, 15th November, 22nd November, and 20th December, 1910; 27th February, and 28th April, 1911. We have also held several committee meetings.

The following subjects have been discussed at these meetings: Municipal ownership, by-law to build and equip power house, etc., organization of a Provincial Board of Trade, technical education, municipal government by commission, Bonner-Worth Co. and Chas. E. Dittman by-laws, reciprocity, and Jules Motor Co.

The average attendance was 17, as against 20 members last year.

The thanks of the Board of Trade is due His Worship Mayor Morrow and the members of the City Council for the use of the City Council chamber during the past year.

In conclusion, I beg to tender my resignation as secretary of this Board, and in doing so I wish to thank the executive officers and the members of the Board for the generous support they have so unstintingly given me during the past twelve years that I have been secretary of the Board.

With my best wishes for a useful and brilliant future for the Peterborough Board of Trade.

BOARD'S RESOLUTION

Moved by Mr. W. R. Morris, seconded by Mr. W. S. Dodd, that

Whereas the Board has been informed that it is not the intention of the City Council of the city of Peterborough to employ Mr. Duggan as industrial commissioner for the city during the ensuing year, and

Whereas we have been assured by the committee of this Board, having his office in charge, that Mr. Duggan has been a painstaking, energetic and efficient officer, and that a continuation of his services are likely to be productive of much advantage to the city of Peterborough, and

Whereas we believe that to place somebody else in his position at this time would cause a break in the continuity of his work and result in much waste of the efforts already put forth by Mr. Duggan in procuring industrial concerns for the city of Peterborough.

Therefore be it resolved, that the members of this Board feel that the industrial interests of the city of Peterborough would be best promoted by a continuation of the services of Mr. Duggan as industrial commissioner, if an amicable understanding can be arrived at between the City Council and that gentleman, and

Be it further resolved, that in our opinion the members of the City Council should be requested to meet a committee of this Board for the purpose of discussing the situation and hearing expression of the opinion of the members of the Board, and

Be it further resolved, that every effort should be put forth by the members of this Board to establish harmonious relationship between the members of the City Council and the industrial commissioner, and

Be it further resolved, that a committee be appointed, consisting of Messrs. J. J. Turner, jr.; W. S. Dodd, A. H. Stratton, R. G. Kingan, President Eastwood and Vice-President D. O'Connell, to interview the City Council in the matter for the purposes heretofore mentioned, and that President Eastwood be appointed as convenor of the said committee.

The foregoing was passed without general comment and unanimously.

Mr. D. O'Connell referred fittingly to Mr. Quartermain's faithful service to the board during the twelve years as secretary, and said he regretted exceedingly his retirement. Messrs. D. O'Connell, F. H. Dobbin and W. S. Dodd were named a committee to appoint the Standing Committee.

Mr. J. J. Turner, jr., offered three important subjects for discussion at another meeting:

1. The holding of a winter exhibition of manufactured goods in the Armouries in February, similar to that conducted by the wholesale and retail hardware men recently. This, Mr. Turner offered would prove a medium for bringing thousands of visitors to town and encouraging spring shopping.

2. Active co-operation with the Industrial Exhibition Board with a view to securing ownership of fair grounds and advancing the quality and extent of the annual exhibition.

3. A discontinuance of the Ward system for municipal elections, which Mr. Turner believed to be a step backward and not conducive to the best interests of the city.

A communication was received from Mr. Sidney Fisher, stating that the Department of Agriculture would take up the board's resolution that legislation be enacted to prohibit the sale of eggs and other produce unfit for consumption.

The private secretary of Sir Wilfrid Laurier wrote acknowledging on behalf of the Premier the receipt of the anti-reciprocity resolution passed by the board and forwarded.

Another acknowledgment was received from Mr. J. R. Stratton, who said he was sorry to think that the resolution was the sober thought of the majority of the members of the Board of Trade and that he could not take any recognition of a resolution brought about under the conditions that surrounded its adoption.

The manager of the Peterborough and Lake Simcoe Navigation Company, Mr. R. Pinchin, wrote with the suggestion that the Board issue folders giving information of the waterways and embodying the time-table of the company as an incidental means of advertising Peterborough. The communication was received as pertaining to the jurisdiction of the City Council.

Mr. Ryerson Ritchie is to address the Board on trade matters at a meeting, the date of which will be announced later.

LUNCHEON TO MR. BRYAN TO-MORROW

There is no doubt that the luncheon to be tendered to our distinguished guest, Mr. Wm. Jennings Bryan at noon on Thursday, will be one befitting the occasion. The men of Peterborough will not allow it to be said that this city has fallen behind her sister cities of Western Ontario in showing respect to a man who stands high in the esteem of his fellow countrymen.

The luncheon is under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. but the Canadian Club is seconding the efforts of the Association to get a good representation of business men.

Those who intend to be present ought to make the fact known to the office of the Y.M.C.A. at once, so that those in charge will be enabled to make suitable preparations. If you haven't bought your ticket, buy it at once.

MURPHY BUTTONS

Nothing Extraneous Left in Body of Arthur Greenwood

With reference to the matter referred to in yesterday's issue in connection with the case of the young man Greenwood and the action of the undertaker, this explanation is offered, that it may be understood that nothing was left in the cavity by the surgeons operating, which might be inferred;—Mr. Greenwood was operated upon for obstruction of the bowls. At two places the bowel was found to be gangrenous, the gangrenous portions were cut out and the bowel connected by metalic discs, called Murphy buttons, which, if the patient had lived, would have passed by the natural passage when the bowel had healed together. At the time of the operation the patient had reached a very serious and critical time in the progress of the disease, and the operation was made as a last resort.

LAID AT REST

A large body of citizens and representatives turned out this morning to pay their last respects to the late Michael O'Brien.

At nine o'clock the funeral cortege left the late residence, 72 Boundary road, and proceeded to the Sacred Heart Church, where requiem high mass was sung.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. J. E. A. Fitzgerald, Gus Cochrane, Arthur Head and Dr. Amys, of the Bottle Lake Hunt Club, and James Clancy and R. Gordon, of the Catholic Order of Foresters.

The members of the Catholic Order of Foresters turned out to the funeral in a body.

Among the many beautiful floral wreaths were those from the Bottle Lake Hunt Club and from friends in Saskatoon.

QUESTIONS MUST BE ANSWERED

Census Enumerators Must be Given Full Information

"Civil action can be taken against any person who refuses to answer any question put by an enumerator in taking the census," said R. H. Leary, the Census Commissioner for West Peterborough, when asked regarding the penalty incurred by refusal to answer all questions of a census-taker.

"According to the statute, every person who wilfully, or without lawful excuse, refuses to give an answer, or who falsely answers a question, is liable to a fine of not more than $50 nor less than $5 for each offence," continued Mr. Leary. The commissioner intimated that this rule applied particularly to manufacturers who might refuse to divulge information about their business.

"All officers engaged in the work of taking the census are sworn to secrecy, so that no one need fear that any information secured will be passed around.

"It will be impossible, even at Ottawa, for anyone to ascertain particulars about any concern for the purpose of comparison. A system of papers is used whereby certain answers are written on a stub, which is detached, thereby rendering identity with any firm impossible. Most of the questions relating to the output of a business, etc., are dealt with in a collective way."

In case of a family moving away after the first of June, which is the deciding date, before they have been reached by an enumerator, the collector of statistics in the place where they move will secure the required information in the regular way. The enumerator who finds that a person or persons have just moved fills out a card supplied for the purpose which he forwards to Ottawa. This is used as a check for the set of answers turned in by the second officer.

OBITUARY

The Late Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron

This morning at 10.30 there passed peacefully away Mrs. Cameron, wife of Dr. G. Stewart Cameron, Stewart street. She had for some three years been in failing health, and was for more than a year at Saranac Lake, N.Y., for treatment. The most constant and tender care and skilful medical treatment were accorded her throughout her illness, but in vain.

The late Mrs. Cameron was a daughter of James H. West, of Yarker, Ont., where her youthful days were spent. She was educated at Kingston Ladies' College, and on Sept. 22nd, 1897, was married to Dr. G. S. Cameron, and took up residence in Omemee, Ont., whence she removed to Peterborough with her husband some four years ago. Mrs. Cameron was greatly beloved in this city as well as in other places where she had resided, and she leaves behind her many warm friends who will now have only the memory of a beautiful character, and of one who in spite of her illness manifested an almost heroic courage and cheer right up to the very end. She was a member of the Church of England. The sorrowful circumstances of her illness were accentuated by the illness of Dr. Cameron and his removal to the Isolation Hospital from whence he only returned last week.

The funeral will be private on Friday morning.

The Late Mrs. Murray

At the good old age of 87 years, Mrs. Adeline Murray passed away at an early hour this morning at the home of her son, Wm. Murray, 378 McDonnel street.

Deceased was born in the United States in 1824 and lived there until her first husband, the late J. D. Carl, was killed, when the late Mrs. Murray came to Canada and took up her abode with her sister in vicinity of Norwood, where she lived a couple of years. When she married Mr. Murray, of Norwood, they went to live on a farm in that vicinity. Her second husband passed away three years ago and Mrs. Murray moved to Norwood, where she lived for a number of years, coming to Peterborough twelve years ago.

Deceased spent part of the winter at Stirling with her son, J. D. Carl, only returning to the city a few weeks ago. She was not ill until Friday last though she had been declining under the burden of her many years. Friday she became weaker and never rallied. Her family was at her bedside before she passed away, J. D. Carl coming from Stirling last night.

Deceased was an ardent member of George street Methodist church and won the esteem and good will of the large number of friends with whom she was associated.

Those surviving are two sons, J. D. Carl, Stirling and Wm. Murray, of this city, and two daughters, Mrs. Hugh Gibbs and Mrs. Lindsay, both of this city.

The funeral will take place at ten o'clock to-morrow morning from the residence of her son Wm. Murray, 378 McDonnel street, proceeding to Little Lake cemetery for interment. Rev. I. Couch officiating.

CENTRALS DEFEAT SOUTH CENTRALS

Winners Piled up Twenty Three Counters

The Centrals had little difficulty in winning from the South Centrals in a junior Public School league game yesterday afternoon, on the lot of the former. The score was 23—7, and after holding the visitors safe in their first, the Cavanah-Soden brigade showed their heels, and were never in danger of being breasted. The twirling department was handicapped by the wet weather, and issued numerous free passes. The Centrals excelled in batting and earned their victory. Cavanah was generally effective in the pinches and he was given good support by Soden on the receiving end. The South Central used three pitchers, all of whom were inclined to hurl the ball every place, with the exception of over the pan.

The batteries were:

Centrals—Cavanah and Soden.

South Centrals—Williamson, Barclay, Smith and Zealand.

GOLF

The monthly golf competition for ladies at the Golf Club will be held this Friday afternoon at three o'clock sharp.

BASEBALL

Napoleon Lajoie must go out for some new records this year. Records already held by Larry are as follows: In 1901 he led the American League in batting with .422 per cent, the highest average ever made in that league. All season his batting average was never under .400 per cent. In 1908 he accepted 988 chances at second bases, the greatest number of chances ever handled by a major league second sacker in one season. In 1904 Larry cracked out 50 two base hits, a high water mark for doubles in the majors. In 1903 Larry made 43 three base hits, the greatest number of triples ever made by any major league batter in one season. To top this off, in 1905, Larry had a fielding average of .991, the best ever made by a major leaguer at the second sack.

President Lynch, of the National Baseball league, had a heart-to-heart talk with his umpiring staff and ordered them to stop at all costs any talking back by players to umpires. If heavy fines will not suffice players will be reported to Lynch who will promptly blacklist them.

A meeting of the officers and executive of the Peterborough Baseball Club is called for to-night at eight o'clock in Trebilcock's bookstore. Players are requested to turn out for practice at Riverside this evening and to-morrow as soon after six o'clock as possible.

"A Storm In a Teacup."

London, May 17.—Frank Lascelles, master of the Festival of the Empire pageant, in an interview yesterday with reference to the strictures in the Canadian Parliament because of the omission of the battle of the Chateauguay, said that it was a storm in a teacup. The abandonment of the scene, he asserted, was not due to fear of American feeling, but the result of conclusion reached by the Canadian committee that the episode was not typical of Canadian life.

Sun Worshippers' Temple.

Montreal, May 17.—The Sun Worshippers are to have a temple in Montreal. On May 23, it will be dedicated as such by Dr. O. Z. Halish of Chicago, the "master" of the Mazdaznan, or Sun Worshippers. Until such time as a regular temple can be erected in Montreal, services will be held in Mr. Mallett's home. Private classes will also be held there.

TERRIBLE WEAPONS.

Ferocious Knives Wielded by the Natives of Hindustan.

The weapon common to every part of Hindustan, so as to deserve the name of the national arm, is the "katar." This is a broad, two edged dagger, the hilt of which is formed something like an H, the hand grasping the crossbar, which is generally double, while the side bars extend on each side of the wrist.

Some katars are made with five blades which unite into one, but by squeezing together the crossbars diverge like the fingers of a hand when the thrust has been given. Other katars are made in sets of two or even three, of diminishing sizes, the blades of the larger being hollow and forming sheaths for the smaller.

Some of the southern Indian katars, known as "death givers," are immense weapons, nearly two feet long in the blade, and the hilts are a mass of fantastic scrollwork and mythological monsters, the cobra with expanded hood figuring largely.

There is also the "bich'hwa," or scorpion's sting, a doubly curved dagger; the "khanjar," a larger form of the same, and the "peshkabz," or hunting knife. But none of these elaborate weapons has about it the terribly "businesslike" look of the Khyber knife (ch'hura), with its ponderous single edged, tapering blade and plain ivory hilt.—Chambers' Journal.

No Black on Nature's Palette.

Nature uses no black in any part of her work. I will not except the blackberry and the so called black pansy. On a bright, clear day shadows on the snow are pale ultramarine blue; under a blue sky in midsummer the color of the placid lake is cobalt blue and the shadows on the grass are lilac; on a weathered gray boardwalk they are nearly as blue as the sky itself. The palpitating atmosphere of a warm July day lifts the coloring of the landscape to a higher but softer key instead of reducing it with gray, and in the autumn, when the sugar maple's leaves are turned to gold, the shadows on the trunk and every gray rock in the vicinity are tinged with strong lilac. In fine, when the sun shines everything, even the shadow which we are prone to believe is gray, is replete with color.—F. Schuyler Mathews.

Pie In Art.

An artist in Chicago tells of a lady in that town who, with her maid, went to purchase a still life picture for her dining room. She selected a canvas on which were painted a bunch of flowers, a pit cut in two and a roll and was about to pay $25 for it when her maid approached to whisper in her ear.

"Excuse me, ma'am," said the servant, but you are making a bad bargain. I saw a picture very much like this sold the other day for $15."

"And was it as good as this?"

"Better, ma'am. There was a good deal more pie in it."—Lippincott's.

Indisputable Proof.

The Landlady—The gentleman that was occupying the room last, sir, was a literary person. The Possible Tenant—What makes you think he was literary? The Landlady—Why, he had ink on his fingers, sir, an' he went away without paying his board.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Aqueduct Plans Burned.

Montreal, May 17.—Damage difficult to calculate was sustained by the city yesterday morning at 10.30 o'clock, when fire completely cleaned out the stores department of the waterworks, at the corner of St. Charles, Borromee and Lagauchetiere streets.

S. Lafond, clerk and storekeeper, had a narrow escape when the flames burst from the paint room and singed his coat as he sat at his desk, and seven draughtsmen on the upper floor, besides losing valuable instruments, were not able to save the plans and notebooks they were working on. As a result the engineers will have to go over their work and calculations for the new aqueduct again, delaying the work for months. While blue prints of the older works are stored in another place, the plans of the men were engaged upon had not been completed, and no record of them now exists.

The building was valued at $800, and the damage to the contents, valves, watermain fittings, etc., is estimated at $20,000.

Had Eighteen Bridesmaids.

Ottawa, May 17.—In Dominion Methodist Church yesterday afternoon Miss Nellie Marion, daughter of Rev. James and Mrs. Henderson, was married to John Harvie Henderson Scott of Dundalk, Ireland.

The bride was attended by eighteen young girls, all members of her Sunday school class.

Almonte Business Block Burned.

Almonte, Ont., May 17.—One of the finest business blocks in the town was destroyed by fire yesterday morning when the McAdam-Patterson three-storey brick stores and the whole block adjoining was fireswept about two o'clock, the total loss being in the neighborhood of one hundred thousand dollars.

Ran Away From Home.

Sarnia, May 17.—Edgar Watty, a well-dressed and intelligent lad of 15, was arrested yesterday for stealing a ride on the G.T.R. He confessed he was running away from his home in Toronto. He is under detention pending the arrival of funds to send him home.

Sir John Carling's Condition.

London, Ont., May 17.—It was announced yesterday afternoon that Sir John Carling was gradually sinking. After each of his late attacks he has grown weaker until at the present time the increasing weakness is perceptible almost minute by minute.

Berlin will build diphtheria and scarlet fever hospitals and a smallpox shack at a cost of $3,800.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Wheat prices sank under free selling in the last half of the session to-day. The decline was coincident with talk by a prominent operator that crop prospects in this country could hardly be better, and that a fall of 10c a bushel from present values might easily take place. Closing figures were the same as last night to ⅜c down. Final trades left corn ⅛c off to a shade up; oats unchanged to ⅛c to ¼c higher, and hog products less expensive by 10c to 20c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅛d to ⅝d higher than yesterday, on wheat, and ¼d higher on corn. Antwerp closed ⅝c lower on wheat, Buda Pest ½c higher. Paris ¼c higher. Berlin closed unchanged.

THE EDITORIAL CHAIR

Time and time again editors have taken a fling at the people who seem to think that filling an editorial chair is a mighty simple easy matter. Probably the best bit of irony on the matter is the following by Bob Lowery, one of the best known newspapermen in Western Canada;

"Every once in a while some cheerful individual remarks to us, 'Well now that the paper is out, I suppose you can take it easy for three or four days.' How delightful it is that a country editor has nothing to do between press days. (Business runs along automatically. When paper bills come due money drops off the trees with which to pay them. Subscribers vie with each other to see who can pay the farthest in advance. Advertisers beg for additional space. And the way the news hunts up the editor is also pleasant to contemplate.

"There is something strange about the way the news items act. When the paper is out the editor simply goes to his desk and leans back in his easy chair and looks wise and waits for next week's press day. The day before press day the people line up in front of the office door and then they file past the desk and tell him all the news of the week. He writes it up in fifteen or twenty minutes, takes it back and hangs it on a hook. The compositors take the copy and shake it over the type cases, say a few mystic words, the type flies into place, and after a few passes by the foreman the forms are ready for the press again. And the editor goes down and deposits some more money in the bank. It is the greatest snap in the catalogue. Now, if the editor could only do away with press day his job would be complete."

BEAUTIFUL EYES

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes, and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost if the eye brows are thin and scanty; and the lashes are short and lifeless. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. A two weeks' treatment will bring beauty to your eyes that you have never before possessed. By mail, prepaid, in opal boxes, on receipt of price, fifty cents. B. V. NEW WAY TO KEEP A CITY CLEAN

Minneapolis is blazing a new trail. She has found out that no city that wants to be a clean city can neglect its garbage handling, and she has gone to work to set a pace for the rest of us. The real beauty of it, too, is that she has solved the garbage problem—or more nearly solved it than has anybody else, up to date. She may be said to stand first in the list of cities in America in the solution of the sanitary disposal of refuse and other towns are sending delegations to inspect this garbage system. Winnipeg has already patterned after it.

Nearly four years ago this campaign to handle garbage without nuisance was started and to-day it is pronounced an unqualified success. No more are there foul, maggoty garbage cans and all because a city ordinance provides that every housewife shall drain the garbage of all moisture and wrap it in a paper before putting it in the can. This not only insures a clean can but the spaces between the paper allow the air to circulate and keep the garbage from freezing and adhering to the can in cold seasons. In other words, heat, moisture and the fly are all eliminated. Any kind of paper can be used but as a rule there is plenty of wrapping that comes around packages from the grocer and butcher, as well as old newspapers, that the housewife is glad to get rid of. That all this may be done properly the Board of Health issues a printed card of directions for the housewife and advises that it be hung in her kitchen.

But this is only an important introduction of the garbage system which is being adopted by a large city as a unit. When the garbage man comes around to collect his quota, he finds a clean can, he is not faced with wet and dripping refuse, and in cold weather he does not take a pick and batter the can in order to lift the frozen material. He merely loads the prepared garbage into a large steel box, somewhat resembling a bath tub and which has one hundred feet capacity. He hauls this to a central transfer station where the tanks are lifted off the wagon truck by means of an electric hoist, and placed upon flat cars which convey them to the crematory or disposal plant. A train of several cars soon reaches the crematory just outside the city, where the boxes are lifted from the cars by an electric hoist and dumped directly in to the fire. In other words, from the time the garbage is rolled in paper by the housewife until the ashes are taken from the fire of the disposal plant there is no necessity for the refuse to be handled by hand. As the paper used to wrap the packages is as a rule waste material this too is disposed of and the sanitary condition of the cans and reduction in bulk of the waste, because drained, make the necessity for collection less frequent,—a saving in money to the city.—From "Solving the Garbage Nuisance" in June Technical World Magazine.

NASSAU NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Nassau, May 16.—Spring work is practically completed although some of the farmers were held back by a shortage of horse collars, a number of which were missing on last Hallowe'en.

Mr. Herb Girven has succeeded in getting all the cream out this season. Mr. B. Leahy proposes to send his team into town.

Farmers' wives are all busy with their work, part of which is attending to their hatching hens.

The young boys report having seen a curious freak of nature on the farm [illegible] mine.

BREEZY BUDGET FROM JERMYN

Special Correspondence.

Jermyn, May 15.—The second fire to visit Whitwood lumber camp this spring, occurred last week. The fire started in the old Oliver camp, which stood directly behind the new structure. It was owing to the heroic efforts of Capt. Armstrong and his volunteer brigade that the new camp did not go as well. A quantity of wood and a number of rails were also burned. Mr. Fred Fife is to be congratulated on his daring rescue of the pig from the flaming camp. We think he deserves a leather medal from the Jermyn Humane Society.

Mr. Ab. Armstrong and Miss K. English, of Peterborough, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. J. Armstrong.

Miss Mary Fife entertained visitors from Indian River last Wednesday night.

Mr. Sheldon, of Indian River, attended service at Bethel church Sunday.

Mr. F. Fife was sporting a brand new Cleveland wheel Sunday afternoon. It's a pretty sporty wheel.

Mr. Pallin has been brightening up again. The house at Evergreen terrace has received a new coat of paint. Mr. Pallin is to be congratulated on the tasty appearance of his home. Some very fine Southdown sheep have been noticed on the same property. Mr. Pallin gets nothing but the best.

Shearer cheese factory has certainly undergone a great change during the past few months, it being now a neat and up-to-date building.

The first snake of the season was seen at Bethel Sunday morning. We did not see it, but we heard the young ladies scream.

The united A.D.C., of Bethel, the Missionary and the Social Committees all met at the home of Mr. John Borland to arrange for the business of the year in connection with the class and Epworth League. An enjoyable evening was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Pallin visited their son, Percy, at Harwood last Sunday.

Talk about the Indian River natural gas well! Jermyn people are quite sure that the strike will be as hinted in last week's Review, only a pocket of the ordinary hot air. We make this deduction from the theory that where there is a commodity continually in evidence there is likely to be a base of supply. There is certainly, we think, a superabundance of hot air around the River.

BLOOD POISON IN HAND

Zam-buk Works a Wonderful Cure.

Mr. Jas. Davey, of 786 Ellice Avenue, Winnipeg, and a fireman at the Hudson Bay Company's stores, says: A few months since, I was cured of a poisoned finger through the timely use of Zam-Buk. I cut a deep gash across the knuckle on the first finger of my right hand in opening a lobster can. I suffered at the time with the soreness and pain, but had no idea it would become a serious wound. However, in about two days I was greatly alarmed as my whole hand and arm to the elbow became suddenly inflamed, and the finger was much discolored showing signs of blood-poisoning. The pain was dreadful and I was forced to leave off my work and go home.

"The wound on the knuckle had been poisoned through the dust and dirt about the furnaces and boilers. I then decided to start the Zam-Buk treatment, and having first bathed the cut, I applied the healing balm. It soothed the pain almost instantly, and by next day there was a great improvement. The pain was relieved and the inflammation lessened. In a week's time, through perseverance with this wonderful preparation, a complete cure was brought about."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, ulcers, scalp sores, abscesses, piles, ringworm, boils, varicose ulcers, running sores. It draws all poison and foulness from a wound or sore and then heals. Use it for cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries. Zam-Buk Soap should be used in conjunction with the balm for washing wounds and sore places. Excellent too for baby's bath.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. tablet. Post free upon receipt of price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

BENSFORT ITEMS

Disciple of Izaak Walton Had Experience With Inspector

Special Correspondence.

Bensfort, May 15.—Mr. John Riddell and Mr. Walter Fisher, formerly of this vicinity, but now of Peterborough, were in the neighborhood a few days ago interviewing fellow shareholders of a Peterborough milling Co. with the object of acquiring a consensus of opinion from them on the matter, and suggesting the advisability of meeting the demands of the company for working capital required for the operation of the mill. A meeting of all concerned is to be held in Peterborough on Tuesday, May 16, when prospects for the maintenance and disposal of property will be discussed and the matter finally decided by the board.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Dodd and family, of Elgin, Manitoba, are visiting with the former's father. Mr. Dodd has accumulated considerable wealth while farming in the west, and having sold out, is now renewing acquaintances here, before choosing for himself a future home.

The Adult Bible Class held on Wednesday of each week, is being well attended by our young people, and promises to be productive of much good, socially, as well as spiritually.

Miss Louise Waterman, who has been teaching at Trenton, has returned to her home here. Her health has been so impaired as to make it impossible for her to continue her duties.

Escapes from the fish inspector are quite numerous, but none are more worthy of mention than the experience of one of our Lakeview young men a few days ago. The inspector, in this case, chose the land as his battle ground, and our young hero, who is an expert oarsman, was compelled to put his lower limbs into action. He proved himself equal to the occasion, however, and the inspector, evidently thinking he had Tom Longboat or some other great Marathon runner to contend against, soon gave up the chase.

Mr. James Hall was the guest of Mr. Wm. King, of Gore's Landing, the other evening.

Mr. Russel Thompson is working at Mr. John Coward's, of Otonabee.

Mr. Geo. Nurse lost a valuable young horse last week.

THE KING'S HEALTH

Is Safeguarded by Physicians Who See Sovereign Every Day—Other Court Doctors

Though his Majesty happily enjoys the best of health, and is seldom or never in need of a physician's aid, nevertheless so important is the physical well-being of the monarch to the nation, that special precautions are taken to safeguard the King's health and, as far as it is humanly possible, to keep his Majesty free from the attack of any malady.

There are in all twenty-five physicians and surgeons attached to the Royal Household. Of these, however, four are appointed in Ireland and a like number in Scotland; these would, in the event of their services being required, only be called upon to attend the King when the Court was in Ireland or Scotland.

There are three Physicians-in-Ordinary (Sir Francis Laking, Sir James Reid, and Sir Douglas Powell) upon whom devolves the chief responsibility of looking after the King's health; one of the physicians sees the King every day.

The daily interview between the Sovereign and his medical adviser is, of course, a mere matter of form. It takes place after breakfast and generally only lasts a few minutes. The statement, however, that it has taken place is entered up in the diary in charge of the Physicians-in-Ordinary, by the attending physician and the simple fact recorded that "his Majesty continues in good health," the entry being signed by the physician who saw the King.

There is no physician in residence at Buckingham Palace, however, except when the Sovereign is indisposed; but when the King stays at Balmoral, or pays a visit to any of his subjects, or travels abroad, a physician is appointed to travel with the Sovereign, and is included among the members of the Royal suite.

TO MEET IN SECRECY

Overseas Premiers to be Taken Into Government's Confidence

Mr. Harcourt, the Colonial Secretary, announced in the House of Commons during a debate concerning the Imperial Conference that the Government intended to take the Overseas Premiers into their confidence on all matters of International policy.

"We shall," he said, "withhold from them no information that they desire. We shall proffer to them all useful knowledge which may be of service to them in the great service they have to perform. But we shall do in absolute secrecy, and I must warn the House that we cannot be liable to be asked what information we have given and on what subjects.

"It has always been our intention to summon these Prime Ministers to a meeting or meetings of the Committee of Imperial Defence. Of that Committee the Prime Minister is president, and many Ministers, including myself, are members. There they will meet in secrecy and will be able to receive that information."

FOND OF FOOTBALL

King George Admires Rugby—His Majesty a Good Swimmer

Next to shooting and fishing, King George's warmest admiration is reserved by the Rugby code of football. Not long ago he expressed the opinion that Rugby was an ideal game for all ranks of the army and the navy, as it kept the men "fit," taught them to realize the virtues of self-discipline, and to withstand hard knocks. Then again, says "M.A.P.," his Majesty is a capital swimmer, and has actually saved life from drowning. This interesting event took place when, as a youth, he went round the world with his brother in the Bacchante. A bluejacket fel overboard, and King George went in after him and held him up until assistance arrived. In the "boom" period of cycling his Majesty was often seen a-wheel; while cricket, of course, he has constantly played, and continues to follow with the interest of a keen observer.

CHEAP IN THE PAST

Sightseers Could See Early Coronation Processions for a Penny

Those sightseers who cannot afford to pay twenty guineas or more a head for seats on the route of the Coronation procession must wish they had lived a few centuries back.

For at every Coronation the prices have gone steadily up. When Edward I. was crowned, the fee for a seat on the route of the procession was only a farthing. By Richard II.'s time it had risen to two cents. It was 25 cents when Elizabeth came to the throne; on the day of Charles II.'s Coronation, the price had risen to $2.50. One might have had a comfortable seat on William III.'s great day for $1.25, on George III.'s for $2.50. Thousands of seats are being booked just now for from $50 to $100. Even the most moneyed of sightseers must be glad he does not live later.

A SORRY JOKE

Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

It is charged against both the Dominion Government and the Ontario Government that there is a lack of zeal apparent in dealing with the Farmers' Bank failure. The Dominion Government, it is pointed out, denied a commission of enquiry, and the Ontario Government is charged with being afraid to probe too deep because of what may be revealed.

And so long as Dr. Beattie Nesbitt is allowed his liberty, and, especially, so long as no very serious effort is made to secure his return, people will continue to put their own construction on the facts as known. It seems impossible that in these days of telegraph and photograph, of steam and electricity, and of organized detective and police services, a man like Dr. Nesbitt could wholly disappear from the face of the earth if there was any earnest effort to drag him back into the light.

Most of the newspapers that pay any attention to the Doctor's disappearance treat it as a joke; but it is not the kind of joke that ought to be encouraged. There has been already too much "joking" of the same kind in this country. It is fully time that the practice of robbing the public, whether by the wrecking of banks or the actual stealing of public money, was regarded as the serious crime which it is. Failure to so regard it is bringing contempt on the law and disrespect for those who are entrusted with the enforcement of the law.

CENSUS OF STARS

Mr. F. W. Dyson, the Astronomer Royal, speaking recently on a Census of the Stars, said that great as was the value of the census of the stellar population, it would be of far greater value when additional details were given with it. To what questions could they reasonably expect answers were a census to be taken? They could ask in what part of the sky a star was situated. That could be clearly answered of every star that they could see or photograph. They might ask how bright a star was, and an accurate answer could be given of every bright star and an approximate one of all other sorts. In what direction was a star's proper movement? The proper motion of thousands of stars could be given. How fast was a star moving in miles per second towards or away from the sun? The number of stars in respect of which that question could be answered had been rapidly increasing in the last few years, and had reached some thousands. They could also ascertain whether a star was double or single. In 1885 it was calculated that there were 300,000 stars, down to a magnitude of 9 1-2. Now, more than a million for the whole sky had been definitely ascertained as regards their positions and magnitudes, and the number of stars approximately in the sky down to the 14th magnitude was 24 millions. The star with the largest proper motion was quite a faint one. It was discovered in 1897, and it moved 8.7 seconds a year. To make a complete circuit of the sky it would take 150000 years. In the constellation of Orion there were eight bright stars that moved less than one second in a century.

TRIED AT LAST WHEN OTHERS ALL FAILED

And Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured the Postmaster

F. Tippins had suffered for years and spent hundreds on doctors and medicines, but found the real cure at last.

Tippins, P.O., Que., May 16.—(Special.)—If Dodd's Kidney Pills have a more enthusiastic friend anywhere in Canada than Mr. F. Tippins, postmaster here, we would like to hear from him. And Mr. Tippins is always ready to tell why he praises the great Kidney Remedy.

"After recovering from an attack of Grippe," the postmaster says, "I took a pain in my back. I suffered for nearly three years and it kept growing worse all the time. I was attended by all the doctors around but got no relief, and I got so bad I had to keep to my bed. After spending about $200 on doctors and medicines I gave up all hope.

"One day I told my wife to go and get me a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and that would be the last medicine I would try. After using about half the box I began to feel better, so I kept on taking them. When I had taken two boxes I was able to get up, and ten boxes cured me completely."

W. J. BRYAN

Something About the Man Who Will be Here Thursday

Mr. Bryan is a man of splendid appearance, tall, massive and inclined to corpulency, perfectly erect and very light on his feet. His dark hair, just turning grey, grows long at the sides and back, and his fine brow and dark expressive eyes and large mouth and mobile lips mark him as a born orator. His voice is melodious and his enunciation perfectly distinct.

Though he has no seat in the Senate Congress, he is as busy in the lobbies of the rooms and corridors of the Capitol, as the hardest worked legislator. The position of this attractive man who entered politics by accident and stayed there by design, has a very peculiar interest.

It is expected that the Grand will be filled to-morrow night, to hear this wonderful man. We have been looking for him for a long time and such an opportunity as this does not come to Peterborough very often. Ladies are expected and will enjoy this lecture as much as the men.

MR. W. H. DENHAM DEFINES HIS POSITION

Mr. Duggan, nothing has been substantiated beyond the fact that he was instrumental in having Mr. Beck give an address before a number of citizens in Peterborough, and I look on his action in this matter as following out the instructions of the committee, who outlined his duties, one of which was that he was to obtain all information possible, regarding the advisability of purchasing or developing power for the municipality. In obtaining this information he simply did as any other efficient occupant of the Industrial Commissioner's office should have done in order to make good with the organization under whose employ he was. He was keen and zealous in the carrying on of this work, and if there is any blame attached to the fact that the information was made public, it must attach to the Board of Trade. I feel also that certain points in connection with this industrial commissionership are being overlooked, one of which is that Mr. Duggan was in the employ of the Board of Trade and under their control; secondly that the Board of Trade is an organization of citizens, and while not elective, they do to a great extent represent the citizenship of Peterborough and their actions have always been strictly in the interests of Peterborough, and it was not the intention in any way to detract from the dignity of the council, nor to do anything which would embarrass them, but being an organization for the purpose as stated above, I feel that they were strictly within their rights as citizens to obtain any information they liked on any subject, and that looking at the matter in a broadminded way, the council should not have felt ignored.

The fact that the Hydro-Electric report was published has not, in my opinion, prejudiced in any manner the interests of the city, inasmuch as the Hydro-Electric reports were open to inspection by the owners of the several powers mentioned therein, and in addition to this I am informed on good authority that the principal power mentioned, namely, the Otonabee Power Company, had previously obtained a report through Mr. C. H. Keefer, Ross & Holgate, and Mr. W. J. Francis, all of whom are of the highest standing as consulting engineers, and whose opinion will carry equal weight with the engineers working in the interests of the Hydro-Electric, therefore, the keeping secret of the contents of this report would not have aided the Council in any manner in their negotiations for these powers.

I took the matter up with His Worship Mayor Morrow the other day, endeavoring to satisfy myself what there was against Mr. Duggan, in addition to the publication of the Hydro-Electric report, and learned of several criticisms. As the matter now stands, Mr. Duggan tells me that he did not notify the people of Peterborough that the Hydro-Electric report would be read, secondly, that he did not insist on its publication, and thirdly, that the asking for the Hydro-Electric report by the City Council was a continuation of his line of work, in obtaining the information, as the only way in which he could obtain the services of the Hydro-Electric Commission was through an application by a municipality. I advised Mr. Morrow at the time I was in conference with him, that if certain criticisms which were made against Mr. Duggan, could be substantiated, that I would retire from his support, but until they were substantiated, that I felt that I had no reason to change my opinion, as to Mr. Duggan being an efficient and competent official, and well worth the support and confidence of the citizens of Peterborough. For this reason, I have continued to be active in recommending the reconsideration by the Council, feeling that their decision was made on the strength of information, which had been grossly exaggerated, and that a decision on those grounds was unfair to Mr. Duggan, was unfair to the Board of Trade, was unfair to the Merchants' Association, was unfair to the professional interests, was unfair to the Manufacturers' Association, and was unfair to those who had subscribed towards the support of the office for the past year, and also unfair to the ratepayers of Peterborough, who indirectly paid the $2,000 subscribed by the Council. I earnestly believe that on a reconsideration of the question in its full light, that the seeming discrepancies in statements will be cleared up, leaving nothing but the one point of the Hydro-Electric report being made public, and as regards this, I do not feel that the citizenship of Peterborough will find any great fault with the fact of the report having been published as stated above. The information read in this report was open to inspection by the owners of any of the properties, which the report affects, and therefore, the fact of its not being published would not have aided the Council in reaching any better terms with these owners.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am
Yours truly,
W. H. DENHAM.

IT IS A REAL PLEASURE

To us to hear the many kindly appreciative remarks which come to us daily from wearers of these modern glasses. They are certainly the finest produced in any country, and they recommend themselves by whomsoever used. We take a most thorough examination of the eyes and are most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye. In fact these glasses are useless unless the examiner has had sufficient experience in refracting and adapting.

PRESENTATION TO MRS. LANGFEDT

Pearl ane Tourmaline Necklets From Her Friends

On Thursday afternoon, May 11th, some friends called on Mrs. Langfeldt at St. Luke's Rectory, and quite informally presented her with a token of their respect and good-will.

Miss L. C. Revell read the address, which was as follows:

Dear Mrs. Langfeldt,—We have come this afternoon to represent a large number of your friends and well-wishers, who cannot all have the pleasure of being here. We wish to tell you how deeply we regret the fact that you are soon to leave us. And we all unite in the most hearty good wishes for your comfort and happiness in your new home. You have at all times most cordially received your friends, and treated them with rare kindness and hospitality. And to those who were not privileged to know you very well you have always been most courteous and considerate. We ask you to accept the gift which we bring, and can only tell you that it comes from the givers with heartfelt good wishes.

Mrs. Harry Hanwell then presented Mrs. Langfeldt with a case containing a beautiful pearl and tourmaline necklet.

Mrs. Langfeldt was so completely taken by surprise that she was unable to make any formal reply, but assured those present that she most heartily appreciated their kindness, and wished to extend her thanks to all the givers of her lovely necklet.

MARKS BROS. PUT ON GOOD SHOWS

In the presentation of "Brother Against Brother" at the Grand Opera House last night Marks Bros. pleased another large audience. Ernie Marks as Simon Lazarus provided the comedy, which was clean and laugh-producing at all times. The play for to-night, "His Mother's Vindication" is one of the strongest in the company's repertoire, and no doubt will be seen by a full house.

The specialties, which are bright and up-to-date, change at every performance. Something particularly good is promised for to-night. In the window of Merrill & Meredith will be exhibited to-morrow a number of articles worn by Jesse James, the famous bandit, chief of Missouri. They were presented by his brother, Frank James, to Mr. H. Webb Chamberlain, a member of the Marks Bros.' Co.

Mrs. Lidia Cross, 82, a Walkerville spiritualist, has married Thos. D. Nichols—her fourth husband.

"Tag Day" for Ottawa hospitals on Saturday realized $8,664, or about $3,000 less than last year's record.

COST OF PULPWOOD IN CANADA ONLY HALF OF THE U.S. PRICE

United States Tariff Board Reports to Senate.

American Mills Would Suffer by Passage of Reciprocity Pact.

Washington, May 18.—President Taft yesterday sent to the Senate the tariff board's full report of its investigation of the pulp and news print paper industry in the United States and Canada.

Summarized briefly, the report says that a ton of news print paper is made in Canada for $5.35 less than it is made in the United States. The average Canadian cost is given at $27.53, and the average cost in the United States at $32.88. The duty upon a ton of news print paper under the present tariff is $3.75.

Several factors entering into the increased cost of manufacture in the United States are taken up exhaustively in the report. The principal increases are said to be due to the fact that a ton of pulpwood costs nearly twice as much in the United States as it does in Canada, and that many of the American mills have much older and much less efficient equipment than the Canadian mills, which is said to be responsible for a large increased manufacturing cost.

The total average cost of a ton of ground wood pulp in bulk at a mill in the United States is $14.50; in Canada it is $9.56.

The total cost of a ton of sulphite fibre in the United States is $31.39; in Canada it is $26.47. The total materials entering into the manufacture of a news print paper in Canada are shown as $16.89 and in the United States as $22.74. The labor cost of a ton of paper in the United States is shown to be $3.27, and in Canada $3.19. All other allowances for manufacturing costs in the United States are $6.87, and in Canada $7.45. Labor costs in all the items concerned run very closely alike.

One feature of the report shows that the cost of manufacturing news print paper in the United States varies widely. The lowest cost recorded is $24.50 a ton; the highest is $43. From this the tariff board strikes an average of $32.88.

At the Canadian mills the lowest price recorded for producing a ton of newsprint is $24.97, and the highest is $30.18. Average, $27.53.

In accounting for the increased cost of the pulpwood, it is shown at an American mill the average cost for a ton of wood for ground wood pulp is $10.23; in Canada, $5.70. The average cost of the ground wood pulp entering into a ton of newsprint paper in the United States is given at $13.27; Canadian value, $8.49. The average cost of the sulphite fibre in a ton of paper at a mill in the United States is given at $8.63; Canadian valuation, $7.41; manufacturing labor in the United States, $3.75, in Canada, $3.19.

To the question of how far American mills are on an equal basis for competition with the Canadian mills in the matter of equipment, the reports present the answer that the total average of equipment and efficiency is slightly better for Canada than for the U. S.

It is declared that in 44 per cent. of the American mills investigated, a condition exists as to machinery and equipment, which would force them, if obliged to meet really extensive competition from Canada, greatly to curtail other expenses, greatly increase their investment for equipment, or shift to making other kinds of paper.

In treating upon the subject of labor efficiency in Canada, the report says:

"It would seem then that with modern mills, American machinery, American trained managers and superintendents and American skilled operatives, together with lower rates of wages for unskilled men, the Canadian manufacturing labor costs per unit of production in the modern and well equipped mills of Canada would be considerably lower in the U. S.

Tables show, however, that the Canadian labor cost per ton of news print paper is only slightly lower on the average. The 41.5 per cent. of the tonnage reported in the U. S. carries a manufacturing labor cost of less than $3 per ton, while 54.7 per cent. in Canada falls under $3. The total average for the U. S. is $3.27, as against $3.19 in Canada, notwithstanding Canada's advantage in equipment. This indicates that there is greater efficiency and experience in the first-class mills of the U. S.

DOCTOR GAVE QUART OF BLOOD

And Life of Mother of Nine Children is Saved.

New York, May 18.—Weak from repeated internal hemorrhages, Mrs. Sarah Wynn's life has just been saved by Dr. Arthur J. Savage, who allowed a quart of his virile young blood to be pumped into her veins. Dr. Savage, who is a Rhodes' scholarship graduate of Oxford, is a son of the dean of McGill University, Montreal, and was captain of their famous football team four years ago. He is now interne at the Volunteer Hospital here, and a fellow-physician declares that his sacrifice of blood has never been equalled in New York. Dr. Savage declares the matter is nothing to talk about, for he says: "The woman had a husband and nine little kids waiting at home for her. I haven't got a soul that depends on us. It was little enough to do for her."

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN SAYS THE NEW PEACE PACT CLOSES THE DOOR TO WAR

Famous American Addresses Large Gathering of Representative Citizens at the Y. M. C. A. Luncheon — Deals With Work of the Y. M. C. A. — Satisfactory Terms in Arbitration Treaty.

The noon luncheon to William Jennings Bryan at the Y.M.C.A. was attended by one hundred of the prominent business men and leading citizens of Peterborough, and those who were present were privileged in hearing the finest exemplification of the aims and objects, the benefits and advantages of Y.M.C.A. work ever heard in Peterborough. Col. Bryan is a wonderfully smooth and magnetic speaker, driving home his ideas with trip-hammer force by means of striking illustrations and epigram.

He was introduced at the table by J. J. Turner, jr., president of the Y.M.C.A., who spoke briefly of the efforts of the associations in London, Brantford and Toronto, where campaigns to raise funds had resulted most successfully. Mr. Turner said that he hoped the Peterborough association would be able to share in the prosperity that had befallen its sister associations in other cities.

The luncheon was splendidly served. The ladies who waited on the tables and performed their duties so admirably were: Mrs. B. Shortly, Mrs. Fiske, Mrs. Pogue, Miss B. Logan, Miss L. Logan, Miss May Lees, Miss H. Dobbin, Miss Dorothy Dobbin, Miss Laing, Miss M. Scott and Miss M. Eastwood.

Col. Bryan in opening his address, referred to the inception of the idea of making a trip through Canada as the guest of the Y.M.C.A.'s of the various cities. He said he adopted it in the United States in several states, although it was suggested by a Canadian and first carried out in Western Canada. This trip gave him the best of opportunity to meet the strong, representative Christian men of the community, the men who were the moving spirits of every community. He had been enabled to arrive at a complete understanding of the forces at work for the elevation and progress of life, and he was glad at this time particularly to be making a trip through Canada when there was more manifestation of friendship between the two countries than ordinarily. The time was nearly coming when the centenary of peace between the two countries would be celebrated, and Col. Bryan knew of no better emphasis of the good will that exists, than a statement made by the Canadian premier, when the latter said that he knew of a grander conception than one nation covering a whole continent, and that was two nations side by side, without guns on the borders, living in peace and harmony, rivals in nothing but commerce and good-will.

THE ARBITRATION TREATY.

Referring to the arbitration treaty the full text of which he had read only this morning, Col. Bryan remarked that this was an epoch making treaty. "I wish to take this opportunity," said he, "to express my great gratification at the terms of the treaty as set forth. I was anxious not to be disappointed in them. I saw what purported to be the text of the treaty some ten days ago, but I was disappointed because in it there were certain exceptions that reduced the benefits of the treaty to a minimum. In this latest text there is nothing to criticise. It includes provisions that everything must be arbitrated. To my mind, what is of the most importance, it closes the door to sudden hostilities, to a declaration of war in a fit of passion. It provides that all the questions that cannot be settled by negotiation, all the other questions shall be submitted for examination. This practically closes the door to war, because examination takes time, for questions of fact have to be separated from so-called questions of honor, and examination will show questions of honor to be mostly questions of fact. If provision is made whereby we have time to consider war is at an end."

Col. Bryan said that the United States stood ready to negotiate the same treaty with France, and he supposed with all of the civilized countries of the world. The fact that Great Britain and the United States had reached a basis of agreement whereby war possibly and probably would be averted forever, would be a model for the other nations. This was an opportune time for a visit to Canada, and he was glad to be here that the good will might receive an additional impulse to spread over a larger area.

PROTECTION IN THE THEATORIUMS

Montreal Chief of Police in the Fire Question

Montreal, May 18.—Chief Tremblay appeared before the Board of Control yesterday and deposited his report upon the inspections the fire captains have made of all the apartment houses in the city and moving picture shows.

In regard to the apartment houses, the chief states that "in nine cases out of ten the houses are not provided with proper or sufficient protective apparatus against fire, and in many instances there are no fire escapes at all."

The reports show need for improved fire protection in many of the moving picture shows in the city.

TO ADJOURN ON FRIDAY

Finance Minister Makes Announcement in the House.

C.N.R. Bond Guarantee Bill Passes the Commons.

Ottawa, May 18.—The question of the terminals in Montreal and the proposed interchange of traffic with the I.C.R. was a fruitful subject of debate in the House yesterday, when the C.N.R. guarantee bill was under discussion in committee.

Mr. Fielding announced last night that the House would adjourn on Friday. He intimated the program of business that the Government would endeavor to have passed before adjournment. It was as follows: Amendment of the Railway Act, the Banking Act bill, the Quebec Savings Bank bill, the forest reserve bill, the Grain Act, the water carriage bill, the Quebec battlefields bill, the resolution regarding the Japanese treaty, and the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. bill. Besides that he said there was the question of supplying, in addition to several items which the Government desired to have passed for the whole year, and a vote on account for such a sum as would make five-twelfths of the estimates of the year would be asked for. He said he realized that to permit adjournment on Friday such legislation as proved to be contentious would have to be withdrawn, and promised that this would be done.

The leader of the Opposition said the Government could terminate its agreement with the Grand Trunk for the interchange of traffic at any time, but was bound by a ninety years' lease to use the G.T.R. terminals. He declared that the present terminals of the I.C.R. were unworthy of a road which covered sixteen or seventeen hundred miles of territory.

Mr. Graham said he was cognizant of the difficulties of the problem. However, the agreement with the G.T.R. might not be annulled unless it would be in the interest of the country to do so, if at the same time the Government were released from its terminal obligation to the Grand Trunk.

Mr. Graham stated that the route of the railway had been approved from Montreal to North Bay by the Railway Department, but not by the Railway Commission. From Sudbury to Port Arthur the route had been approved by both.

F. D. Monk protested against putting this bill through before adjournment, describing it as a public scandal. He asked if the City of Montreal would have anything to say regarding the terminals.

The procedure, Mr. Graham replied, was for the city and the agreement on the site, and the agreement to be approved by the Railway Board.

Guss Porter insisted that there should be some check on the C.N.R., to see that the railway was not built out of the proceeds of the Government guaranteed bonds.

Mr. Graham contended that no engineer who knew the country would think the road could be built for $35,000 per mile.

Mr. Borden said that might be so, but they ought to have an engineer report upon it.

Mr. Porter declared that the owners' of the C.N.R. had grown wealthy in building their railways out of the bond issues, at least this was the opinion of the country.

F. R. Lalor said the whole thing had the appearance of an enormous election fund being got ready for a general election in the fall.

Guss Porter asked how the Minister knew that the road would cost $50,000 per mile, when the Minister could not state definitely where it would be located.

Mr. Graham said that a large portion of the line had already been approved by the Board of Railway Commissioners. As to the other part it was known approximately where it would run and the nature of the country to be traversed was known.

Mr. Middleboro said there was nothing in the bill to bind the company to carry out its agreement to enter into a traffic arrangement with the I.C.R.

Mr. Graham thought that if the company repudiated its agreement there would be redress in the courts.

Major Sharpe then protested because the guarantee had not been fixed at a certain percentage of the cost of construction.

The Minister said this system had not been altogether satisfactory in the case of the G.T.P. He believed it to be in the interest of the country to name a stated amount.

Mr. Borden said that was a good argument, when reasonable evidence as to the cost of the line is produced, and the Minister replied that he had acted on the advice of the engineers of his Department, although they had not written a formal report.

An amendment was inserted providing that the length of the line guaranteed must not exceed 1,050 miles.

That the terms of the new trade treaty between Great Britain and Japan are not suitable to Canadian conditions and circumstances is the chief reason why Canada declined to adhere to the treaty, is made clear in a return tabled in the Commons last night, setting forth the reasons why Canada proposes to continue the existing treaty with Japan in effect for a couple of years, in order that Canada may have an opportunity to make a treaty of her own with the mikado's kingdom.

Killed by a Train.

Montreal, May 18.—Struck by a G.T.R. train at Valois, near Lachine, yesterday morning, Mr. Harry Hobman, aged 30, was almost instantly killed. He lived in Valois, and was on his way to take a train for the city.

OBJECTED TO AN ENGLISH SIGN

French Villagers Erected One in Native Language.

Montreal, May 18.—The following despatch to La Presse yesterday from Vercheres says: A demonstration unique in its kind in the history of that village has just been held. The postoffice was indicated by a notice bearing the English sign "Postoffice." Our population, wholly French-Canadian, decided to protest against this state of affairs. The pupils of the college and the schools formed in procession before the church and, headed by a banner, assembled in front of the postoffice, under the direction of Brother Regis, singing patriotic songs. A board bearing in gilt engraved letters the words "Bureau de post" was carried by a number of the procession. Father Dulude, the vicar, and the brothers of the Christian schools, also took part in the demonstration.

At the postoffice the whole parish had assembled. Father Baillarger, curate of the parish, welcomed the processionists and delivered a stirring speech in favor of the French language. The French signboard was then placed in front of the postoffice amidst the acclamation of the crowd.

SUFFRAGISTS IN A NEW ROLE

Ask for Commutation of Death Sentence on Woman.

Toronto, May 18.—A letter from the Toronto Suffrage Association has been sent the Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, at Ottawa, earnestly pleading for a speedy commutation of the death sentence passed upon Angelina Napolitano, "since every additional hour spent by her in the condition of terror anticipating her execution on August the 9th, cannot but re-act in a deleterious manner upon her unborn innocent child."

They further held "that the woman's condition at the time at which she committed the crime, aggravated the sense of provocation received."

The association hope that all societies and individuals throughout the country, who feel that unfortunate foreign woman should not suffer the extreme penalty of the law, in some way make their desire known to the Minister of Justice as soon as possible.

WANTS A VOTE ON RECIPROCITY

Missouri Senator is Weary of Prolonged Hearings.

Washington, D.C., May 18.—Senator Stone of Missouri announced yesterday to the Senate Finance Committee, at the hearing on the reciprocity and free list bills, that he would soon press for a vote on reciprocity. He said he did not propose to let the hearings drag along indefinitely.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY AT LONDON

Cigarmaker Shoots His Wife and Then Himself

London, Ont., May 18.—Nathaniel Self, a local cigar maker, shot his wife three times this morning, and then fired two bullets into his own head. Both will die. Self was recently paroled from the penitentiary, where he was serving a five-year term for bigamy.

War Secretary Knox Springs a Surprise on Submitting Draft of Treaty.

Washington, May 18.—The principle of arbitration of practically all disputes between nations, including even questions of vital interest and national honor, assumed vitality yesterday when Secretary of State Knox submitted to the British and French ambassadors at Washington the draft of a convention to serve as a basis of negotiations. The fact that this world movement would be inaugurated with France as well as Great Britain came as a great surprise, as it was generally understood that only the U. S. and England were concerned in the initial steps.

When President Taft enunciated the doctrine of comprehensive arbitration, he received a quick response from Ambassadors Bryce and Jusserand that Great Britain and France were willing to begin negotiations with this country for the peaceful settlement of practically all differences that may arise.

Secretary Knox has evolved a document, which has received the approval of the President and other members of his Cabinet, providing that all differences which are internationally justifiable shall be submitted to arbitration. It expands the scope of the existing arbitration treaties by eliminating the exceptions referring to "questions of vital interest and national honor." This elimination is the real accomplishment of the proposed treaty. The exceptions mentioned are found in the arbitration treaties the world over, and have constituted the chief obstacle to the application of the arbitration principle, for it is hard to conceive of a problem which in its essence cannot be regarded as having a controlling bearing upon "national honor" or "vital interest."

Recognizing that there may be questions of policy and other matters likely to force nations to the brink of war, but which no people would be willing to arbitrate, the tentative draft of the treaty provides that differences that either party consider within this category shall be referred to a commission of enquiry empowered to make recommendations for their settlement. In this connection the treaty will take another advanced step by binding the disputants to arbitration in case the commission of enquiry declares that the controversy shall be arbitrated.

Arbitration in all cases will be a last resort. After the two countries have concluded that it is impossible to settle a dispute through diplomatic interchange, the question will be submitted to a commission of inquiry, charged with the duty of suggesting a way to avoid arbitration if possible.

The United State Senate will not be asked to relinquish its right to pass upon the question of arbitrating each dispute. All agreements to arbitrate will be entered into with "the advice and consent of the Senate," as under existing conventions.

The submission of the drafts to Great Britain and France marks the actual beginning of negotiations. The foreign offices of the two countries will now make an exhaustive examination of the American proposition with a view to suggesting modifications or additions. It is the desire of the administration to complete the negotiations if possible for time for submission to the Senate before adjournment of the present session of Congress.

The vast importance of the proposed treaty has been the subject of discussion in diplomatic circles ever since the idea was suggested. Now that this Government's proposal has been reduced to concrete form, the state department assumes a receptive role, willing to enter into negotiation on the same basis with all countries, signifying a desire to do so. It has been rumored recently that Japan was anxious to join in the negotiations, but so far no formal discussion of the subject between the two countries has occurred.

Circus Camel Attacks Boy.

St. Catharines, May 18.—Tuesday night a small boy was standing watching the camels in the menagerie of Rowe's Circus, before the performance in "the big tent" commenced, when one of the camels seized the lad's shoulder in his teeth and, lifting him, hung on to the boy, who was screaming with terror, until literally forced by the keeper to let go.

The youngster had got too near the camel's hay. His clothing protected him from serious injury.

Catarrhal Deafness

Successfully Treated By

Catarrhozone

Deafness is not so common as blindness, yet thousands are more or less afflicted by it, and their comfort seriously interfered with.

Catarrhal deafness manifests itself but slowly, yet it must be acknowledged that the great majority of those who become totally deaf might have averted this unfortunate condition if they had treated the catarrhal inflammation at its beginning.

The only remedy that can be safely employed for all forms of catarrhal deafness is Catarrhozone. You simply charge the air you breathe with this healing, soothing agent, and by forcing it gently through the ears destroy the germ life which keeps up the inflammation, and at the same time by the soothing, healing action it heals the inflamed surfaces of the middle ear.

CATARRHOZONE, to those who are just a little deaf, and are growing increasingly deaf, is an agent capable of affording the utmost satisfaction, and its use is attended without danger, and as the treatment can be carried on at home no person threatened with the affliction of deafness should postpone one moment in beginning its use.

From every part of the Dominion glowing accounts of the beneficial action it exerts upon catarrhal conditions of the middle ear have been sent in, and you will be resorting to the only method of cure, and the simplest method too, if you try Catarrhozone. Dealers everywhere sell it, 25c, 50c, and $1.00. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

DIFFERENT IDEAS

Here is a case where English and American sentiment and practice are opposed, and where the English have all the best of it. There is a National City Planning Conference now sitting, at Philadelphia, at which two of the chief United States delegates declared that alleys are unnecessary pest spots, that yards are a waste of space and are used only for the accumulation of rubbish, that passageways between houses are generally filled with broken baby carriages, tin cans and torn umbrellas, and that, therefore, all houses in the districts inhabited by working people ought to be built in solid blocks, as yards are of no avail as gardens, for when a man gets home from work he does not care to labor, but wants to rest, says the Montreal Witness. The English delegates, on the other hand, contended that each house ought to be separate, and have a yard in the rear at least fifteen feet long. If given space for gardens, the English delegates were quite sure that working people would cultivate them. The difference in this case is not one of judgment, but one of fact. The working people in England do cultivate their gardens. Cottage gardens are the chief pride and glory of the English countryside. There is scarcely a cottage in the country without its front garden of roses, stocks, asters, sweet peas, geraniums, sun-flowers, holyhocks, five-o'clocks, pansies, and other flowers, all in their season, and a long back garden, where potatoes, cabbages, artichokes, vegetable marrows, carrots, parsnips, peas, beans, and what not are cultivated for home consumption, and there are almost certainly currant and gooseberry and raspberry bushes, and perhaps a few apple or plum or pear trees. Passing through London where the yards of the working people are exposed to the view of passengers by rail, one sees flowers constantly. Talk about the working men not caring to labor in their gardens after working hours! Why, they cannot resist it, and it is a charming sight to see them with shovel or trowel or pruning-knife, or watering-pot in their gardens in the cool of the evening, enjoying themselves in the midst of their families, all of whom, to the youngest, love their gardens and delight to help father in weeding and watering, or hunting for snails and slugs and caterpillars, and such like.

Wherever English people go they carry that love of gardening, and if a plot is cultivated in a mixed-population district, where all other plots are arid, or if a window is seen filled with flowering plants where all others are bare, it is overwhelming odds that an English family is present. The charge made by the United States delegates is, however, too true of United States towns and cities in general, where the back yards of even well-to-do people are very slovenly.

TAFT AS AN ALLY

The utterances of our good friend and ally, Mr. Taft, on reciprocity, have alarmed more than the Ottawa Journal. In England the Canadian Gazette, which usually is a reflection of the Laurier government says Mr. Taft is another Kaiser; he is perpetrating "blazers" and killing reciprocity most effectually on the Canadian side of the border. The Gazette says:

Mr. Taft is a most uncomfortable ally. No sooner had he concluded his pact with Mr. Fielding and Mr. Paterson and the world was being assured how small and natural an affair it was than he blurted out the fact that his policy from the first had been no innocent little reciprocity in natural produce, but the entire abolition of the customs along the boundary, thereby abolishing the British preference and exposing Canadian manufacturers and consumers alike to all the manipulations of American trusts. And, as though that were not enough he now perpetrates the further "blazer" of urging his own people to accept the compact as the only method of overthrowing the policy of commercial reciprocity within the British Empire. "Now or never" he cries in effect: "accept this agreement and you kill preference, reject it, and you will soon find the States of the British Empire making trade friends of each other and not of you." It used to be the role of the German Emperor on successive occasions to give the peoples of the British Empire the stimulus to fresh efforts towards unity. Mr. Taft is now proving to be a good successor to the Kaiser.

The dangers to Canadian relations with the mother country in tying ourselves to the United States trade chariot are manifest, because the threat of abrogating agreements that can be "changed by a single Congress" might be constantly exerted to get more concessions from Canada, especially in manufactured goods. Pressed by forces from within and forces without, the Government would be unable to resist the demand for further removal of restriction, and thus Sir Wilfrid Laurier's avowed determination to get continental free trade sooner or later would be fulfilled.

The London Times says:

Pressure put upon Canada to extend the agreement to manufactured goods would necessarily also mean pressure for the assimilation of her seaboard tariff to that of the United States, since otherwise British goods entering Canada under the preferential tariff could hardly be prevented from finding that route behind the American tariff to the North American market as a whole. The commercial relations of the Empire's self-governing nations would thus be governed by the actions and reactions of American politics, in which the tariff must always play a central part. Canada might in that event desire to give better treatment in some respect to her sister States within the Empire; but her ability to do so would depend upon her power to persuade the framers of the American tariff to do the same.

EDITORIAL NOTES

What rights has a borrowed umbrella, anyway?

They say this summer will be quite warm. As a general rule, summers are quite warm. In fact, it is believed this is a safe prediction.

Our sporting editor announces dolefully that "Evers has gone up wid his nerves." A calamity such as this, ought to be sufficient reason for declaring a national day of mourning.

A thirst for knowledge has driven a Toronto man insane. His hunger for literature was insatiable. He devoured even the dictionary, mentally, of course. This is a very strange case, the first on record, where a man has gone mad hunting for knowledge.

The government intends to start the construction of the Hudson Bay railway this summer. It intends to supplement reciprocity as a captivator by wholesale railroad construction. The West isn't so easily taken in however.

Chairman Levee, of the Toronto Board of Education, won't resign and not having committed an indictable offence, cannot be compelled to resign. Mr Levee is a staunch believer along with President Diaz, in the good old British doctrine, "what we have we'll hold," but he has yet to learn that he is a wise man who knows when to duck out of sight.

Some of the shareholders of the Farmers Bank in Halton county, are reduced to want and beggary in their old age through the smash. But the men who gave that charter, knowing it was fraudulently obtained, walk with heads high and name respected. "It was only a mistake," but the beggars are there just the same.

Hon. Adam Beck has a cigar box manufactory at Hamilton. He uses Cataract Company power to operate it. Hon. John S. Hendrie, a member of the Hydro-electric Commission is the presiding genius of the Hamilton Bridge Works, which has made a long contract with the Cataract Co. Cataract prices to manufacturers seem to have an electrical effect on even hydro men in Hamilton.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 17.—There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, but the prices bid were unchanged to 1½d per quarter lower, while prices on this side were much higher, consequently no business was done from here but advices from New York reported sales of several loads to the continent for nearby shipment. The foreign demand for oats was much quieter, but bids in some instances were in line and sales of a few loads were made. The local market was quiet and steady. The local and outside demand for flour was good at firm prices. Mill feed is still somewhat scarce and in demand.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 17.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market this morning the offerings of live stock were 500 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 1520 hogs and calves. There was no change in the condition of the market for cattle since Monday, prices being firmly maintained at the advance noted on that day. The gathering of buyers was large and as they all wanted some beef to carry them over for the balance of the week the demand was good and an active trade was done. Choice steers sold at 6¼c to 6½c, good at 5¾c to 6c, fairly good at 5¼c to 5½c, fair at 4¾c to 5c and common at 4¼c to 4½c per lb. Cows brought from 3¾c to 5½c, and bulls from 3½c to 5¼c per pound.

Owing to increased supplies of hogs a weaker feeling developed in the market and prices scored another decline of 10c to 25c per cwt. At this reduction the demand from packers was good and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $6.65 to $6.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Supplies of calves continue to come forward very freely and in consequence the tone of the market is weaker and prices are lower, the range being from $2 to $6 each, as to size and quality. The trade in sheep and lambs was more active and prices ruled steady at $4 to $5 for the former, and $5 to $8 for the latter.

At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the supply of live stock consisted of 250 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 550 hogs, and 1200 calves. There was a good demand for hogs at the above decline noted and sales of selected lots were made at $6.65 per cwt., weighed off the cars. The trade in calves was active at prices ranging from $2 to $6 each. The prices realized for the cattle were much the same as those quoted above.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes: "For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifing the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson

Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE AINSLEE MAGAZINE COMPANY

As the months passed and nothing was heard of Kirby the possibility of his being alive and ever claiming the plantation was finally abandoned by Adele. But young Randall, although carefully professing to the contrary, still entertained the suspicion that his enemy lived. In time the thought became so insistent that he determined to quietly set on foot a thorough investigation. Visiting in person the town in which Kirby had fought his victorious battle against death, he eventually succeeded in tracing the physician who had attended the wounded gambler, and by him the boy's suspicions were verified beyond the possibility of a doubt. His intuition was vindicated. Kirby lived and, so far as the doctor knew, was at that moment busily engaged with his chosen profession.

Young Randall returned home, carefully concealing from his sister all hint of his mission. The girl had but lately expressed a desire to visit their aunt in New Orleans, for the plantation was pregnant with memories and sorrows that were fast growing unbearable. Taking advantage of this opportune desire and keeping his real purpose in the background, Tom now suggested that the house be temporarily closed and the long contemplated visit paid.
